TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough consists principally of the towns of Runcorn and Widnes which face each other across an important bridging of the river Mersey and the Manchester Ship Canal. This location, at the centre of the North West's motorway box, provides easy access to the national road network, the regional airports, and the docks.

At the latter end of the 18th Century Runcorn, long considered a backwater, awoke to the industrial age. Its development as a canal port was rapid. Widnes was of little importance until the demand for heavy chemicals accelerated production in the middle years of last century. Chemical manufacture is still paramount but a policy of industrial diversification is being successfully implemented. The large brewing complex on the Whitehouse Industrial Estate, Runcorn, is a notable example. Astmoor Estate, also at Runcorn, has a wide range of production lines: from pepper and spice, to carpets and kidney machines. Runcorn New Town has attracted much attention at home and abroad: at its heart lies Shopping City. This enclosed shopping centre and office complex is linked to all parts of the town by the unique Busway. In Widnes the award-winning West Bank development is urban renewal at its best. From its inception the human-factor has been given first consideration but at the same time the total environment is receiving attention.

Within easy commuting distance the parishes, which form part of the Borough, have retained their rural attraction. Daresbury was the birthplace of Lewis Carroll; Hale is a picturesque village with old world charm.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,740.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area is predominantly rural in character and stretches some 40 miles from the county boundary of Cleveland in the north to the York boundary in the south. It includes the attractive and thriving market towns of Bedale, Easingwold, Northallerton, Thirsk and Stokesley, each providing a focal point for villages and hamlets in the rural hinterland.

Good communications both by rail and road and easy access to regional amenities make the district attractive to residents and light industry alike. Austin Reed and York Trailers are household names to be found on factory premises in the area.

The scenery is as attractive as any in the country. The eastern fringe, represented by the Hambleton Hills from which the district takes its name, is within the North York Moors National Park; to the west the Yorkshire Dales National Park is no more than 10 miles distant.

TOPOGRAPHY

Harlow is an attractively planned new town lying on the borders of Essex and Hertfordshire about 25 miles from London. It was designated a new town in 1947 and development has since proceeded steadily so that the provisions of the original Master Plan are now complete.

The town is based on a plan of self-sufficient neighbourhoods with school, public house, shops, shops and residents' committee room all within walking distance. The neighbourhoods are separated by landscaped wedges which bring the countryside within easy reach of every resident. Over 19,000 new houses designed in differing styles, landscaped with flowering shrubs provide a pleasant and varied home environment. The overall planning concept of the town is unique amongst new towns and many visitors and students of town planning from overseas come to Harlow every year to see how successfully the original concept has been implemented.

Two large industrial estates on the perimeter of the town provide a wide variety of employment with special emphasis on electronic engineering. An Information Technology Centre sponsored by the Council has recently opened. Smaller industrial areas in the neighbourhoods and shopping centres create additional sources of employment.

The town centre with a new indoor shopping complex, offers a full complement of shopping facilities, including an open air market four days a week. Help and information is provided at the Advice Centre, close by the market.

The educational needs of the town are catered for with a fully comprehensive system of secondary and tertiary college education. Other medical services include a 450 bed hospital seven community clinics and an industrial health service.

Harlow offers outstanding facilities for the elderly with 23 warden assisted housing schemes and two social and recreational day centres for retired residents. At the opposite end of the age spectrum, an historic house at Kingsmoor has been converted into a family and community centre.

All kinds of leisure pursuits are catered for. The Harlow Sportcentre has an indoor sports hall, squash centre and ski slope, whilst nearby there is an indoor heated swimming pool. There is also an 18 hole golf course and playing fields for tennis, cricket and football, with recreation centres for indoor games throughout the town. The Town Park extends to 164 acres from the Town Centre to the River Stort which in addition to delightful walks, putting green, adventure playground, pets corner, cafe and paddling pool, hosts open air concerts for young and old throughout the summer.

Arts and entertainment are catered for at the dance hall, cinema and Playhouse Theatre and Arts complex in the Town Centre. A renovated Georgian house in village surroundings houses the town's museum and the only remaining building of the historic Mark Hall estate—the stable block—has been converted into an annex for the Museum to house the internationally famous collection of clocks built up by John Collins of Old Harlow.

In just 30 years Harlow has grown into a prosperous attractive town and become the centre for a wide area around in West Essex and East Hertfordshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

Harrogate is centrally situated in Great Britain being approximately equidistant from London/Edinburgh (210 miles) and the East/West coasts (60 miles). Formerly an important spa town, much of the grandeur and elegance of this period has been retained thanks to the broad tree lined streets amidst lavish public buildings. The "Stray"—an area of 200 acres of immaculate lawns—encircles the town and is protected from development by the Enclosure Act of 1770. The Royal Baths Assembly Rooms were built in 1837, Harrogate Theatre in 1900 and the beautiful 1,300 seat Royal Hall in 1903. More recent developments have included the creation of six exhibition halls now providing over 120,000 square feet of space interlinked with the Royal Hall. Opened in December 1981 is the latest £ multi-million extension to provide a 2,000 seat International Concert/Conference Auditorium, a banqueting hall for 1,300, several shops, a major store, two levels of underground parking and a luxury hotel all interconnected with the existing Conference/Exhibition Centre which is presently utilised by over 500 major events a year.

Variety abounds throughout the Harrogate District with the ancient Cathedral City of Ripon steeped in heritage and tradition. Each night at 9.00 pm the City Hornblower "Sets the Watch" by sounding his horn at the four corners of the Obelisk in the Market Square. The picturesque market town of Knaresborough nestles on the banks of the River Nidd and provides a wide range of facilities for residents and visitors alike. Stately Homes, Castles, Abbeys and places of interest abound and the atmospheric beauty of the Yorkshire Dales continues to attract ever increasing numbers of visitors in addition to furthering the District's reputation as a highly desirable residential area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of Hart District covers some 53,146 acres (about 84 square miles) of North-East Hampshire, being for the most part at a height of around 200–300 feet above sea level, although the land rises gently to around 500–600 feet along the southern boundary where the District is bordered by the North Downs.

The District is criss-crossed by three small rivers and their various tributaries, which eventually combine in the north to continue their journey together to join the River Thames in Berkshire.

The little river Hart, from which the District takes its name, flows north through the centre of the District, while the river Whitewater, which has its spring head in the Parish of Greywell, flows north through the western side, to be joined by the river Hart in the Parish of Bramshill. The river Blackwater, the largest of the three rivers, forms the county boundary with Surrey in the north-east and with Berkshire in the north.

The Basingstoke Canal also winds its way through the centre of the District, from Greywell in the west until it leaves Hart at Hawley in the east to continue its way to Aldershot and beyond.

Hart District enjoys excellent road and rail communications as it is centrally bisected east to west by both the M3 motorway and the main Southampton–Waterloo (London) railway line, with stations at Fleet, Winchfield and Hook. Junction 5 of the M3 is in the west of the District between Hook and Odiham and Junction 4 is nearby at Frimley, just outside the borders of Hart. The main A30 road from London to the West Country also runs through the north of the District, and the M4 motorway is only a short distance away at Reading. Heathrow Airport, too, is a mere 45 minutes car journey away.

The two main urban centres are both in the east of the District, being the small towns of Fleet and Yateley. However, the built-up areas account for about 10% of the total land area of the District, and in contrast the western side consists mainly of agricultural land which takes up some 40% of the District and provides for the main industry of farming.

There are also large tracts of land owned by the Ministry of Defence which account for some 10% of the area and the Forestry Commission owns land amounting to some 6%.

A number of areas within the District have been designated under the National Parks and the Countryside Acts as Sites of Special Scientific Interest. These include Fleet Pond, Yateley Common, Hazeley Heath and Greywell Fen.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Hartlepool is the northern most district of Cleveland County with an area of 36 sq. miles. The major urban centre is the town of Hartlepool but there are five attractive villages in the extensive rural area to the west of the town which eventually links with Durham County. More than half of the district is rural.

The town has medieval walls which are still standing and there are also two churches which date back to the 11th and 12th centuries.

The Gray Art Gallery and Museum in Hartlepool is situated in what was originally the private house of Hartlepool's biggest shipbuilder, Sir William Gray, while the Maritime Museum deals with the town's long history of fishing, shipbuilding and marine engineering.

The Borough's substantial coastline includes the Hartlepool docks which provide a complete range of deep port facilities for vessels up to a maximum of 20,000 tonnes. There are roll-on/roll-off and container facilities. Ideal for servicing British, European and World markets.

Recently restored by local craftsmen is HMS Warrior, the first and last armoured battleship afloat. The ship is now berthed alongside other ships of renown in Portsmouth, namely the Mary Rose and HMS Victory. The Borough is proud of its developing expertise in the refurbishment and repair of vessels such as HMS Warrior, and has acquired further ships for renovation, namely HMS Foudroyant, HMS Minerva and the PSS Wingfield Castle a Hartlepool built paddle steamer.

The town's industrial base has undergone a major change and the Borough now has a varied industrial base in such activities as electronics, textiles, food processing, and medium and light engineering. The town has Development Area and BSC Opportunity Area status and an additional incentive for prospective developers is the Enterprise Zone status which was conferred in 1981.

Hartlepool is well served by an excellent road system with dual carriageways reaching to the centre of the town, providing ready access to the A19 and A1(M). By air, London Heathrow is only 40 minutes from Teesside Airport while Inter-City Rail services reach London in less than three hours.

The coastline also includes extensive sandy beaches and Seaton Carew is a popular resort. Sea water sports such as skiing, yachting and fishing are well catered for and are extremely popular. Other amenities in the town include two 18 hole golf courses, international standard swimming pool, a nationally used indoor bowling centre and a wide variety of outdoor sports facilities including two all weather pitches. The town has a professional football club and there are three major rugby clubs and two cricket clubs each with their own ground and social facilities.

The Local Authority has recently undertaken a massive - redevelopment programme to modernise the Shopping Centre which was opened in 1972.

A £150 million investment is currently being undertaken which will provide a new marina for the town. This will include housing, hotel, commercial, marine and business developments.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hastings is a first-class health and pleasure resort on the Sussex coast and is one of the Cinque Ports. The town has shown considerable municipal enterprise and operates an entertainments undertaking which includes the White Rock Theatre (with seating for 1,300) providing entertainment ranging from performances by world-renowned symphony orchestras to famous summer concert parties; public baths, a Marina Pavilion, St. Clement's Caves, Hastings Castle, an 18-hole golf course, a sports centre incorporating both wet and dry facilities and beach chalets. The promenade is three miles long and is partly double-decked with municipal underground car parks holding approximately 340 vehicles. A municipal multi-storey car park provides parking for 500 cars in the town centre. The town welcomes a number of conferences each year.

The Council owns Alexandra Park (100 acres), together with seven smaller gardens totalling 51 acres. White Rock Gardens contains eight excellent bowling greens, on which the famous Hastings Bowls Tournament takes place annually. There is also a new indoor bowls pavilion, a Conference Hall and excellent tennis facilities (both grass and hard courts), together with several putting greens. Hastings is also noted for its annual International Chess Congress. Education is now administered by East Sussex County Council. A post-war feature has been the development by the Council of trading estates, providing facilities for light industry in the town. As a result several well-known firms now operate factories locally.

A Town Development Scheme accommodating initially 15,000 and ultimately 18,000 persons is being implemented. About 5,700 dwellings will be erected and the needs of an expanding community for schools, libraries, social welfare, health, community and other services will be met. Additional employment is provided for on two employment areas. Factory sites of varying sizes are now available for development. A good standard of amenity and design is intended.

The Council owns some 500 acres of public open space in a four-mile stretch eastwards from the town which is designated as the Hastings Country Park. It includes some of the finest cliff scenery in South-East England. These include Fairlight and Ecclesbourne Glens and The Firehills. In addition the delightful Sussex countryside around the town, rich in historical associations, provides much of interest to resident and visitor alike.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough, some 13,000 acres in extent, nestles comfortably between the sea and the South Downs in the south east corner of Hampshire on the border with West Sussex.

The shore line which includes Hayling Island runs from Bedhampton to Emsworth abounds the waters of Langstone and Chichester harbours and the Solent which provide some of the best sailing and sea fishing in the country in an area officially designated as one of outstanding natural beauty.

The centre of the Borough is the old town of Havant. In former times Havant was renowned for its parchment industry but today it has many diverse light industries.

In spite of the rapid growth of the area and the demands on land made by housing and industry the rich coastal soil still supports a substantial agricultural community and much of the district remains delightfully rural.

There are speedy rail links to London and other centres in the south and from neighbouring Portsmouth there are regular and frequent ferry and hovercraft services to the Isle of Wight. Two trunk roads pass through the district—the A3 which follows the old London to Portsmouth coach road and the A27 coast road from Folkestone to Honiton.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hereford is a city standing upon the ancient border dividing the English from the Welsh and had an assured place in history over 1000 years ago. A city because it is the setting of a cathedral, and so the seat of the 104th known Bishop of the diocese, it also enjoys distinction as a borough, a term descriptive of the community status achieved through long centuries by grants from the crown of rights and privileges expressed in a series of royal charters. Hereford is rich in a fine series of such documents ranging in date from the first year of the reign of Richard I in 1189 to the year of Local Government reorganisation in 1974.

Distinguished by the Council for British Archaeology as one of 51 British towns of national historic significance, twentieth century Hereford remains a place of influence. A most picturesque place with an all-absorbing history, it is also the social capital, the county town and market, shopping and employment centre for the great rural area extending far beyond Herefordshire and the Wye Valley as far as the Welsh coast. Long the centre of many traditional agricultural industries, not least the world's largest cider concern, it is keeping abreast of the times with one of the largest and most modern works in Europe for the manufacture of nickel alloys.

World headquarters of the Hereford "white face", a breed of cattle to be found in drought or wet from the Atlantic to the Tropics, the city owns a livestock market with an annual 'throughput' of 467,128 animals, which makes it the busiest municipal market in Gt. Britain. This is complemented by a large abattoir, and one of the largest poultry processing units in Europe. The racecourse is also owned by the city as are many parks and open spaces, including King George V Playing Fields, the site of the swimming baths. These replace the baths in Edgar Street where the old building has since been converted to a fine theatre, 'The New Hereford Theatre'. A 9 hole par 4 golf course has been completed at the racecourse together with a Leisure Centre providing a wide range of leisure and sporting activities and a 400m Spurtan Athletics track and a floodlit all weather sports area on a nearby site alongside the A49 road to Shrewsbury. Music and the Arts are well represented due in part to the stimulus of the Cathedral and the triennial Three Choirs Festival, shared in order with Gloucester and Worcester.

In addition the City provides and maintains the City Art Gallery and Museum, the Churchill Gardens country house museum, the Hatton Gallery displaying works by Brian Hatton together with a furnished 17th century black and white timbered house known as the Old House in the City Centre.

Most other activities, sports and pastimes are well catered for, more often than not by one or other of an exceptionally large number of energetic amateur clubs and societies.

The first recorded Bailiff held office in 1268 and the first recorded Mayor in 1382. The 609th known holder of the office of Mayor, entitled to the special style of "The Right Worshipful", was installed in May 1990.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is pleasantly situated in South Hertfordshire bordering Greater London. There are four main townships, Bushey, Potters Bar, Radlett and Borehamwood. Beyond these main centres of population lies some of the loveliest countryside in the South of England, sprinkled with small rural communities.

Communications are excellent—the A1, A41, M1, M10 and M25 are all close at hand and the townships are served by commuter services into Euston, Kings Cross and St Pancras Stations. Potters Bar is also served by British Rail's overground/underground service to Moorgate in the heart of the city.

Industrial life is largely confined to the southern part of the Borough. Industry and commerce have expanded tremendously since the 1950's and tend to be orientated towards new technology. Apart from farming, the oldest residual industry is the film industry with the studio belonging to Goldcrest Films, a wholly owned subsidiary of Brent Walker plc.

TOPOGRAPHY

Sometimes referred to also as the Dark Peak, the Borough forms the northern part of the Peak District and derives its name from the high moors and the dark, hard gritstone which are its main physical features.

The Borough extends from Buxton (Derbyshire's premier holiday resort) in the south to Glossop and Tintwistle in the north; from the Cheshire boundary in the west almost to Sheffield in the east. Within the High Peak are to be found not only the towns of Buxton, Glossop, Chapel-en-le-Frith, New Mills and Whaley Bridge but also numerous small villages. The High Peak contains some of England's finest scenery; the high brooding moors of Kinder Scout and Bleaklow, the broad sweeping valleys at Hope and Edale, the charm and beauty of the Goyt Valley, and the man-made expanse of water at Ladybower and Derwent.

TOPOGRAPHY

This is an attractive Borough consisting of a well balanced mixture of 115 sq. miles of urban and rural areas with a total population of approx. 94,000 of whom over 50,000 live in Hinckley and immediate areas of Burbage, Earl Shilton and Barwell, with the remainder spread amongst some 37 villages and hamlets.

Although the borough borders the outskirts of the City of Leicester in the north east, Hinckley itself lies between Coventry and Leicester being less than 30 minutes drive from each.

Excellent placed in relation to the national transport system, well situated for rail travel, and within 20 miles of East Midlands and Birmingham International Airports.

Hinckley has an excellent modern public library, a large indoor leisure centre; and there are also opportunities for taking part in a wide range of outdoor leisure activities in the borough including rugby, football, cricket, squash, tennis, bowls and golf at the many well-established and successful sports and social clubs.

The rural parts of the borough, besides consisting of a vast area of attractive countryside, also contain a wide variety of recreational pursuits, such as the Mallory Park Racing Circuit, Twycross Zoo for animal lovers, the Ashby Canal for those who enjoy messing about in boats or perhaps fishing—another well-known fisherman's joy is Thornton Reservoir; then there is Bosworth Country Park for relaxation and picnicking, Shackerstone Steam Railway for the enthusiast and the Bosworth Battlefield visitor centre and country park for those with a sense of history.

TOPOGRAPHY

Holderness Borough is geographically defined by the North Sea to the east, the River Humber and its Estuary to the south and the City of Kingston upon Hull to the west. Its centre of administration is in offices at the village of Skirlaugh.

The area is a largely agricultural district, within easy reach of the commercial and employment centres of Kingston upon Hull and Beverley. In recent years much residential development has taken place in its selected settlements and adequate land has been allocated for the accommodation of the anticipated population increase of the Borough and the adequacy of industrial land is constantly under scrutiny.

Within the Borough, on its boundary with Kingston upon Hull, is situated the 250 acre BP Saltend Industrial Complex, the largest Acetic Acid manufacturing plant in Europe where about 30 other petro-chemical products are manufactured and some 2,000 people are employed.

Large areas of land in the Borough on the eastern fringe of Kingston upon Hull have been allocated for industrial purposes, the sites being close to the major passenger and cargo docks and are attractive to those processes needing access to the estuary.

On the Borough's 30 mile coastline are the busy seaside resorts of Hornsea and Withernsea and the ancient town of Hedon (an outstanding Conservation Area) is situated north of the Humber, close to the City of Hull.

Its farmland of particularly fine quality is noted for its capacity to grow fine cereal and rootcrops and for sustaining a very large pig rearing industry. The natural assets of the Spurn Peninsula and its Nature Reserve, the Hornsea Mere with its good sailing and boating water, its miles of unspoilt beaches, together with the magnificent Stately Home and Country Park of Burton Constable, make the Borough a most attractive living and working environment.

The road communication system out of Humberside was much improved with the opening of the M62 and, the completion of the Humber Bridge. The improved access to the south increases the potential of this Borough.

Deputy Mayor's annual allowance £480.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hove is a modern residential seaside town on the Sussex coast immediately adjoining Brighton. Extensive seafront lawns backed by wide avenues terminate at the western end with the industrial area surrounding the eastern arm of Shoreham harbour. Behind a narrow coastal plain the town extends onto the gentle southern slopes and into the valleys of the South Downs which afford protection from the north. There are notable elegant Regency terraces and squares in the south eastern part of the Borough. The parks and pleasure grounds are of particular interest especially a twin dialled floral clock, scented garden for the blind, and woodland walks. Sporting facilities include the King Alfred Leisure Centre (to which modern leisure and competition swimming facilities have recently been added) and the Portslade Sports Centre, the Sussex County Cricket Ground, League football, Greyhound Stadium, two golf courses and model yachting lagoon, as well as tennis courts, bowling greens etc.

The town is administered from a modern town hall comprising public halls, meeting rooms as well as offices and car park.

TOPOGRAPHY

The landscape of Huntingdonshire District ranges from the low lying Fenland in the north-east to the river valleys and gently rolling hills of the west. The Fenlands are a flat almost treeless area only a few feet above sea level where previous marshes have been drained to provide some of the most productive arable land in the country. The uplands to the west, which cover about two-thirds of the District, contain the more traditional pattern of pastures, meadowland and hedgerows. The District reaches its highest point of 257 feet above sea level (78 m) near Covington, close to the boundary with Bedfordshire and Northamptonshire.

The River Great Ouse runs through the south-eastern quarter of the District and by this important waterway are sited four of the District's five main towns—Huntingdon, Godmanchester, St. Ives and St. Neots, the fifth being the interesting fenland town of Ramsey.

TOPOGRAPHY

Ipswich, situated on the River Orwell some 10 miles from the river mouth, is the county town of Suffolk and is an expanding industrial and commercial centre. The Council owns industrial land which is available for leasing. The local authority has encouraged and assisted large insurance companies and brokers to locate new offices in the town in recent years. Major shopping developments are being planned for the town centre, as are housing, industrial and commercial developments on out-of-town centre sites.

Extensions to the port have recently been completed to cope with expanded trade with Europe. The Civic Centre Complex comprises a unique underground spiral car park, local Police Headquarters, Crown Courts, Magistrates' Courts, and a twelve storey administration block. The modern Wolsey theatre opened in Oct 1979.

The former Corn Exchange, which is linked to the Town Hall, has been converted to an Entertainment, Art and Conference Centre, a National Tourist information office is also based in the Town Hall and various publications are published by the Council. Two major sports centres have been provided jointly with the County Council one with an all weather pitch and athletics track was opened in April 1982. The Council has also provided two sports and community centres in the northern and eastern areas of the town. In June 1984 The Crown Pool Complex was opened. The complex contains a leisure pool with wave making machine, a learners pool and an international short course competition pool.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Kennet District includes some of the most attractive landscape in southern England, and a large part of it comes within the North Wessex Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

The district extends southwards to include areas of Salisbury Plain, and to the north the Marlborough Downs. These wide tracts of upland contain a varied range of scenery and provide extensive views of the picturesque Kennet Valley and the Vale of Pewsey.

The pleasant old market towns of Devizes and Marlborough have much to offer. In addition to their historical backgrounds and an abundance of buildings of historical or architectural interest, they both provide good shopping and other facilities. Light industry offers employment in both towns.

Throughout the area there are many delightful villages, a large number of which are designated as Conservation Areas.

A full range of public services are available in all but the most isolated parts and a comprehensive road network links the whole area. The M4 motorway from London to South Wales skirts the northern part of the district, and the M5 motorway is easily reached.

Pewsey and Great Bedwyn have railway stations, and along with nearby towns give fast train services to London and other towns.

A considerable number of first-class cultural, recreational and leisure facilities already exist or are planned, and further expansion seems likely. The Kennet and Avon Canal, Savernake Forest, The Ridgeway Long Distance Path, to mention but a few, are included among the many outdoor facilities available. The area is rich in prehistoric remains with the biggest concentration being in and around Avebury. Further Education courses at Devizes, Marlborough, Pewsey and other centres cover a wide range of interests.

The district has many tourist attractions and is an excellent centre from which to tour Wiltshire and the adjoining counties. There are Tourist Information Centres in Devizes, Marlborough and Avebury.

Twinings. Ohio (USA). Lahnstein (W. Germany). Wilbarston: Weinhar (W. Germany). Desborough: Neuville de Poitou (France). Rothwell: Droue (France). Burton Latimer: Altendiez (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough covers the largely rural northern part of the County lying on either side of the A6. The coming of the M1 and M6 motorways and the continuing expansion of the East Coast ports, coupled with the M1/A1 road link on which work started in May 1989 has further emphasised the national significance of the area as a distributive centre. Apart from the mainly late 19th Century town of Kettering with its beautiful parish church, famous pleasure park and recently extended and refurbished town centre shopping precinct, the Borough includes the three small and charming towns of Burton Latimer, Desborough and Rothwell each with its distinctive attractions. There are twenty-three ancient stone built villages, several of which enhance the natural beauty of the Welland Valley.

The employment base is broad. Notable products include breakfast cereals, quality clothing and footwear, printing machinery and computer software. In the rural areas, agriculture predominates, as well as the growing tourist trade.

Attractions in the Borough include Boughton House and Wickstead Park, Kettering and two ancient monuments, the Queen Eleanor Cross at Geddington and the Triangular Lodge at Rushton.

The Council has designated 22 conservation areas throughout the Borough.

TOPOGRAPHY

West Norfolk with its 3 towns and 98 parishes covers about 600 square miles with some of the most attractive and agriculturally productive countryside in Britain. Considerable natural growth is taking place, making it one of the fastest growing areas in the country.

King's Lynn is the main town with a pedestrianised shopping centre serving a catchment population of around 165,000. It is also recognised as being one of the most important towns in England from an historic and architectural point of view.

A music festival of international renown is staged annually during the last week of July.

The Port of King's Lynn plays an important part in the industrial life of the area. The town's links with the former GLC have resulted in considerable industrial expansion and this continues while new initiatives have been taken in Downham Market and Hunstanton.

The district has much to commend it as a holiday and tourist area, and, therefore, such trade is an important part of the local economy. Apart from historic buildings in King's Lynn there are many beautiful churches, charming villages, castles and other notable buildings.

The coast offers swimming, sailing, yachting, water ski-ing and fishing. The popular resort of Hunstanton has a wide range of small hotels and guest houses, caravan and camping sites, plus extensive golden sandy beaches. The 'Oasis' Leisure Centre and Princess Theatre, both operated by the Borough Council, are among other holiday/leisure attractions in the town. Eastwards from Hunstanton the coastline is designated an area of outstanding natural beauty.

The royal estate of Sandringham, with its house and gardens open to the public on certain days, museum, country park and nature trails, is a great asset to West Norfolk.

Mayor's annual allowance: £5,000; Deputy Mayor: £1,250.

TOPOGRAPHY

The only major city in the predominantly rural Humberside region, Kingston upon Hull has the Humber estuary to the south and open country on all other sides with easy access to the coast to the east and north-east.

The city received its first charter in 1299, was incorporated in 1440 and became a county borough in 1888. Since 1914 the Chief Citizen has been styled Lord Mayor, and this title has been retained along with city status. Also, the Council has a scheme for the election of Honorary Aldermen.

Today, Kingston upon Hull is one of Britain's major industrial and commercial centres and ranks among the country's leading seaports. A high proportion of the total docks traffic is handled by modern unit-load techniques and, in addition to general cargo operations, nightly car-ferry services to/from Rotterdam and Zeebrugge carry approximately half a million passengers a year.

There is a great variety of industry, with many of the larger factories owned by leading companies of international standing. Service industries are also widely represented and successful efforts are being made to expand the economy not only by introducing new enterprises but also by increasing tourism, leisure and conference business.

Shopping facilities are extensive and diversified, the city serving a far greater population than its own in this respect, especially since the opening in 1981 of the Humber Bridge—the world's longest single-span suspension bridge—just to the west of the city.

The council is represented on various outside bodies including the Hull and Goole Port Health Authority and the Humber Bridge Board. The City Council manages the only municipally owned telephone company in the country. Extensive parks and recreation grounds, landscaped areas and floral displays along main thoroughfares are attractive features of the city. The City Hall is the area's principal venue for concerts, exhibitions and conferences. The City Council is recognised as an Archive Authority under the Local Government Act 1972 and its repository has been appointed as a place of deposit for Public and Manorial records. The Town Docks Museum contains one of the most comprehensive collections of shipping and whaling material in the country.

As an Inner City Programme authority the Council is working on the renovation of the Old Town Area. New housing, shopping, restaurant, hotel and leisure facilities are all among the developments which have been finished or are in progress. Many of the schemes, such as the conversion of the riverside warehouse into flats, make use of old buildings which are essential to the character of this part of Hull. The Town Docks Scheme has made use of defunct docks for a new marina which has added vitality to the area and forms a natural extension of the development that is already taking place in the Old Town.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough covers approximately 11,850 acres at the easterly entrance to the city of Bristol. Like other urban fringe districts it is a major growth area for the city, to be served by a new motorway junction and the Avon Ring Road. One half of the district is countryside protected by the Green Belt and stretching into the River Avon valley and the Cotswold AONB. The district is a popular residential area for people who work in Bristol and extensive housing developments are under construction. Local industries include printing, furniture, engineering and the manufacture of food stuffs and brushes. Historically the district has strong associations with the religious revival of the 17th and 18th centuries and at Hanham Mount a symbolic beacon 80ft. high shines to commemorate the use of the mount by George Whitefield and John Wesley for their open air meetings.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of Lancaster City Council includes the northern and most beautiful part of Lancashire. It is a large shire district, with a population of over 130,000.

Lancaster is an ancient borough with Charters going back to 1193. The present authority came into being on the 1st April, 1974, the city taking over the functions of five former authorities—Lancaster City, Morecambe and Heysham Municipal Borough, Carnforth Urban District, Lancaster Rural District and Lunesdale Rural District. Thus, in addition to the historic city of Lancaster, the district includes the thriving holiday resort of Morecambe and Heysham (with large seasonal influx of population), the busy seaports of Heysham and Glasson Dock, together with a large part of Morecambe Bay. The district borders two National Parks and there are many Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, particularly around Silverdale, in the Lune Valley and on the moorlands which stretch to the Trough of Bowland and the foothills of Ingleborough.

Today, Lancaster is the industrial, business and educational centre of north Lancashire. The inter-war years saw the establishment of man-made fibre production while some of the older industries date from the 18th Century, when Lancaster was a principal west coast port, trading with the West Indies. One such firm is the famous furniture manufacturer of Gillow. There are four modern industrial estates, White Lund, Heysham Industrial Park and Lancaster Industrial Park owned by the City Council, offering fully serviced industrial land for sale or lease, and a private development by the River Lune, close to the city centre. In 1964, the new University accepted its first students, initially at St. Leonard's House, but later, on a specially built campus to the south of the city. St. Leonard's House is now run by the City Council, as a 'seed-bed' for new, small, technical or design-based firms. This provides initial, high quality accommodation at low, all-inclusive rental, with minimum formalities.

Communications by both road and rail with the rest of the country are excellent. The M6 Motorway passes close to Lancaster, while the city is an important inter-change point in the electrified Inter-City rail network. The Heysham to Isle of Man Ferry Services has recently been re-opened by Sealink British Ferries.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,300.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Langbaugh is a blend of countryside and industry. Within its 61,060 acres lies some of the finest countryside including 3,000 acres of the North Yorkshire Moors National Park, three fine coastal resorts (Redcar, Marske and Saltburn), an ancient market town (Guisborough), an international port (Teesport) and the vast industrial empires of I.C.I. Wilton and British Steel.

In short, Langbaugh offers employment of all kinds, a home and ready access to some of Britain's best recreational facilities.

It is an area with a long and varied history that can be traced back to the Stone Age. The Romans also had forts and stations in the areas, and, a millennium later, many of the Borough's villages can be found as entries in the Domesday Book. By the 19th century the ironstone of Langbaugh played a major role in the industrial revolution, making it the important port and industrial centre it is today.

TOPOGRAPHY

The city of Leicester is situated centrally within the county and is at the focus of its communications network. Approximately a third of Leicestershire's population live within the boundaries of the city, which forms the important business, shopping and leisure centre for the area.

Leicester's easy access to the main communications network of the country makes it ideally placed as an industrial and commercial centre. The M1 skirts the city, and the M69 provides direct access to the West Midlands, M6, M5 and Birmingham. Many trunk routes converge on Leicester, giving easy access from all directions, and the City's promotion slogan is that it is "Right at the Centre" of the country. Inter-city trains provide speedy links with the rail network, with London being only an hour and a half away. The nearby East Midlands and Birmingham airports provide Leicester's access to international and domestic air routes.

Leicester has been called the "City of 1000 trades", and the variety of products manufactured here is indeed very wide. There are three main groups of industries. The hosiery and knitwear industry, footwear manufacture and engineering.

Leicester has also emerged as a tourist and conference centre of some importance. The central position makes Leicester the natural touring centre of the East Midlands, and the eight major hotels in the city work closely together, catering for conferences of up to 500 delegates.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district covering the northern part of Herefordshire and north-west Worcestershire is mainly agricultural in character. Famed for its Black and White architecture, the area is one of outstanding natural beauty. The boundaries of the area range from Clows Top which is within 8 miles of the industrial west midlands to the Welsh border and from the Shropshire border in the north to the River Wye in the south. The market towns of Leominster, Kington and Tenbury are steeped in the historical traditions of the county and Wigmore Castle was the seat of the Mortimers and where the English Parliament in the early medieval days was held. Leominster's first Charter of Incorporation was granted by Queen Mary in 1554 and the Grange, which forms part of the offices of the authority, dates back to 1650. The Council's Armorial Bearings symbolise the area's rural character and activities and contain important historical allusions.

The Council actively encourages light industry and commerce and has an extensive programme in conjunction with the Development Commission and The Hereford College of Technology.

In recognition of the growing tourist industry the Council produces mini and maxi guides and a variety of tourist information as well as undertaking marketing and strategy surveys.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district of Lewes comprises 113 square miles of Sussex coastline, downland and wealden countryside, the geographical centre of which is the ancient county town of Lewes, prominent in Sussex annals since before the Norman Conquest.

As well as Lewes, with its Norman Castle, Assembly Rooms, offices of the East Sussex County Council and headquarters of the Sussex Police Authority, the principal towns are Newhaven, with its thriving port, the exceptionally pleasant seaside town of Seaford and the rapidly expanding areas of Peacehaven and Telscombe Cliffs.

The River Ouse winds past Lewes through the outstanding natural beauty of the Downs to the sea at Newhaven, and a number of small and attractive villages are to be found in the Ouse Valley. The principal wealden villages are Ringmer, Barcombe, Newick, Wivelsfield Green and Ditchling.

Pre-eminent among the recreational facilities are the sports ground at Lewes, which is the venue for county bowls, hockey and rugby football, the golf course, clubhouse and beach at Seaford, the sailing and cross-channel ferries at Newhaven, and the South Downs Way which crosses the district.

The Downs Leisure Centre, Seaford, and the architecturally-striking Meridian Leisure Centre at Peacehaven provide a full range of indoor sporting facilities. These, and the establishments operated jointly with local schools, are complemented by the modern Seahaven Pool in the very centre of Newhaven, and the tranquil parkland setting of the open-air Pells Pool; originally built in Victorian times for residents and visitors to Lewes. There is also the internationally famous Opera House at Glyndebourne.

The district includes the ancient Cathedral City of Lichfield, birthplace of Dr. Samuel Johnson, the great lexicographer, and the home of many famous people—Elias Ashmole the antiquary and herald, Joseph Addison the essayist, David Garrick the actor and Erasmus Darwin the scientist, to name but a few.

Burntwood, as the second largest urban centre, has, together with Chasetown, Chaseterrace and Boney Hay, expanded to a population of 27,000. It is one of the largest urbanised Parish Council areas in the country.

The surrounding rural parts of the district are mainly agricultural in character with manufacturing industry in parts. It is a growing district with good quality residential development throughout.

Cannock Chase (an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty) is near and there are excellent communications to all parts of the West Midlands.

TOPOGRAPHY

Lincoln is the County Town of the geographical county of Lincolnshire. Its Cathedral is regarded as one of the finest in Europe and with many other ancient monuments Lincoln attracts many tourists. In recent years the Trust for Lincolnshire Archaeology has conducted extensive excavation works on many sites within the City and these have revealed a number of important "finds".

The first of many Royal Charters was granted in 1154 and the first surviving reference to a mayor is dated 1206. The office of Sheriff of Lincoln is one of the oldest in the country and pre-dates that of the Sheriff of Nottingham by some 30 years. It is now purely a ceremonial office. Lincoln is an industrial centre of considerable importance although in recent years the heavy engineering has declined. There are two large commons (containing golf courses), three parks and many other open spaces. The Art Gallery houses the famous Usher Collection, the Peter de Wint Collection and a collection of Tennyson personalia and manuscripts. The National Cycle Museum has recently moved to the City. In recent years the City Centre has been almost completely pedestrianised and the shopping centre has been modernised making it an attractive venue for outlying districts. The City Council purchased the Sincil Bank Ground in 1982 and a joint project with the City Football Club has recently been completed whereby a new Grandstand was built with extensive community facilities included.

The City's water supply comes from the Anglian Water Pumping Station at Elkesley, Notts., 22 miles from Lincoln. The City Council are shareholders in the City Transport Company.

The City Council have recently developed links with Tangshan in Northern China and it is anticipated that formal twinning agreements will be signed in 1989.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,090.

TOPOGRAPHY

Luton is one of the leading centres of manufacture and employment in south east England, enhanced by a pleasant residential environment and unrivalled road, rail and air communications.

It is located 30 miles north of London and is the premier town of the county of Bedfordshire, which is bordered by the counties of Buckinghamshire, Cambridgeshire, Hertfordshire and Northamptonshire.

Within its 16 square miles, Luton contains almost 65,000 households, 5,000 commercial properties and a population of around 166,000. In population terms, it is the 25th largest town in England and Wales.

The town's name is derived from the River Lea which has its source within the borough and the banks of which provided the earliest known settlements. The Ancient Britons called the river the Lygea. In the eighth century, the settlement came to be known as Lygetun and the Domesday Book, commissioned by William the Conqueror, referred to the town as Loitone. Following variations of the name through succeeding centuries, it was in the reign of Charles I that Luton acquired its present appellation.

The principal products of Luton's manufacturing industries, dominated by American, Swedish and Swiss companies and with an increasing Japanese presence, are motor cars, ball bearings, pumps, electrical household goods and scientific instrumentation.

The straw and fashion hat industry, on which Luton's fortunes were founded in the 19th century, remains a flourishing and unique feature of present day commerce and contributes significantly to the town's export trade.

Further international recognition has come through its First Division football team and the frequent continental tours made by the Luton Band.

Luton's importance as a commercial, financial and service centre is renowned and today well over half the jobs are provided in shops and offices, reflected in the massive Arndale covered shopping centre—the largest ever to be built in an established town—major stores allied to the principal housing development areas and the construction and occupation of prestigious office buildings on prime sites within the central area.

Luton's open aspect on its northern, southern and eastern boundaries ensures that residents and visitors are always close to the countryside, adding to the town's residential appeal.

Within the borough are more than 1,500 acres of recreational space, including eight attractive parks and a riverside walk.

Luton is linked to Britain's motorway network by two junctions of the M1 which runs to the west of the town (junction 10 linked to the A1081 and junction 11 to A505). The access at junction 10 connects with the southern section of the Luton East Circular Road and brings drivers to the approach road of Luton International Airport.

The Airport, with an annual passenger total in excess of three million, is the country's principal departure point for inclusive charter tours, serving destinations in more than 50 countries, and has scheduled services to Southern Ireland, Holland, Belgium, Spain, the Channel Islands and Malta.

Luton International Airport is a private limited company whose total shareholding is held by Luton Borough Council.

The town's railway station is covered by the intercity service from the midlands and north to London and by the Bedford-Thames link service.

Many places of interest and designated areas of outstanding natural beauty are located within a short distance and coupled with the ease of travel to the town, account for Luton becoming used increasingly as a base for tourists.

Visitors seeking accommodation have a choice of three modern luxury hotels (combined total of 400 bedrooms) and fifteen smaller hotels (300 bedrooms) all with convenient access to the Airport, railway station and town centre.

Luton is the birthplace of the novelist Arthur Hailey.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district, which includes the County Town of Kent, covers one of the largest hop-growing areas in the country, and through it runs the River Medway. Agriculture is, naturally, its main industry, although general and light industry and commerce have strong footholds. The town of Maidstone is a thriving commercial and industrial centre, with direct road and rail access to London and to the Kent and Sussex coast. Its fine shopping facilities include a large indoor complex and the town holds one of the largest open-air markets in the south-east of England each Tuesday. The cluster of fine old medieval buildings by the Medway still stands, the Archbishop's stables housing the Carriage Museum and the surrounding villages contain much of antiquity and interest including Allington and Leeds Castles. A Rural Life Museum has been provided and is jointly managed with the Kent County Council.

Mote Park of over 450 acres is close to the town centre and County Cricket matches, soccer and rugby are played there. As well as a swimming pool the Council has provided a sauna and solarium in the park. Boating and fishing facilities are also available. Recent developments have included a golf course and landscaped areas along the river banks and the riverside walks now provided are attractive additions to the river scene.

TOPOGRAPHY

This corner of England, formerly divided between Worcestershire and Herefordshire, has large areas designated as areas of outstanding natural beauty, the centre-piece of which are the Malvern Hills with Malvern nestling on their slopes. Ledbury, Bromyard, Martley and Upton upon Severn lie in the valleys on either side. Upton is on the banks of the River Severn and is a popular holiday and boating resort; Ledbury and Bromyard are old market towns and have, in common with the rest of the district, many old historical buildings and places of interest for the visitor. The pre-war Malvern Festival which now commemorates Sir Edward Elgar as well as Bernard Shaw has been revived and is held during the last two weeks of May each year. The permanent site for the Three Counties show in June each year is in a beautiful setting in Malvern Wells with the Malvern Hills acting as a natural backdrop. The district is largely rural in character and has many orchards and hop farms within the range of agricultural activities. On the other hand, there are industrial estates at Ledbury, Martley, Malvern Link, Bromyard and Bishops Cleeve. Whilst tourism is a growing industry.

TOPOGRAPHY

Mansfield has a rich history and there is evidence of occupation by Druids, early Britons and Romans. Since these early times it has matured through commercial and industrial growth but still remains a market town with a character all its own.

Hard red and white sandstone, hewn out of local quarries, was used to build the Houses of Parliament in Westminster and the massive viaduct that straddles Mansfield which has become a local landmark.

The District is recognised as having considerable industrial importance and forms the heart of the north Nottinghamshire coalfield. It is, however, the gateway to the Dukeries and is the ideal centre for touring the region's attractions in the form of a series of stately homes or the haunts of Robin Hood in the surrounding Sherwood Forest.

The centre of Mansfield itself is the subject of a multi-million pound shopping development which was completed in 1976. Planners have done their work carefully to make sure the new complex does not detract from the essential Mansfield character and the flourishing open market stands side by side with the precinct.

The District is surrounded by agriculture and it is only a matter of minutes from town centre to countryside. The Council is anxious to improve the environment and so far schemes have been completed along the banks of the Maun and the Meden, which run through the District, turning them into pleasurable riverside walks.

The District possesses many parks and recreation grounds, swimming pools, a sauna bath, libraries and a museum, a third division football team, leisure centres and sports centres among the leisure facilities for the community. It has a civic theatre and cinema, and a Local Arts Association ensures that culture is not ignored.

TOPOGRAPHY

Medina Borough extends to 11,712 hectares, approximately 30.75% of the total island and includes the three major towns in the north east sector, Ryde, Newport and Cowes, together with a range of smaller settlements, notably Wootton, Whippingham, Havenstreet, Seaview and St. Helens. Total population in 1987 (Mid) was 70,700 representing 56.72% of the County.

Cowes and Ryde are principal ports of entry linking with Southampton and Portsmouth respectively. The vehicle ferry from Portsmouth terminates at Fishbourne. Newport at the centre and the head of the navigable part of the River Medina is the traditional County town and remains the administrative centre for the Island and centre of internal communications. It is also important for its service industries and a growing number of manufacturing industries. Formerly a garrison town, the barracks site now accommodates Albany maximum security prison, with Parkhurst and Camp Hill Prisons adjacent.

Ryde which developed initially through the Georgian and Victorian eras is now an important shopping centre and within the Borough of Medina is the principal tourist town enjoying sandy beaches and a good range of holiday accommodation and amenities.

Traditionally, Cowes and East Cowes are the industrial focus of the Island with long associations with shipbuilding. East Cowes is the home of the Hovercraft and the former shipyards capable of building frigates and cross channel ferries and now used for heavy engineering. Cowes also has a large marine and electronics factory complex.

In recreational terms, Cowes remains the mecca of yachting and attracts competitors and visitors from many countries to compete in the Admiral's Cup and other events. The interest in yachting is further reflected in the boat building and marine facilities of the town.

Much of the remainder of the Borough is distinctly rural in character with an emphasis on dairy and beef farming. There are several Forestry Commission holdings of which Parkhurst, approximately one square mile, is the largest. Mention must also be made of the Osborne Estate near East Cowes, one time home of Queen Victoria.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,600.

TOPOGRAPHY

Mid Bedfordshire is a pleasant, predominantly rural area stretching from Buckinghamshire in the west to Cambridgeshire in the east. Geographically the district is mainly farmland with a ridge of low hills crossing the area diagonally from north-east to south-west.

Although mainly rural in character, there are parts of the area where thriving small businesses have developed, particularly in the expanding areas at Sandy and Flitwick, and within the more established community at Biggleswade. Many of these are associated with farming and market gardening, which remains the District's principal industry.

Agricultural and other technologies are studied at Cranfield, Old Warden and Silsoe, and the west of the District contains one of the largest brickfields in the country.

The main population centres are Biggleswade, mentioned as a flourishing market in the Domesday Book; Sandy, home of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds; and Stotfold in the east; Shefford in the centre; and Ampthill, Flitwick and Cranfield in the west.

Above all, however, this is an area of beautiful villages, too numerous to mention individually. Most well known are Woburn, with its Stately Home and Safari Park, and Old Warden, home of the Shuttleworth Collection of vintage aeroplanes and road vehicles.

The Council's future policies are based on a position statement which has been prepared following a comprehensive review of all its current services. The implementation of this Corporate Plan is the responsibility of the Management Team which comprises the Chief Executive and the three Departmental Directors.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Mid Devon (formerly Tiverton) comprises the towns of Tiverton and Crediton and their rural hinterlands which combine to form a large and beautiful rural area in mid-Devon; it is one of only two Devon authorities without a coastline. The District lies between the Exmoor National Park to the north east, and the Dartmoor National Park to the south west. It is a District of rivers and river valleys, the valley of the Exe being of outstanding beauty.

Although set in a predominantly rural area, the former Borough of Tiverton (incorporated under a charter of King James I in 1615) has a long tradition of manufacturing industry and is an industrial and distributive centre of some significance. Crediton serves to some extent as a dormitory town to Exeter but also houses a number of industrial and distributive concerns. There are industrial estates in both towns, developed by the local authority, and privately owned industrial estates in the course of, or awaiting, development, at Willand and Cullompton, in immediate proximity to the M5.

Throughout the District, there are delightful and picturesque villages and hamlets and many buildings of architectural and historic interest, including (at Tiverton) the original building of Blundell's School and the lawn on which Jan Ridd, of Lorna Doone fame, fought. Blundell's School is still housed in the town, although in different buildings, and special terms are available to residents from the parish of Tiverton (a successor parish under the Local Government Act 1972).

There are private golf links at Tiverton and Crediton.

TOPOGRAPHY

Middlesbrough is at the heart of one of the leading industrial centres of Britain. It is the commercial, shopping, and entertainment centre for Cleveland County.

Immediately adjacent to this industrial area is a glorious region of moorland, hills, coastline and historical heritage which rivals and even excels many more widely celebrated tourist regions.

The town centre is the most important shopping centre in the Northern Region after Newcastle; it has nearly 2 million square feet of easily accessible, compact and convenient shopping. There are three covered shopping centres—the Dundas Arcade, the Cleveland Centre and the Hill Street Centre—all incorporating car parks. The Hill Street Centre has a major superstore and 40 other shops, open and covered markets and links into several other major department stores.

In September 1989 top supermarket firm J. Sainsbury opened a 65,000 sq. ft. store on a site close to the town centre. The new development was the first for Sainsbury in the North East. Exciting plans for a further major shopping and leisure pool development in the town centre are being discussed with Gateshead Metro Centre developers Cameron Hall.

A key area of the town centre, adjacent to the civic centre, has been totally transformed by recent development. An attractive new park—Central Gardens—has been created by the council. It features a lake with fountain, amphitheatre, landscaped terraces and an extensive paved boulevard. Around the park new buildings include the imposing 100,000 sq. ft. Crown Court, the 30,000 sq. ft. Cleveland Business Centre consisting of flexible office and studio workspace with full managerial and secretarial support, and an impressive new office complex for the Inland Revenue.

Middlesbrough was the crucible of the Industrial Revolution and the enterprise of those days has continued to thrive in the town. Much of the heavy industry has gradually moved to new sites nearer the estuary of the Tees and now Middlesbrough's new approach is to encourage growth in light manufacturing, service, storage and distribution. The Council is taking positive steps to help indigenous businesses expand and to attract new industries seeking a site for development.

These efforts have been aided by Middlesbrough's status as an Inner Area Programme Authority through which considerable finance has been allocated to major capital projects and new employment initiatives. New factories, workshops and warehouses have been built at Riverside Park, Cannon Park and other small sites close to the town centre. Other interesting projects include the conversion of houses into small workshops, and the opening of an Enterprise Centre and annex to encourage the development of new ideas and businesses. Broadcasting House—the home of BBC Radio Cleveland—also has suites of “starter” offices for the business sector and spacious ground floor showroom and office accommodation. Craft and retail enterprise units have also been set up and Managed Workshops are planned in the Britannia Enterprise Zone. In addition, a former secondary school of 80,000 sq. ft. has been converted into the Southlands Centre, a new community facility providing an enterprise centre, community workshops, a base for temporary employment and training schemes, as well as a sports, leisure and community facility.

In 1983 the Britannia Enterprise Zone in northern Middlesbrough was launched. The zone covers 190 acres including the prestigious Riverside Park industrial estate plus an important stretch of River Tees frontage. It is the location of the CADCAM Centre, an integrated development unique in Europe involving the HQ of the CADCAM Applications, Training and Support Co. Ltd., linked to a series of adjacent high technology workshops. The facilities are being expanded and will soon total 200,000 sq. ft.

The Teesside Development Corporation was established in 1987 to assist in the regeneration and development of 12,000 acres of land alongside the River Tees. The operational boundaries of the TDC cross into the four Boroughs within Cleveland.

During 1986 the Council unveiled an extremely ambitious project—a multi-million pound scheme to transform the derelict area around Middlesbrough Dock. The project will give the dock area a new lease of life and attract industrial, commercial, housing, educational and leisure development to the town. The TDC has now agreed to look at the Dock proposals as one of its flagship schemes and studies are currently underway.

The River Tees is England's second largest port and 96% of the tonnage is represented by two of the major Cleveland industries—oil and steel.

Major development in recent years has ensured that Middlesbrough has an excellent network of communications. In today's oil age, the town finds itself strategically located midway between London and Aberdeen with links to all major UK centres and good links with Europe. Major efforts are being taken to develop Riverside Park and other riverside sites to ensure they can take maximum advantage from all forms of ocean and new technology.

Continuous, high capacity routes link Middlesbrough to the motorway network enabling easy access to all parts of the country. The town is served by a direct Inter-City 125 service to London with additional main line connections via Darlington. Tees-side International Airport—12 miles away from the town centre—has excellent road links and a railway link.

Middlesbrough Council has always been concerned to maintain the town centre as a place for people. It's some years since an extensive clearance programme was completed and there are now thousands of new and improved homes in and around the central area. In the suburbs there is the widest choice of housing to suit most tastes. Thousands of new homes have been built in the southern part of the Borough and the Council is particularly proud of an imaginative new community being developed at Coulby Newham.

One recent initiative in the town has been the setting up of fifteen community councils to consider local issues, suggest varying needs for local people and handle a budget for community purposes. The project has proved so successful that the Council is now establishing neighbourhood councils and estate forums.

The Council's domestic smoke control programme was completed in 1980 making the town one of the first domestic smoke-free locations in the country. The present air pollution levels compare favourably with other parts of the country and are far better than most non-industrial towns. In fact, research by Glasgow University placed Middlesbrough 7th in a national league of air pollution-free towns.

In 1982 Middlesbrough became Britain's Floral City by winning the national Britain-in-Bloom competition. The town's parks and floral displays are second to none and there is a fierce pride in the environment generally.

Within sight of the workshops of Middlesbrough are the Cleveland Hills, North York Moors National Park, the Cleveland and North Yorkshire Heritage Coast and the historic kingdom of Northumbria.

The famous navigator and explorer Captain James Cook was born at Marton, Middlesbrough and there the Council has built a superb museum to depict his life and achievements. The Cook Birthplace Museum is the start of the Captain Cook Heritage Trail and the gateway to “Captain Cook's Country”. The Council has recognised the potential of the town as a tourist base and is actively promoting itineraries using the excellent hotels in the area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is mainly of a rural nature but includes the attractive market towns of Eye and Stowmarket. Other main centres of population are the conservation areas of Debenham, Laxfield, Needham Market and Stradbroke, all located in gently undulating unspoilt farmland. The district contains a great number of other charming small villages with a wealth of timber framed houses and thatched cottages. The local white brick blends with Georgian red brick houses to create an architectural character of great diversity. This is aided in no small part by the large number of important medieval churches which lie within the district.

The district is well served by road and rail network with the A45 trunk road lying close to the expanding industrial estate at Stowmarket, with good transportation links to the Midlands and the Haven Ports. Many sporting and leisure activities are catered for in the district including a golf course at Great Finborough. The Mid Suffolk Leisure Centre at Stowmarket offers the most comprehensive leisure facilities in East Anglia and has over 400,000 users annually. The District is expanding leisure and recreation opportunities throughout its area.

The council provides a wide range of services and facilities in addition to its statutory functions.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district of Mid Sussex is a largely rural area of outstanding natural beauty with substantial urbanised pockets and extends from the Surrey border to the southern slopes of the South Downs. The Ouse valley, bordered by the Balcombe and Ashdown Forests, runs through the northern half of the district whilst throughout the district there are a number of villages of considerable charm and antiquity. Nearly two-thirds of the district's population live in the three towns of Burgess Hill, East Grinstead and Haywards Heath. East Grinstead contains within a conservation area a number of exceptionally interesting buildings of considerable age and distinction. East Grinstead is also an important market town and shopping centre for a large rural area and features two light industrial estates. The more modern market town of Haywards Heath is a mainly residential area with some recent office development and a good shopping centre with a recently constructed new town centre and is the administrative centre of the district, whilst the equally modern town of Burgess Hill features a thriving light industrial area together with a Town Centre Scheme incorporating a shopping precinct, an open market and a civic hall.

Twinning. Bernkastel-Wittlich (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Milton Keynes was formed in 1974 following the reorganisation of Local Government. The constituent authorities were Bletchley UDC, Wolverton UDC, Newport Pagnell UDC and RDC. From the neighbouring Winslow RDC and parishes of Newton Longville, Shenley Brook End, Tattenhoe and Whaddon were incorporated into the new Borough.

The Borough covers an area of 31,044 hectares of North Buckinghamshire. Its boundary forms the county boundary with Northamptonshire to the north and west and Bedfordshire to the east. To the south of the Borough is Aylesbury Vale District. The Rivers Great Ouse and Ouzel traverse the Borough and the Grand Union Canal, the M1 Motorway and the electrified mainline railway from London Euston to Birmingham and Glasgow run north-south through the Borough.

The South East Economic Planning Council published "A Strategy for the South East" in November 1967. One of its proposals was the development of a new city in the south east of the Borough to accommodate overspill from London and other towns in the south of the county. The same year saw the Minister for Housing and Local Government designate an area of 9000 hectares under the New Towns Act for development as a new city. The Designated Area included the existing towns of Stony Stratford, Wolverton and Bletchley (which was being expanded under the Town Development Act).

The New City took its name from a small village within the Designated Area. The original target was to provide homes and jobs for 250,000 people by the early 1990s although the target has been revised downwards. Milton Keynes Development Corporation was formed in 1967 to undertake the development of the new city. It is likely that the Corporation will be wound up in 1992 with the majority of the new city complete.

However, two-thirds of the Borough is outside the Designated Area and this part is essentially rural in character. The country park around Olney and Emberton and the wooded landscape of the Brickhills are fine examples of the rural beauty of the Borough of Milton Keynes.

TOPOGRAPHY

Newark and Sherwood District, which includes 83 parishes, is one of contrasts. The contrast of the predominantly agricultural influence of the eastern villages, with the strong industrial mining towns of the west and north; of one of the finest town squares in the country in Newark with its sympathetically designed town centre development; of the stark beauty of Southwell Minster, a contribution to the District's heritage from the Normans, with the gateway to Sherwood Forest and Robin Hood country, at Edwinstowe. The whole produces an ideal environment in which to live and work or in which the tourist may "stand and stare".

For the more active, leisure and sporting facilities have been developed across the District. The traditional museum is complimented by living arts and crafts. A theatre in Newark is supported jointly by the District and Town Councils and another flourishes under a theatre trust in a nearby rural setting. Local clubs cover the whole alphabet of spare time activities.

Industrial development is actively pursued and aims principally at high job provision, but there is opportunity for all industrial and commercial development in an area which is at the heart of a communications network to all parts of the country.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area is predominantly rural with the three main population areas centred at Hungerford in the west, Newbury and Thatcham, and Tilehurst in the east.

Newbury is a market town and is famous for its horseracing associations. The Council owns and administers the recently enlarged Northcroft Recreation Centre which comprises main sports hall, ancillary hall, two swimming pools, wet and dry changing rooms, four squash courts, multigymnasium, solarium, bar and refreshment area. There are numerous recreation grounds for sport and leisure and well laid out parks, with the Kennet and Lambourn rivers and the Kennet and Avon canal providing a natural habitat for picnics, walking, fishing, boating or sight-seeing. The Museum incorporates the Tourist Information Centre where there are two floors of display galleries, a research room and an Exhibition Room.

Newbury remains the main shopping centre for the District and the range of facilities has been enlarged by the construction of the Kennet Centre which has added 20,000m² of shopping floor space to the town centre.

The London Road Industrial Estate in Newbury adjoins the A34 Winchester to Preston Trunk Road and the A4 London to Bath Road with convenient access to Southampton, Bristol, London, Oxford, Birmingham, Reading, Swindon and Basingstoke. There are 18-hole private golf courses at Crookham and Donnington. The Watermill Theatre at Bagnor, which is situated approximately three miles from Newbury town centre, stages first-class productions in a unique rural setting.

Links with the West Country, Heathrow Airport, Gatwick Airport and London are provided by the M4 Motorway. The town is 50 minutes by train from Paddington and there are frequent bus services to and from Bristol and London.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is situated in the north west of Staffordshire extending from the foothills of the Pennines in the north, having a boundary with the Potteries conurbation to the east, and borders with Cheshire and Shropshire to the west.

The town is surrounded on three sides by attractive countryside and good agricultural land and the M6 in this area follows a particularly scenic route. Within the rural part lies Keele University which is noted for its modern approach to university education.

Although an old market town, the Council has endeavoured to promote the development of its shopping centre with pedestrianisation, the building of an inner ring road and extensive car parking, yet at the same time maintaining the character of its central conservation area..

Newcastle has a growing diversity of industries and commercial activities which exploit its natural resources, strategic location and skilled labour. Existing large industries include, electrical engineering, computer manufacturing, bakeries, wires and cables, bricks, tiles and textiles. The Council takes an active role in the development of industry both by building units itself or working in conjunction with private developers. This has been an important feature in the reclamation and re-use of derelict land. In particular the Council and private enterprise are currently developing the Parkhouse Industrial Estate, the largest currently being developed in Staffordshire, and providing a variety of units to meet differing needs.

The Borough Council pursues a progressive housing policy which includes the provision of new dwellings and rehabilitation of accommodation in both the public and private sectors as well as co-operating with housing associations to provide a wider variety of tenure. The Borough contains much of North Staffordshire's most attractive housing and large areas are made available for individual residential development.

The district offers a wide variety of recreational facilities ranging from attractive natural parkland to organised facilities including tennis courts, bowling & putting greens, sports pitches, a sports centre, 18 hole golf course, a Par 3 golf course, a cycle track of national standard and community centres.

TOPOGRAPHY

Northampton has been of considerable importance from very early days. Its first charter was granted in 1189 and during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries it was frequently the scene of the King's Court. Today it is a manufacturing town with extensive parks and recreation grounds. The area of the local authority has seen a major expansion of Northampton under the New Towns Act, whereby with adequate shopping, educational, recreational and social facilities it could accommodate a population of 180,000 by 1991, being ideally situated adjacent to the M1 motorway and on a loop of the main electrified London, Birmingham, Liverpool and Manchester railway.

TOPOGRAPHY

Bedford historically has long been the centre for this area and is the main source of trade and employment. It is the county town of Bedfordshire, a market town and administrative centre. The growth in population has been accompanied by extensive housing development and industrial expansion on a broad scale. It is the shopping and entertainment centre for a catchment area of approximately 200,000 people. Bedford is also situated astride several trunk roads midway between Britain's two main north to south arteries—the M1 and the A1. It has good rail communications and is within easy reach of several major airports including Luton, Heathrow and Birmingham.

There is no clear geographical boundary nowadays between Bedford and Kempston but, nevertheless the latter retains its individuality and provides its own community life and local amenities as well as the location for several of the more important industries. Kempston has seen a fair amount of expansion in recent years and its services and amenities have been improved to match the increase in population. It has its own town council which helps to preserve the local character.

The rural parishes range in population from 50 to over 4,000. Those which are closest to or within easy reach of the urban centre of Bedford and Kempston provide attractive residential accommodation for people working in the town. Others, farther out, are more rural and agricultural in character. Brick making, which is one of the region's most important industries, is established within the rural area. The tall chimneys of the brick fields are well known landmarks of rail and road travellers. The villages provide a rich tapestry of English history captured forever in their churches, cottages and stately homes.

The common link running through the area of North Bedfordshire Borough is the River Great Ouse which winds and loops its way across the Borough. Quiet backwaters, popular fishing spots and fine riverside walks lined with gardens and meadows represent contrasting features which the river brings to the Borough and which helps to make it such an attractive area in which to live and work.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the north east part of the County the North Cornwall District's natural advantages range from the spectacular and dramatic coastal scenery to the tranquillity of Bodmin Moor with its twin peaks of Rough Tor and Brown Willy. Predominantly the area is undulating and rural in character and therefore the agricultural industry is of great importance.

The main towns are:—Bodmin the County Town, home of the Crown Court and the centre of road communications on the A30 and A38 and served by a main line station at Bodmin Parkway, Bude the well-known coastal tourist resort, Launceston with its castle and standing on the A30 at the gateway to Cornwall and once the capital of the County, Wadebridge a market town on the A39 and the home of the Royal Cornwall Showground, Padstow a small port and tourist resort on the Camel estuary.

Well laid out industrial estates with all services and with room for expansion on land owned by the Council are located in most urban areas throughout the district with a skilful and responsible workforce at hand. The Council is anxious to encourage the further development of industry and commerce in the area.

Practically the whole of the coast line and Bodmin Moor is designated as an area of Outstanding Natural Beauty with the additional protection as Heritage Coast. Throughout the district there are buildings of historic importance and the majority of unique Cornish settlements have the protection of being within Conservation areas.

Agencies. The following county council functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Highways (Environmental maintenance).

TOPOGRAPHY

The District extends from south of Sheffield to just north of Alfreton and from west of Bolsover to the borders of the Peak District National Park in the east. The main rail route from Sheffield passes through the District and just north of Clay Cross divides into the main lines to St. Pancras and Derby and Bristol. Further east and also passing through parts of the District is the M1 motorway.

Town centre improvement and redevelopment has recently been completed at Eckington, Clay Cross and Killamarsh to complement the already developed centre at Dronfield. These are the main shopping and business towns.

The eastern and northern parts of the District are part of a major coalfield; although mining has declined in recent years it is still a significant factor in the local economy. Iron and steel and heavy engineering industries are prominent in the eastern and northern parts of the District. Strenuous efforts continue to be made to provide new employment opportunities and the District Council has developed 3 industrial estates.

The western and southern parts of the District are largely rural in character and the countryside, which includes much of the Amber Valley, is very attractive. To the north west, the land rises towards the moorlands and foothills of the eastern side of the Pennines and much of this part of the District, which in places is of particular beauty, is within the Peak District National Park.

The District's good communications make it an ideal touring centre, especially for the delightful scenery of the neighbouring National Park. There are many historic buildings and centuries-old traditions such as well dressing.

TOPOGRAPHY

The creation of the North Hertfordshire District Council brought together districts so very similar in character that the enlarged area can be described as a delightfully balanced piece of English countryside. Clustered around the four market towns are pleasant residential developments with rural villages in between, and likewise some light industry around the towns provides employment in contrast to much agriculture elsewhere.

Baldock is an ancient town with many relics of the past and a High Street with several fine Georgian buildings. Near by is Letchworth, the first garden city, planned and founded by Sir Ebenezer Howard in 1903. Its design and construction has had a great deal of influence on the development of town planning, both shopping areas and housing estates.

Hitchin is an old market town with, like Baldock, a number of Georgian and older houses; also of interest are old inns and almshouses. A short way from the town is the prehistoric fort of Ravensburgh Castle, and the ancient Icknield Way ran southwards. Royston lies at the crossing of the same Icknield Way and Ermine Street, and noteworthy in the town are old houses and inns as in Hitchin.

TOPOGRAPHY

Formed in April 1974 out of a merger of the former Sleaford Urban District and the North and East Kesteven Rural Districts, the present North Kesteven District of Lincolnshire has a population of around 77,000 and covers 356 square miles. It centres upon the town of Sleaford which is the District's administrative, shopping and market Centre. A very important agricultural area with comparatively little industry outside Sleaford itself, the District lies between the limestone wolds of the west and the fens of the east. In the north it reaches to the southern suburbs of the City of Lincoln: in the south its boundaries extend towards Grantham, whilst its long western boundary is, for about half the length, the county boundary with Nottinghamshire. The River Witham flows through the western half of the District and then, curving east towards the sea, it forms the District's eastern boundary, taking in the tributary of the River Slea (on which Sleaford stands) and being flanked by extensive acres of level fenlands.

Although there are a few villages actually on the fens, the majority (and there are over 80 villages in the District) are located on the higher land to the west. Most of them possess interesting and beautiful churches; others have manor or 'great' houses, and all have that pleasing stone-built quality of the Lincolnshire Wolds. Sleaford, too, has many features of interest and is a town of great charm.

Although there are industries in Sleaford, the main activity of the District is agriculture. Irrigation and systematic drainage in the Fenland parishes have resulted in the reclaiming of many acres and the rich alluvial land now produces excellent crops of cereals, roots and market garden produce. Limestone is supplied from quarries in and around Blankney and there are certain industries in the rural area more especially in those villages closest to Lincoln.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,840.

TOPOGRAPHY

The North Norfolk District incorporates a coastline in excess of 40 miles, providing some of the most attractive scenery in the county including a large area of the Norfolk Broads. A considerable part of the area has been designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

The main holiday centres are Cromer, Sheringham and Wells-next-the-Sea. Inland the area is mainly agricultural in outlook and the two principal market towns are North Walsham and Fakenham which also provide considerable employment opportunities and are designated "Growth Centres" for industrial development. The Development Commission has also declared the District to be a Rural Development Area and complements the Council's industrial activities by providing industrial units through its Agent, English Estates.

Walsingham, the village with a significant religious background, is also situated in the district, and many thousands of pilgrims still gather there each year.

Amenities available include Cromer Pier and its recently refurbished Pavilion Theatre, Little Theatre, Sheringham, "The Splash" Leisure Pool, Sheringham, a Sports Centre in Fakenham, Dual-Use Sports Hall Facilities at Cromer and Stalham, Community Centres, museums at Cromer, Walsingham and Glandford in addition to the wonderful coastline where a wide variety of amenities exist.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated, as its name indicates, in the north of Shropshire where it adjoins Cheshire to the north, the Welsh county of Clwyd to the west, and Staffordshire to the east, the District of North Shropshire covers approximately 262 square miles. The towns of the district are Ellesmere, Market Drayton, Wem and Whitchurch.

The land is undulating, lying in a depression between the Welsh hills to the west, the Pennines to the east and north-east, and it is an extension of the Cheshire Plain to the north with the Severn Valley to the south. The climate, therefore, is moderate, and this combined with the highly productive soil of the area has resulted in the main industry being agriculture with its associated industries. However, a variety of trades and light industries have developed over recent years in the urban areas of the district.

Predominantly the district is rural in character with such areas of outstanding natural beauty as the Ellesmere area where there are seven quite large meres, near Weston-under-Redcastle there is Hawk lake, which is approximately three-quarters of a mile in length, and at Grinshill there is a large picnic site.

The Shropshire Union canal passes through the district. It is flourishing as a leisure amenity because at Market Drayton and Whixall there are large pleasure boating centres.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the centre of England, North Warwickshire Borough is a rural area bordered by Birmingham and Coventry and the towns of Tamworth, Hinckley and Nuneaton. The M6 passes through the south of the Borough and the M42 will eventually link the M6/M5 with the M1. There are three intersections in the Borough at Coleshill, Curdworth and Dordon. Main line stations at Birmingham, NEC, Nuneaton and Coventry are easily accessible by road, as are also Birmingham International Airport and the National Exhibition Centre.

The Borough with its attractive countryside, villages and pubs is a popular destination for tourists. There is a wide choice of new and character homes at reasonable prices. The National Golf Centre at The Belfry is within the Borough and there are three other golf courses and ranges, two large country parks, four sports halls, fishing and sailing. Coleshill and Atherstone and Polesworth have markets and can serve most shopping needs. Major shopping centres are close at hand in Birmingham and Coventry, together with theatres and other facilities and a short journey to the south is Stratford-on-Avon.

North Warwickshire is highly accessible and the new industrial estates at Atherstone, Coleshill and Arley have attracted new manufacturing, servicing and distribution industries.

TOPOGRAPHY

North West Leicestershire extends from Appleby Magna, close to the Warwickshire border, to Castle Donington in the north and Coalville to the east. It is influenced considerably by two coalfields, and at its eastern edge it has the upland area of Charnwood Forest forming a strong physical boundary. To the south it runs into the broad agricultural plain of south west Leicestershire and in the west it is bounded by Warwickshire, Staffordshire and Derbyshire. Since at least the time of the Industrial Revolution parts of the area have been dominated by the mining activities associated with the coalfield and other early industrial activities like clay extraction, pottery and engineering.

The largest town in the area is Coalville and although as the name implies the town is an industrial one centred around coal mining. Coalville is far from a typical colliery centre. The town and its picturesque surroundings are far too pleasant and there are so many other enterprises located in Coalville that coal mining does not dominate the industrial field.

The East Midlands Airport near Castle Donington has a runway sufficiently large to accommodate the largest aircraft. Passenger services operate daily to all parts of the Continent and twice daily to all principal airports in the British Isles. There is a separate freight complex handling and despatching freight daily.

On the historical scene there are many references worthy of note. Ashby-de-la-Zouch, immortalised in the pages of "Ivanhoe" by Sir Walter Scott, is steeped in history. Its 15th century castle built by Lord Hastings and in possession for centuries of the Earls of Huntingdon now lies in ruins. Nearby is Coleorton Hall where such great poets and artists as William Wordsworth and John Constable once stayed. In the area there lay numerous ecclesiastical establishments which now lie in ruins. Among these may be mentioned Gracedieu Priory and Charley Priory. The modern Monastery of Mount St. Bernard's is a fine example of the work of the great architect Pugin. Educationally the district is within one of the most up to date education areas in the country. There are many facilities available in the district including the Coalville Technical College, three Upper schools, four High schools in addition to the numerous junior and infant schools throughout the district.

TOPOGRAPHY

North Wiltshire is a scenically attractive area covering some 300 square miles of the County which represents rural England at its best.

Set between the Cotswold escarpment, the Marlborough Downs and the Upper Thames Valley, the District has a rich heritage of contrasting rural landscape, historic towns and attractive villages.

The ancient boroughs of Malmesbury, Calne and Chippenham (now the District's administrative centre) and the towns of Corsham, Cricklade and Wootton Bassett bustle with modern activity yet date back to Saxon times.

The villages, with their fine churches, dignified manors and cottages of mellowed stone and brick are the epitome of the picturesque rural setting—Castle Combe being perhaps the best known example.

Nearly 5,000 buildings in the area are scheduled as being of historical or of architectural importance, including Lacock Abbey and Lacock Village (National Trust property), Corsham Court, Sheldon Manor and Bowood.

Despite this area being of great antiquity there is nevertheless a place for modern industry and the proximity of the M4 motorway and the inter-city rail services to London and Bristol have attracted extensive modern manufacturing industrial investment with development sites at Chippenham, Corsham and Malmesbury. Tourism is another growth industry and each year more visitors are responding to marketing activity to promote the area as a tourist destination in its own right as well as being the ideal touring base from which to visit attractions in the West Country including the neighbouring city of Bath.

The District has many recreation facilities, which include swimming pools, sports centres and playing fields and the new major leisure centre of the Olympiad in Chippenham. The Cotswold Water Park, on the District's northern boundary, comprises some 14,000 acres of lakes, and provides a comprehensive range of opportunities for water based and countryside recreation—both for the elitist performer and for the family group.

TOPOGRAPHY

Norwich, the city of churches and gardens, has a long historic continuity, and in the seventeenth century it was, next to London, the first English

Manufacturing town—to quote Macaulay. The first Charter granted to the city is dated 1158, and the foundation of municipal self-government was laid by a second Charter, granted by Richard I in 1194. It was created a County Borough in 1888. The title of Lord Mayor was granted to the city's chief magistrate in 1910. The Norwich Corporation Act 1933, enacted that the name of the municipal Corporation shall be the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of the City of Norwich. To the antiquary, the City offers many attractions, and it is particularly fitting that several of the most valuable and historic buildings, chiefly through the munificence of public-spirited citizens, should be the property of the city. The centre of the municipal government is the City Hall. The former seat of government is the ancient Guildhall, a fine, flint-faced building dating from the early fifteenth century. St. Andrew's and Blackfriars' Halls, formerly the Church of the Dominicans or Black Friars, are maintained by the Council, Norwich Castle, with its splendid Norman Keep, was converted by the Corporation into a Museum and art gallery, and as such was opened in 1894. Its possessions include one of the finest collections of birds in Britain and a good selection of paintings by members of the Norwich School.

The City is well provided with parks, open spaces and recreation grounds, which comprise in all 744 acres, including Mousehold Heath (190 acres), of which the Council is the conservator, 140 acres of allotments are also provided. The Council owns large corporate estates, in addition to one of the largest cattle markets in England, and provision and fish markets.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,250.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City, which stands almost wholly on the northern bank of the River Trent, has for many centuries been a place of great historical importance. It has been granted many Royal Charters, the first known charter being that of Henry the Second in 1155, and the last of the old charters being that of William and Mary granted in 1692 confirming the "Governing Charter" granted by Henry the Sixth in 1449 making Nottingham a county of itself. The City became a County Borough under the Local Government Act 1888, and was granted City status by a charter of Queen Victoria dated 7th August 1897. The office of Mayor was created by Charter of Edward the First in 1284, and on 10th July 1928 the title and dignity of Lord Mayor was conferred by George the Fifth. Mayors and Lord Mayors have regularly been elected from 1284 to date. The former County Borough ceased to exist on 31st March 1974 following local government reorganisation.

The City Council is responsible for housing, planning, leisure service facilities, environmental health services, tourism, economic development, the inner area programme and its large land holdings. The City Council also maintains 724 kms of public highway as agents for Nottinghamshire County Council and 1506 kms of public sewer as agents of the Seven Trent Water Authority. A charter dated 1st April 1974 was granted by Her Majesty conferring the status of borough on the new Council. The status of a City has also been granted, together with the right to appoint local officers of dignity including a Lord Mayor, Deputy Lord Mayor and Sheriff.

Nottingham is fortunate in possessing corporate estates. Three are of ancient origin and yield substantial revenues from centrally situated land. The Council owns The Castle, imposingly situated on the Castle Rock, which is used as a museum and art gallery; Wollaton Hall, a magnificent Elizabethan mansion and Park used in part as a natural history and industrial museum and an open space of 453 acres; and Newstead Abbey and grounds, once the home of Lord Byron, the poet. The famous Goose Fair is held annually on three consecutive days commencing on the first Thursday in October. The Council operates a covered central market and a wholesale fruit and vegetable market.

Principal industries include the manufacture of lace, hosiery, chemicals, mechanical products, tobacco, cycles and general engineering works. Other important industries are bleaching, dyeing, spinning, tanning, brewing and furniture.

Mayoral annual allowance: £9,300.

TOPOGRAPHY

Bedworth and Nuneaton, the two towns in the Borough, lie to the north of Coventry and have developed into thriving industrial and manufacturing market towns, with extensive residential areas and excellent recreational and leisure amenities.

Development of the town centres, with new shops and offices, has taken place. A recently completed Ring Road has enabled Nuneaton town centre to become a pedestrian priority area and the Bedworth central area is fully pedestrianised. There is direct access to the motorway network by the M1-M6 link at the south of the district. Markets are held on four occasions each week. The Council owns a central bus station, and the Nuneaton railway station provides very good rail services both for passengers and freight.

The Council is well served by libraries, schools and leisure facilities. A Civic Hall designed in conjunction with the Department of the Environment is owned and managed by the Council. Opened in September 1973, it provides for an extensive range of entertainment and leisure activities.

Planning strategies envisage a high rate of population and economic growth for the district.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough lies to the south-east of Leicester on the A6 and A50 radial routes, which give good access into the City, and it is linked to the M1 and M69 by the Southern District Distributor Road. The convenient location and pleasant environment have led to extensive residential development since the Second World War and a further moderate increase in the population of the district is anticipated in the proposed alterations to the Structure Plan.

Residents are well provided for by a wide range of shopping facilities. Children of school age are well served within the Borough and can continue their studies at Wigston College of Further Education. Leisure is well catered for by public and private facilities and the Community Colleges extend access to educational resources to the public.

Most factories and industrial buildings are located on industrial estates and a wide variety of activity is represented, including hosiery, shoes, plastics, electrical, general engineering, printing and food products.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The history of the Oswestry area is steeped in the blood of border conflict as the British peoples confronted first Romans, then Saxon and later Norman invaders. The Saxon King Offa built his magnificent Dyke through the area to divide the warring factions and later the Norman Marcher Lords set up castles at Whittington, Oswestry, Chirk and Welshpool to control the wild Welsh border. Oswestry has been both Welsh and English at different stages of its history and this has left a rich heritage within the landscape.

The Borderland landscape is uncrowded, unspoilt and, in parts, dramatically beautiful. The Oswestry Borderland is for people who enjoy the peace and pace of rural Britain, who appreciate the quality of their surroundings and who like to stray from the main tourist track.

The town of Oswestry is an ancient market town standing on the natural border between the lowlands of Shropshire and the foot hills of the Berwyns. The Wednesday markets still play an important role in the town. There are two markets, one on the old horse market and Bailey Head selling the whole range of consumer goods whilst the Smithfield market dealing in sheep, cattle and other livestock occupies a large site on the towns outskirts and is one of the largest in Europe. Shops in the town range from small family business' to large modern stores and supermarkets. The town centre has greatly improved due to the recently completed by-pass which has removed heavy lorry traffic whilst pedestrianisation of the central area has improved the environment for shoppers and visitors. The Borough also administers a Town Scheme Grants project for the renovation of the towns many listed buildings. Many property owners have taken advantage of this to the benefit of the town scape and environment.

The Borough has an expanding industrial estate with many well known national firms as well as numerous small local firms operating there. The Workforce has varied skills and industrial relations are good. Serviced industrial land is available for new developments at competitive prices. Grants and loans are also available for new firms starting up in the Borough area. Improved road links have greatly benefited the industrial community.

A strong emphasis has been placed on the development of tourism and the area has much to offer the holiday maker. This is particularly true for those who enjoy relaxing in the countryside or pursuing activities such as walking, fishing, horse riding or nature watching. Also, the area's rich history and heritage present an opportunity to explore ancient sites, castles and Welsh culture. A number of holiday groups have been set up to market the area. These include a farm holidays group, a craft group and a horse riding group. The Borough Council is also active in establishing and promoting a range of theme and special interest holidays.

The Borough Council, in partnership with local regional tourist boards and neighbouring authorities has recently opened a new Tourist Information Centre. This prestigious development is situated at the junction of the busy A5 and A483 trunk roads, the main tourist routes into Mid and North Wales. An enquiry to the Tourist Information Centre will bring information on how to get the best out of the countryside. There are waymarked footpath walks along Offa's Dyke or the Old Montgomery Canal, pony trekking far from busy roads, fishing, canal cruising—all available to visitors. There are expeditions to be made to discover picturesque villages such as Llanyblodwel, Knockin and Selattyn or to Kynaston country to explore the caves which were the hide-out of Humphrey Kynaston the notorious highwayman.

The Borough provides full residential facilities with more than 3,000 Council owned premises and extensive private residential development which is expanding. There are adequate primary, comprehensive and private schools as well as a technical college. Sports facilities are provided in the Leisure Centre and there are golf, football, tennis, bowls and rugby clubs around the district. The town has an active social life with many societies and community groups. The whole area is pleasant, healthy and a fine place in which to live, work, holiday and generally enjoy life.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Oxford Charter of 1191 is Oxford's founding charter and bears the oldest municipal seal in the country. Its list of mayors, bailiffs and aldermen dates from 1272. To this day the freemen of the City remain an active body whose rights include those of pasture over Port Meadow, a large tract of common land, and whose interests on the Council are represented by the Sheriff. Markets and fairs have been held since 1520, and the ancient St Giles' Fair is still held each September. The water supply to the City, created in 1615, is one of the oldest in the country. The City became a County Borough in 1889, until when the Corporation was primarily concerned with the maintenance of the water supply, running its ancient municipal charities, and with the management of its considerable estate. Paving, lighting and sanitary duties were discharged first by Commissioners and from 1864 to the creation of the County Borough, by a local board.

In 1929 the boundaries of the City were extended to include part of the urban district of Headington, the parish of Cowley, and parts of the parishes of Iffley, Marston, Cotteslowe, Water Eaton and Wolvercote, and in 1957 the boundary was again extended to include part of the parish of Littlemore.

The City boasts many beautiful and historic buildings and streets, many of which are University buildings and colleges. Open spaces beside the Thames and Cherwell rivers run almost to the city centre, and Oxford also has many parks and interesting rural environs. Austin Rover's Cowley Car Works remains the City's largest employer, and Oxford University Press is the most prestigious of the many printers and publishers in the area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Pendle lies in the north-east corner of Lancashire, adjoining the counties of North Yorkshire and West Yorkshire and comprises an area of more than sixty-five square miles. The district takes its name from Pendle Hill, a well known geographical feature of the Pennines which is visible throughout the area.

The main centres of population are Nelson, Colne, Barnoldswick, Barrowford, Brierfield, Earby and Trawden and, in addition, there are a number of small villages. Pendle acquired Borough Status on 15th November, 1976.

A great deal of urban renewal has taken place and whilst textiles and associated trades were the main industry in the last and early part of this century, diversification and expansion has widened the industrial base. General and light engineering account for a large part, much of it allied to the aerospace industry and whilst textiles are still produced, the manufacture of furniture, carpets, plastics, paper and felt also features significantly. There is also widespread agriculture throughout the area.

Much of the area is rural and includes some of the most beautiful countryside in Britain. Bordering on the boundaries of the Borough are the Forest of Pendle (the home of the Lancashire witches), the Yorkshire Dales and the Pennine moorlands with the historic Bronte country. The Lake District and both the West and East Coasts are easily accessible.

Among the recreational and sporting amenities provided by the Council are golf courses, parks and playing fields, three indoor and one outdoor swimming pools and a large sports centre with an adjoining floodlit all-weather pitch. There are also many sporting, cultural and social societies and clubs of all kinds.

The Lancashire County Council is the local education authority and provides a comprehensive education service with the Nelson and Colne College providing a modern range of buildings catering for a wide range of academic, technical, vocational and non-vocational subjects.

The M65 motorway is now complete from Colne to Blackburn, and it will also shortly be extended westwards to the M61 and M6 thus linking Pendle with the country's motorway network.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,050.

TOPOGRAPHY

Peterborough has long standing ecclesiastical associations focused on a magnificent Cathedral and has always been the centre of an important agricultural area though for the past century it has been established as a railway town and in more recent years has become a major industrial, commercial and shopping centre. The city as now constituted is very much an assimilation of town and country and the built-up more central part is now embraced by a wide agricultural area, some seven times greater in acreage. The designated area of Peterborough New Town is wholly contained within the city though in extent is only about one-fifth of it. A vigorous expansion programme has been undertaken under the auspices of the Peterborough Development Corporation and much stress has been laid on the partnership aspect of the enterprise with the City Council and the County Council. The city continues to expand despite the demise of the Development Corporation in September 1988.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City Council, with a population of approximately 250,000, is one of the 'Big Eleven' non-metropolitan authorities.

The City of Plymouth was created a Municipal Corporation by Act of Parliament in 1439 and as such was the first in England. The history of the City is very much linked to the sea with a strong trading and naval tradition. Sir Francis Drake circumnavigated the world from Plymouth and later became its Mayor. There has been a Royal Naval Dockyard in Plymouth for nearly 300 years and it employs today approximately 7,000 civilians. The Port of Plymouth comprises Millbay Docks owned by the Associated British Ports; Sutton Harbour—the oldest in the city; Victoria Wharfs Cattedown; and Cattedown Wharfs.

Plymouth is the largest city on the south coast of England and is situated in the south west corner of the County of Devon, encircled to the north by the granite massif of Dartmoor, to the west by the River Tamar and to the south by Plymouth Sound.

Communications have improved remarkably over recent years. Plymouth Airport is six miles from the City Centre and is served by Brymon Airways which operate services to London/Gatwick and Heathrow, Newquay, Bristol, with links to Glasgow, Edinburgh and Paris, Dublin, Cork, Exeter, Channel Islands and Isles of Scilly and in jointly promoting London City Airport. High speed Inter-City 125 trains cover the 226 miles to London in approximately 3 hours and other services operate to South Wales, the Midlands, the North of England and Scotland. Excellent dual carriageway and motorway connections via the A38, M5 and M4 to London and the rest of the country. Brittany Ferries operate frequent lorry and passenger car ferries to and from Roscoff in Brittany and Santander in Spain.

The improvement in communications has facilitated the development of the City as a centre for conferences/meetings/exhibitions and tourism. A major new leisure/conference/exhibition centre, 'Plymouth Pavilions' will open in Spring 1991. There are good hotels in all categories to cater for all tastes, both within the City and in the attractive rural hinterland. Interesting features and tourist attractions abound, including the new Theatre Royal and Plymouth Dome, an exhibition centre which tells the complete story of Plymouth and her people by means of state of the art graphic techniques. The range of developments and quality of service offered in Plymouth was recognised by the "City of Excellence" award from the English Tourist Board in 1989.

Plymouth City Centre is modern and spacious having been completely rebuilt since the blitz. There is a great variety of shops in a compact area comprising 4 long wide parallel streets recently pedestrianised and bi-sected in the middle by the beautifully landscaped Armada Way leading up to the famous Hoe. In addition there is a covered pannier market and a shopping precinct. A few hundred yards away from the City Centre is the Barbican, famous for its picturesque harbour and narrow streets with little fashion houses, art galleries and antique shops. Opposite the Barbican a new Seaports Centre at Queen Anne's Battery hosts the many International Yacht Races based in Plymouth as well as accommodating those with more leisurely sailing interests.

The City has Intermediate Development Area status and actively encourages new forms of employment to establish in the area with advantageous grants, Concessionary rents and other incentives. Established firms such as Wrigleys, Toshiba, Becton-Dickinson and Plesseys report excellent staff-management relationships in the City.

Lord Mayor's annual allowance £5,440.

TOPOGRAPHY

Poole extends five miles northwards to the River Stour and to the east to the Borough of Bournemouth and lies to the north of a magnificent harbour, the second largest natural harbour in the world.

Poole's earliest Charter was granted in 1248 and in 1568 it was made a County of a Town by Elizabeth I; since then the Council has appointed a Sheriff annually.

Poole is a holiday resort possessing over four miles of golden sandy beaches with safe bathing.

The Borough is renowned for its great natural beauty mainly characterised by heathland and pine woods, at the gateway to the Purbecks, which it is the Council's policy to preserve and enhance. This has been achieved despite the fastest growth rate of any town in the country of over 100,000 population, which is not a new town or designated overspill area. The town's policy has been to create a well balanced economy and the influx of population has been for both employment and retirement reasons. The residential districts of the borough comprise Alderney, Bearwood, Bourne Valley, Branksome, Branksome Park, Broadstone, Creekmoor, Canford Cliffs, Canford Heath, Canford Magna, Hamworthy, Lilliput, Merley, Newtown, Oakdale, Parkstone, Penn Hill, Sandbanks, Talbot View, Turlin Moor and Wallisdown. The Council is completing the development for private housing of 533 acres of land it owns at South Canford Heath under a comprehensive scheme.

Poole Harbour and Poole Bay are world-renowned for their excellent yachting and the Royal Motor Yacht Club is situated in the harbour as well as seven other yacht clubs. The sandy bathing beaches from Branksome Dene Chine to Sandbanks are designated clean Eurobeaches having recently been rewarded the "Blue Flag" status and are among the most popular beaches on the south coast. A council bye-law prohibits dogs from the beaches between May and September. The Council maintains many parks and open spaces and owns the freehold of a holiday caravan estate of over 1,250 static holiday caravans.

Upton Country Park—and the adjoining Upton House are owned by the Council. There are, picnic areas, nature trails, bird hide, and a Countryside heritage centre with restaurant facilities. The Park, just a short drive from the town centre, has ample free parking. There is a small garden centre. Part of Upton House, a late 18th Century mansion of modest proportions is also open to the public at certain times. The Council has recently purchased a further 217 acres of tenanted farmland adjacent to the park which is being partly opened to the public on a phased basis over the next few years. Already a network of public footpaths has been created across the farmland and along the adjacent shoreline.

In addition to the traditional industries of pottery, boat building and fishing, the town has attracted industries concerned with many types of engineering, electronics, communication and automation, pharmaceutical products and chemicals, caravan production and food manufacturing. Servicing of both the on shore and off shore oil industry is assuming greater importance.

For several years a covered mall air conditioned central shopping and commercial redevelopment has been trading, which incorporates a new library and a self supporting indoor sports centre. A further extension of the development is planned for land recently acquired by the council. New sports centres have recently been opened in Broadstone and Canford Heath. There is a modern Arts Centre comprising the Wessex hall, seating 1,500 for concerts and 2,500 for flat floor functions, the 650-seat Towngate theatre, cinema, bars, coffee shop, art gallery and craft rooms for multi-arts use situated in the Town Centre near the bus and railway stations. A new 4 star hotel on a site owned by the council is to be built in the Town Centre. Traffic-free shopping conditions have been created in High Street. Commercial developments include a 375,000 square feet office block built for Barclays Bank International Ltd. Other main office developments in the Town are Royal National Lifeboat Institution HQ, Frizzells Insurance, American Express, Link House Publications and Boltons Insurance. The borough is twinned with Cherbourg and a ro-ro ferry for freight makes several journeys a day between Poole and Cherbourg conveying many exports for the continent. Imports, including dairy produce, wine, food and fridges, are for national distribution. A passenger and car ferry service runs on this route between June and September. British Channel Island Ferries operate their year round ferries to the Channel Islands from the Port.

An extension to the Civic Centre has recently been completed, allowing most departments of the council to be housed in one building.

The Council is the port health authority.

TOPOGRAPHY

Portsmouth is a thriving commercial centre, with a diversified economy. Several large companies have their UK and European Headquarters in the City, including IBM and Zurich Insurance. The Continental Ferry Port second only to Dover in the amount of cross channel traffic has roll-on/roll-off routes to Le Havre, St. Malo, Cherbourg, Channel Islands and Caen.

Communications by road and rail are excellent. The M275 gives direct access to the Ferry Port and City Centre, which houses the Guildhall, with its renowned concert and conference halls, and the Civic Offices. Nearby is the Commercial Road Precinct, with the New Cascades Shopping Centre.

The City has been the premier naval port of the United Kingdom since the sixteenth century, and its historical importance can be seen in its surviving fortifications, in the six museums maintained by the City Council—including Southsea Castle built by Henry VIII for the defence of the Solent and the adjoining D. Day Museum housing the world renowned Overlord Embroidery—and in the separate museums maintained by the Royal Navy and the Royal Marines. Nelson's Flagship, HMS Victory, is berthed in the Royal Dockyard. The Mary Rose, Henry VIII's warship which sank in battle in 1545, and was raised from the mud of the Solent is located in a museum in Portsmouth Naval Base. HMS Victory & Mary Rose are complimented by HMS Warrior, the world's first ocean going, iron-hulled armoured warship, and the sole surviving capital ship anywhere in the world. The vessel is permanently berthed in the H.M. Naval Base.

The seaside resort of Southsea overlooks the Solent and Isle of Wight. The 4½ mile seafront has two piers and is backed by an expanse of common, gardens, and tree-lined walks and includes a skatepark and entertainment complex. The Sealife Centre, the Pyramids leisure centre are added attractions. Music and the arts are flourishing with the Portsmouth Festival gaining in importance each year.

TOPOGRAPHY

Preston is an ancient town, being a borough by prescription and having been granted a Charter in 1179. There is good evidence that an earlier Charter was granted in 1100. The ancient Guild Merchant is celebrated every 20 years as a result of the Charter of 1179, and the last celebration was held in 1972. Preparation for further celebrations in 1992 have now commenced. H.M. Queen granted, in 1974, a Charter conferring on the district the status of borough and preserving the powers, privileges etc. of earlier Charters including the right to continue the celebration of the Guild Merchant.

Preston is a progressive industrial town with a wide range of industries. Considerable redevelopment of the town centre has taken place in recent years.

Following the closure of the Council-owned Preston Dock Undertaking in 1981, the local authority is now vigorously pursuing the redevelopment of the 450 acre Dock Estate for industrial, residential and recreational uses.

The Council makes an allowance of £6,090 per annum to the Mayor and £870 to the Deputy Mayor.

THE DISTRICT

The area under the control of the Council extends from Chaldon Herring in the west to Poole Harbour in the east and includes the islands within the Harbour. The Harbour and River Frome are renowned for their excellent yachting and associated facilities. The District is essentially rural in character with the resorts of Swanage and the villages of West Lulworth, Corfe Castle and Studland offering tourist attractions. The historical town of Wareham contains the Church of St. Martins which houses an effigy of Lawrence of Arabia, whose cottage is close by at Clouds Hill. The ancient earth walls around the town are a scheduled ancient monument.

The Isle of Purbeck is designated as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and a large part is within the Heritage Coast. The National Trust owns and maintains extensive areas of Purbeck including Corfe Castle, Brownsea Island and Ballard Down at Swanage.

The focal point of the whole district is the ancient castle at Corfe which, although now in ruins, has had extensive repairs carried out by the Ministry of Works to make it safe for the visiting public.

There are industrial sites at Holton Heath, Wareham, Swanage and Upton. The District is rich in natural resources such as Purbeck stone, ball clay and sand and gravel. The Wytch Farm oil-field, which when in full production will be the largest on-shore oil-field in the country, also contains large reserves of natural gas.

The Royal Armoured Corps gunnery school is situated between East Lulworth and Lulworth Cove, whilst at Bovington Camp there is the tank regiment and the only tank museum in England. At nearby Winfrith is the Atomic Energy Experimental Establishment which was constructed in 1957 and occupies some 1,100 acres.

Throughout the whole coastline can be found many interesting coves and inlets and the Dorset coastal footpath follows the coastline of the District. The Purbeck Hills afford the opportunity for many walks with panoramic views.

A dual use Sports Centre situated in Wareham offers a six lane swimming pool, squash courts, sports hall, restaurant and bar.

TOPOGRAPHY

Reading occupies a key point of the Thames Valley where the river is joined by the River Kennet and many major cross-country routes benefit from its river bridges. From the river banks to the hills above, the town is a busy, prosperous capital for the Royal and Beautiful County of Berkshire.

A settlement known as Reading has existed at least since the year 871 when it was recorded in the Anglo Saxon Chronicle that there was an attack by the Danes.

From being a town known for its beer, bulbs and biscuits, Reading nowadays is the headquarters of large national companies dealing in a wide range of products and particularly computers. The beer is still much in evidence though with a major, modern brewery at the southern edge of the town. Excellent links with the West Country, Heathrow Airport, Gatwick Airport and London are provided by the M4 Motorway, and high speed rail or coach services. The town is just 22 minutes by train from Paddington.

To match Reading's commercial growth the Borough Council has provided the town with a top class entertainments centre—The Hexagon—offering a wide variety of performances and functions and attended by well over a quarter of a million people each year.

Away from the busy centre the River Thames flows through Caversham, to the north of the town. The River Thames and River Kennet form key features of the area, and the Borough Council is taking positive steps to improve the river landscape, including the introduction of signposted river walks.

Reading has many fine public parks and open spaces occupying nearly 600 acres. The Forbury Gardens, close to the town centre, is laid out in the forecourt of Reading Abbey which was once the scene of much royal pageantry before its dissolution in 1539. Interesting ruins are now being restored.

Thames Side Promenade, stretching for one mile above Caversham Bridge, offers good views of the River Thames. The parks offer many sports facilities and extensive childrens' playgrounds. The town's Palmer Park has recently acquired a stadium and racing track.

Approximately 65 ha of allotments are also provided by the Council.

Rivermead is a new leisure centre beside the Thames featuring flume & wave pool, sports hall, indoor bowls centre and all-weather pitch.

The Central Swimming Pool provides a 33 metre swimming pool, 12'6" diving pool and a teaching pool. Further facilities are offered at Arthur Hill Pool and Fitness Centre.

Meadway Sports Centre has facilities that include a sports hall, swimming pool, squash courts and all-weather football pitch. South Reading Leisure Centre provides similar facilities plus a multi-purpose function room, bar and catering facilities, dance studio and crèche.

A 'Passport to Leisure' scheme of discounts for Reading residents and free use for the elderly, unemployed and people with disabilities already has 30,000 members.

The Museum and Art Gallery are located in Blagrove Street and contain an extensive collection of Roman remains from Silchester. Regular exhibitions by prominent local and national artists are held in the Gallery. The Town Hall, now restored to its Victorian splendour, is open again for use as an Arts and Information Centre.

Blake's Lock, a branch museum, displays the waterways and the history of the commercial and industrial life of the town.

The Borough Council is the major shareholder in Reading Transport Ltd which runs 141 buses and coaches. The passenger vehicles run over 4,000,000 miles and carry approximately 25 million passengers each year. The Department is based in Mill Lane.

The Council's housing functions include the management of 9,250 dwellings and the encouragement and coordination of private sector and housing association developments.

Some £8.5 million was spent in 1989/90 in improvements and repairs to the public housing stock, with a further £0.7 million being provided in renovation and insulation grants.

A variety of initiatives are being taken in order to combat problems relating to homelessness and to bring a wider range of housing choices within the reach of those with medium and low incomes.

The administrative headquarters of Reading Borough Council are at the Civic Offices in the Civic Centre area which contains these offices, The Hexagon, Broad St Shopping Mall, Police Station and Magistrates Court in a pedestrianised part of the town.

Special facilities offered at the Civic Centre include Housing Aid and Consumer Advice Centre. An Information Centre is based at the Town Hall, in Blagrove St.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough includes the town of Redditch and an approximately equal area of mainly green countryside with two villages. The town of Redditch has undergone considerable expansion and industrial and residential development since the designation in 1964 of a large part of the area as a New Town, to accommodate people and industry from the West Midlands conurbation. The New Town project was completed and the Development Corporation wound up in 1985, though a substantial level of development continues under ordinary legislation. An eventual population of 90,000 is planned.

Redditch is well situated between Birmingham and rural Hereford and Worcester and Warwickshire, within a short distance of the M5, M42/M6 Motorways. Construction of the M40, now completed as far as Warwick, is expected to further improve access to the South East within the next four years. Throughout the town are large areas of open space, the most extensive of which are the 900 acres Arrow Valley Park and the Pitcheroak Wood. The River Arrow runs through the town from the National Needle Museum at Forge Mill and ancient monument, Bordesley Abbey, in the north to the town boundary in the south-east. A wide range of recreation and leisure facilities are available.

Housing and industry in the new parts of the town are separately concentrated in individual estates in a largely rural setting.

The Town Centre has been extensively re-developed. With the completion of the final phase of development in 1982 the covered pedestrian shopping centre with adjacent car parks is one of the largest centres of its kind in Britain. The Green surrounding the Parish Church, in the old centre of the Town, has been carefully preserved and pedestrianised.

TOPOGRAPHY

The major part of the borough, which stretches from the North Downs to the Weald, lies in the Green Belt and is within easy reach of London and the South Coast. The borough contains extensive areas of open space and parkland. The controlled open spaces include Colley Hill, Queens Park, Redhill and Reigate Commons, Reigate Park, Reigate Heath, the Castle Grounds, Banstead Downs, Park Downs, Banstead Heath, Burgh Heath, Nork Park and Banstead Wood.

Throughout the borough there are ample facilities for football, cricket, bowls, tennis, golf, riding and other recreational pursuits.

The Reigate and Banstead District Council petitioned successfully for a Grant of Incorporation under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1972.

In the north of the Borough the village communities of Banstead, Chipstead, Hooley, Kingswood, Tadworth, Walton-on-the-Hill and Woodmansterne, and the Nork, Tattenhams and Preston areas provide good residential facilities in pleasant rural settings. The village of Merstham and the residential area surrounding it, the towns of Horley, Reigate and Redhill and the areas of Woodhatch and South Park, though predominantly of an urban residential nature, are well provided with delightful natural open spaces, and are situated at the foot of the North Downs.

Comprehensive re-development has taken place in the town centre of Redhill which includes a pedestrian precinct to complement the newly provided shops, theatre and library. Further town centre developments in the towns of Redhill and Reigate will commence in 1988. Horley is expanding with much residential property and the town centre has been partially redeveloped. Notwithstanding the town centre expansions the Borough Council's aim is to preserve the special character of the historic areas and to protect the rural environs of those towns.

Mayoral annual allowance: £9,040.

TOPOGRAPHY

Located in mid-Cornwall, the Borough extends from the Atlantic to the Channel coasts of the county, with two principal industries in tourism and china clay.

The main tourist industry is concentrated on the coastal regions. Newquay, on the north coast is one of the five most popular resorts in the British Isles, catering for some 1,000,000 visitors annually. Reputed to have the finest coastline and beaches in Europe, it is also one of Europe's leading surfing centres.

The south coast offers the attractive alternatives of the smaller and more intimate resorts of Fowey—renowned for its sailing activity—or Mevagissey, the old Cornish fishing village. Between these two popular resorts there are a number of beaches and coves clustered around the bay of St. Austell.

The administrative headquarters of the authority are based at the expanding town of St. Austell which is also the centre of the British china clay industry. The areas inland from the two coasts contain the bulk of the nation's china clay deposits, which are the subject of extensive mineral workings.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City of Rochester upon Medway is situated at the confluences of Rivers Thames and Medway, 30 miles east of London and 40 miles from the Channel Ports.

The City has the largest District Council population in Kent. It comprises the old city of Rochester, the first Charter of which was granted by Richard I in 1190; the former Royal Navy town of Chatham; and the larger part of the former Strood Rural District. The River Medway runs through the City, a tidal river enabling vessels conveying 7600 tonnes of cargo and drawing 8 metres of water to reach as far as Rochester Bridge. Rochester Castle and Cathedral are of particular interest and there are rich Dickensian associations in the district. The rural part takes in the Isle of Grain on the Hoo Peninsula. Chatham Docks (which are, in fact, in the Gillingham Borough Council's administrative area) has been established in part of the former Naval Dockyard and handles cargo traffic (including roll-on roll-off traffic).

The City is a busy commercial and industrial one, and the 3.64 hectares fully air-conditioned Pentagon Centre at Chatham, opened in 1975, caters for shoppers from a very wide area. A further 50,000 sq. m. of modern shopping floor space has been constructed in recent years, including a new Indoor Market in Chatham. New industrial estates have been developed at Frindsbury Peninsula and adjacent to Rochester Airport (including a retail park). The award-winning Lloyds of London offices are located near Riverside in Chatham.

Two areas of the City have been designated as part of the North West Kent Enterprise Zone. They include 23 hectares of the Temple Enterprise Estate, Knight Road, Strood; and 31.36 hectares of the Medway City Estate, Frindsbury, Strood. A third area (part of Chatham Maritime Estate, in the former Chatham Dockyard) was designated in the Summer of 1986.

The City Council is actively pursuing the Economic Development of the Area, and continues to fund the North Kent Development Office to promote the area and administer the Enterprise Zone.

A new container port is being developed on 160 acres of the former BP oil terminal at the Isle of Grain. The site is being developed as a container/bulk cargo handling terminal, and will be designed to accept the new generation of large "Port Panamax" container vessels. It will operate on a 24 hour, 7 day week, basis and state-of-the-art container handling technology will be employed to establish the terminal as the most modern in the U.K.

A British Gas terminal and a large power station are also situated on the Isle of Grain, and another large power station is situated at Kingsnorth (Hoo).

The old City of Rochester is now established as an important tourist centre and hosts 2 major annual festivals of international importance.

The Guildhall Museum, Rochester, contains exhibits on local history from Stone Age to modern times; civic plate and regalia are also exhibited there.

The Charles Dickens Centre at Rochester commemorates the associations which the area has with this author. The Centre—which contains talking heads, biographical displays and tableaux illustrating scenes from the writer's works—is housed in the annexe to Eastgate House, a fine Elizabethan building circa 1590.

A Trust has been set up to administer the historic part of Chatham Dockyard and it is rapidly developing into a major tourist attraction.

The council is affiliated with the frigate HMS Chatham, which was commissioned in May 1990 in the former Chatham Dockyard.

The Dickens Festival: held annually in late May/early June, it is the city's largest festival. For 4 days the streets are full of people in Dickensian costume, enjoying Dickensian entertainments.

The Medway River Festival is held annually, usually the first weekend in July, at which the City recognises its River Medway heritage—especially the connection with one of the cradles of the English Navy, Chatham Historic Dockyard.

The Council maintains an 18-hole golf course, two pitch and putt courses, two indoor bowling greens, a concert hall seating 950 and two large civic halls. There are indoor swimming pools at Hoo and Strood and Sports Centres at Lordwood (Chatham) and Strood. A Country Park covering 280 acres is nearing completion; a privately-operated dry ski slope and equestrian centre have been provided within the park together with an amenity lake which has fishing facilities. The Council is associated with the Gillingham Borough Council with the Black Lion Swimming Pool, which is sited within Gillingham and near the boundary with Rochester upon Medway. The Council owns Rochester Airport.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,300.

TOPOGRAPHY

Rother district encompasses the most easterly portion of the County of Sussex, excluding the urban area of Hastings Borough, and is divided in part from the County of Kent by the line of the river Rother.

The District's hinterland comprises, in the west and north, of rolling farm and woodlands, part of which is designated as being within the High Weald Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The farmlands of the east of the District are traversed by the river valleys of the Brede and Tillingham which meet the Rother and discharge into the sea at Rye Bay.

The flat grazing lands of the Pett, East Guldeford and Broomhill Levels at the District's south eastern shoreline are the western extremities of the Romney Marshes.

The channel coastal strip of 23 miles varies from pebble and shingle beaches, protected and held by extensive groyne works, in the west to the vast expanse of sand and dunes at Camber and Broomhill in Rye Bay adjoining the Kent border.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Rugby is situated on the east side of Warwickshire adjoining the Leicestershire and Northamptonshire boundaries and is in the centre of an extensive agricultural area. The Borough contains many mixed and dairy farms.

The M1 passes very close to the eastern boundary of the Borough and the M6 and M45 motorways run through the Borough. The M69 (Coventry-Leicester) motorway touches the northern boundary of the borough. Rugby is also served by inter-city electric trains to London and the North.

Rugby has a long association with the engineering industry and factories in the town include GEC Limited and Smiths Industries Limited. Rugby is the headquarters of the Rugby Portland Cement Company. Also within the Borough area is the car assembly plant of Peugeot-Talbot at Ryton-on-Dunsmore and the Marine & Industrial Gas Turbine Division of Rolls Royce Limited at Ansty.

In the centre of the town is a modern covered shopping centre and a multi-storey car park with space for over 500 cars with lifts to transfer shoppers to the shopping malls. Several streets have been repaved and pedestrianised to provide a pleasant shopping environment.

A unique feature in the Borough is the radio station. Its 12 masts, each 820 feet high spread over 920 acres; there are also about 40 shorter masts and over 1,000 poles for short wave transmissions.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough of Runnymede is situated in the north west of Surrey and includes Addlestone, New Haw, Ottershaw, Lyne, Longcross, Englefield Green, Virginia Water, the village of Thorpe and the towns of Chertsey and Egham. The boundary tends to follow the line of the Thames and although situated close to London the borough retains most of its rural character; on fine weekends the river and other public open spaces are popular attractions bringing many visitors to the area. The borough is now quartered by the M3 and M25 motorways. There is also a large area of Windsor Great Park within the borough and the meadows of Runnymede which are internationally famous because of their connection with Magna Carta. Three major memorials are adjacent to the Runnymede meadows, namely, the Magna Carta Memorial donated and maintained by the American Bar Association, the Kennedy Memorial erected by public subscription in memory of the late President of the United States of America on land donated by the Crown, and also the Royal Air Forces Memorial which was unveiled in 1953. In the village of Thorpe a private company has developed a Leisure Water Park utilising worked-out gravel pits which has been redeveloped and landscaped and provides in addition to other features rowing and water skiing courses.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Rushcliffe district includes almost all of the county of Nottinghamshire south of the river Trent. Whilst it is a mainly agricultural part of the county, it can also take pride in a modern coal mine at Cotgrave and one of the country's largest power stations at Ratcliffe on Soar. The headquarters of the Borough is at West Bridgford which contains some of the choicest housing to be found in the county.

The Borough is particularly fortunate in its recreational facilities, which include not only the internationally famous Trent Bridge Cricket Ground, but also the Forest Football Ground, and the international Water Sports Centre at Holme Pierrepont. The Borough can also boast of the county's first Joint Sports Centre at Bingham, and in 1976 opened a superb new Joint Use Leisure Centre at the Rushcliffe comprehensive school at West Bridgford.

In 1981, the Edwalton Golf Course, a 9 hole Municipal Course with par 3 course and pavilion, was opened.

The Council pay particular attention to good relations with the public. The Council also works closely with their Parish Councils particularly on planning and recreational matters.

The Authority is in an interesting area which is already accepted as one of the most desirable parts of the East Midlands. The Council is well equipped to develop its enormous potential to the full.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough is pleasantly situated in north-east Hampshire, close to the borders of Surrey and Berkshire and conveniently served by road and rail to London and the South Coast.

Rushmoor is an area well known not only in Britain but internationally because it comprises Aldershot, with its military camp established in 1854, and Farnborough, long noted as the birthplace of aeronautical research and development. In recent years there has been rapid expansion in housing development, light industrial estates and town centre redevelopment schemes, the last named including new shopping centres, multi-storey car parks and office development. To achieve balance, civic buildings, sports and recreational complexes also form part of the expansion to the extent that the area, although urban in character, is well-served with recreation grounds, parks and open spaces which, added to its convenient location will ensure that Rushmoor remains an attractive residential area, with excellent communications both internally and with outlying areas.

Many visitors are attracted to the district for the military pageants, and to the International Air Show at Farnborough. More locally, the area welcomes visitors from an area larger than its own to the Princes Hall where a wide range of productions are staged, and to the recreation centre. The Council's aim is to expand existing facilities of a recreational nature and in addition to the foregoing, the recently opened municipal executive-type golf course has been extended to provide 18 holes and a 9 hole pitch and putt course is under construction. A joint venture has recently been embarked on for the provision of an ice skating rink. The ice rink is now in use, we also have a ski school (Stainforth SkiCentre). A joint community leisure development is currently being undertaken with HCC at Warell School, Farnborough and Connaught School, Aldershot amounting to £2,000,000.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,800 (Deputy Mayor's Allowance £900).

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Rutland covers the whole of the area of the former Rutland County Council which was absorbed into Leicestershire upon re-organisation of local government in 1974. The area of some 125 square miles includes two market towns; the old county town of Oakham which has a Norman Castle Hall, Parish Church, and is the home of the famous Oakham School and the town of Uppingham, being the home of the equally famous Uppingham School and containing numerous attractive Ironstone buildings. There are, in addition, more than 50 villages within the District, most of which have an abundance of buildings constructed in the local Iron or limestone, roofed with thatch or Collyweston stone slate.

Rutland Water covers an area of more than 3,000 acres in the centre of the District and is a popular recreational centre with extensive sailing, fishing, nature study and picnic facilities.

Agriculture is the basic industry within the District; there are however a range of other industries including heavy and electrical engineering, cement making, plastics, clothing and hosiery.

Geographically the largest District in North Yorkshire, Ryedale comprises the rich agricultural belt, between Scarborough, York and Cleveland, and within its boundaries are a number of former hamlets close to the City of York. The District does not include any coastline, but its eastern boundary is only 3 miles from Filey and 5 miles from Scarborough, whilst its western extremity skirts along the ridge of the Hambleton Hills above Sutton Bank.

In the North, the district comes to within 10 miles of Teesside, and includes about one-third of the North York Moors National Park, whilst in the South, the administrative area encompasses the line of charming villages dotted along the summit of the East-West Section of the Yorkshire Wolds.

TOPOGRAPHY

St. Albans, the geographic and administrative centre of the District, is only 20 miles north-west of London and easily accessible by train and road. This leads to considerable pressure for development of the "Green Belt", but the Council's policy is to preserve and maintain the rural aspect wherever possible, though certain central areas are earmarked for commercial development.

Nearly 60,000 people live in St. Albans, which has a thriving business community and is a popular shopping centre, supported by regular Wednesday and Saturday street markets, originally granted by 1553 Royal Charter. It is an important tourist attraction with "Roman connection" and is named after Britain's first Christian martyr, Alban, executed in AD209 on the site of the present Cathedral. The Abbey and Cathedral Church is the focal point of the City, built between 1077 and 1088—and several landmarks survive of the major Roman town of Verulamium.

The Verulamium Museum houses a significant collection of Roman and late Iron Age material, much derived from excavations in the District.

To the north, Harpenden is an attractive and busy town—home of the world famous Rothamsted Experimental Station, while many of the other villages, Brickett Wood, Colney Heath, London Colney, Redbourn, Sandridge and Wheat-hampstead are designated as Conservation Areas, as is the St. Albans City Centre.

Historically the District's prime industry was printing. This trade is still widely practised but it is now supplemented by a wide variety of services including light engineering, electronic instruments, clothing manufacture, seed-growing. The National Pharmaceutical Association and the Royal National Rose Society have their Headquarters in the District.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,920 inflationary factor.

The Borough is mainly rural in character, the two principal towns being Bury St. Edmunds and Haverhill. Agriculture is a major factor but diverse manufacturing and service industries provide employment and contribute significantly to the prosperity and vitality of the area.

The historic town of Bury St. Edmunds, with charming streets filled with listed buildings and the ruins of the great Abbey, makes an ideal centre for touring the district; geographically, it is the hub of East Anglia and was recently the winner of the England in Bloom competition. The busy livestock and corn markets are the centre of marketing for miles around.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Scarborough Borough is a popular part of North Yorkshire and includes several miles of magnificent cliffs and beaches together with approximately 200 square miles of National Park—The North York Moors.

At Scarborough town are the considerable remains of a twelfth-century castle and at Whitby, overlooking the North Sea, stands the famous abbey.

Within the borough hundreds of acres of land have been laid out as parks and public gardens. The Council owns considerable estates and provides numerous facilities for the entertainment of visitors to the borough, including four swimming pools, a miniature railway, tennis courts, boating lakes, bowling greens, putting greens and cliff lifts, which together with several cafés and shops all produce revenue towards the relief of rates.

The Harbour Undertakings at Scarborough and Whitby and Public Market Undertakings are under Council control.

TOPOGRAPHY

Scunthorpe has become the focal point for development and expansion in South Humberside, emerging as both an industrial and commercial boom town.

Set high on a ridge overlooking the valley of the River Trent, the town is an "Industrial Island"—a mainly industrial town in a sea of high grade agricultural land.

Whilst the principal industry is still the manufacture of iron and steel, the industrial and commercial base of Scunthorpe has been widened and developed over the past few years to cover electronics, food processing, furniture and clothing manufacture. Major companies attracted to the area—Citizen, J. P. Woods, Hygena, McKay's Foods and Lloyds Bank—to name but a few, have made significant investments in Scunthorpe.

The former Normanby Park Steelworks is in the process of being reclaimed, a joint venture involving Scunthorpe and Glanford Borough Councils and the Department of the Environment. This new Lysaghts Enterprise Park will help satisfy the high demand for industrial and commercial development in Scunthorpe.

Communications are excellent in this region with direct road and rail links to all parts of the country. The M180 motorway provides easy access to all points of the compass via the M1, M62 and the Humber Bridge. There are major ports within 40 minutes drive at Hull, Immingham, and on the River Trent itself. The expanding Humberside Airport is just 15 miles away, providing a fast link with Europe and the rest of the UK. Indeed, the area is seen as a natural 'gateway' to Europe, which will be of importance in the run up to 1992.

One of the most surprising aspects of Scunthorpe to the newcomer is the town's environment. Great care has been taken to provide a pleasant environment in which to live and the town is famous for its parks and gardens, totalling over 900 acres. The large areas of native woodland, parks and gardens within the town are interspersed with quality housing which is still available at relatively low cost.

Two miles north of the town, the Council leases Normanby Hall Country Park. This complex includes the stately Normanby Hall, the newly opened Farming Museum and 350 acres of parkland which provide an ideal setting for the annual Horse Trials.

Leisure facilities within the town are excellent, including Scunthorpe Leisure Centre with freeform pool and flume slide, the Civic Theatre and Scunthorpe Museum.

Scunthorpe can also boast excellent educational facilities from nursery classes through to the North Lindsey College of Technology.

Exciting new retail developments are planned for Scunthorpe Town Centre, creating a glazed shopping mall at a cost of over £50 million.

With all the confidence being shown now by industry, commerce and residents, Scunthorpe will continue to prosper and develop well into the 21st century.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,860.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Sedgemoor is situated in the north of the county of Somerset. To the north it is bounded by the Bristol Channel and the Mendip Hills; the Quantock Hills forming the southern boundary. Its strategic position astride the M5 Motorway, A38 trunk route and the British Rail main line from Bristol ensures excellent communications with both the South West holiday areas and industrial and commercial centres in the Midlands and South East.

Sedgemoor is rich in tradition particularly—as its name recalls—with regard to the events leading to the suppression of the Monmouth rebellion in the 17th century when the ill-fated rebel forces were routed at the Battle of Sedgemoor, a short distance east of Bridgwater.

With the Quantock, Polden and Mendip Hills, including the famous Cheddar Gorge, Sedgemoor is well blessed with scenic amenities. Country pursuits and farming interests are catered for by two thriving weekly markets at Bridgwater and Highbridge with the added attraction of the famous annual Bridgwater Fair.

Sedgemoor is an Economic Development Authority. Burnham-on-Sea provides excellent seaside holiday resort amenities, with seven miles of golden beach and an excellent championship golf course. Industry and commerce are strongly represented along the M5 corridor between Bridgwater and Highbridge where several major national companies are based in the area.

Three rivers pass through the district, the Parrett, the Brue and the River Axe all of which run into the Bristol Channel.

The control of the navigation of the River Parrett below Bridgwater and of its eastern and western sea approaches is vested in the Sedgemoor District Council, who employ a full-time Harbourmaster to control the entry and passage of coastal and foreign vessels in the river.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,550.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is largely an agricultural area, containing many picturesque villages and some of the finest farmland in the country. Selby, which is the largest single township, is renowned for its splendid 900-year-old abbey. It is a busy port, where ships are built, and has a variety of industries. It is an important road and rail junction. Tadcaster is well known as a major centre of the brewing industry, and the palace of the Archbishop of York is at Bishopthorpe.

The University of York is located at Heslington, towards the eastern boundary of the district.

The area is traversed by three major rivers, the Ouse, Derwent and Wharfe, and is bounded by the Aire on the south.

Exploitation of the Selby Coalfield, the largest new coalfield in Europe, if not the world, is now well under way. The development will consist of five inter-connected shaft mines and a drift mine, from which the coal produced at all the shaft mines will be transported by rail to power stations. The coalfield is expected to produce 10,000,000 tonnes a year and will therefore make a major contribution to the national economy at a time when there can be no certainty of continuity of oil and gas supplies.

Drax power station is now complete. It has an output of 4,000 megawatts and is the largest and most modern coal-fired power station in Europe.

The unique combination of coast, countryside and township make for a very popular area for holidays and tourism. With such a wealth of amenity the district still provides expanding development opportunities in industry and commerce. Communication by road and rail is excellent and the construction of the M20 (Ashford—Folkestone link) has improved the route from London to the South-East, (72 miles). There is a fast rail link with London. The Continent is 22 miles and the Port and Harbour cater for passengers and private vehicles as well as roll-on and roll-off freight. The terminal for the Channel Tunnel will be located at Folkestone. TOPOGRAPHY

Shrewsbury is the County Town of Shropshire and has been specially favoured with many Charters, the earliest existing one being a Charter of Richard I dated 11th November 1189. The town has a wealth of timber framed and Georgian houses, steep narrow streets and little alleys gathered for protection within a great loop of the River Severn. The original castle (which doubtless replaced the Saxon fortress) was built by Roger de Montgomery under the order of William the Conqueror and was rebuilt and enlarged by Edward II. A large modern Cattle Market lies north of the town and is supported by a private abattoir, and in the town centre there is an up-to-date general market and shopping complex and modern swimming baths built to international standard. Constructed to service the town is a modern Crematorium, Sewage Works and a Works Depot.

The rural area covers some 210 square miles and is typical English countryside at its best. The Stiperstones, the Long Mynd, Wenlock Edge and the Wrekin are ancient hills surrounding Shrewsbury. Buildwas Abbey and the ruins of Haughmond Abbey are of notable historic interest and there are many historic mansions in this countryside and pretty groups of cottages of mellowed brick or plaster with half timbering or built of local sandstone. Many of the parish churches show a growth of architecture from Norman days and contain much of interest. North of Shrewsbury lies the site of the Battle of Shrewsbury (1403) where Henry IV defeated the rebellious Barons of the Welsh marches and Hotspur was killed. Nearly 2,000 years ago, the Romans constructed a branch of their famous Watling Street (the A49 South now runs parallel).

TOPOGRAPHY

Slough is pleasantly and conveniently situated on the main A4 London to Bristol road, on the M4 and on the main Western Region railway line, 20 miles west of London. There are almost 37,000 dwellings in the town, which has grown enormously during the past 30 years. There are 137 miles of roads, including part of the M4, three railway stations. London Heathrow Airport is five miles distant. The redeveloped town centre with a high street piazza, fountain and large and comprehensive covered shopping precinct, which has recently been the subject of an extensive refurbishment scheme, is a major regional shopping and social centre. The Cannon Movie Centre, a multi-screen cinema complex opened in 1987. The Council owns 33 parks, recreation and sports grounds, the largest of which is Upton Court Park comprising 180 acres. The Salt Hill Pleasure Ground of 33½ acres, Lascelles Playing Fields of 31 acres and Mercian Recreation Ground of 21 acres have pavilions and up to date changing accommodation. The Council has provided hard surface areas for several sporting activities and some of these can be floodlit for evening and winter use. In 1984 the Council opened a three court Indoor Tennis Centre. Bowling greens, cricket pitches, tennis courts (hard, grass and synthetic grass), hockey, football and rugby pitches are provided. The Council has established five very successful play leadership centres in various areas of the town one of which is situated in a dual use facility attached to a local school which includes a 4 court sports hall and synthetic multi-sports pitch. The Council's heated open-air swimming pool is in a garden setting of some 8 acres with extensive sunbathing lawns, children's splash pool, play area, etc. The Montem Sports Centre provides a comprehensive range of wet and dry sports activities. The Centre, which is owned by the Council and managed by a Board of Trustees and offers club facilities and a range of community activities such as snooker, badminton and dance tuition. The Council manages the Centre Indoor Swimming Pool. The Ice Arena, opened in 1986 has a 56m x 26m ice pad and seating for about 1,000.

The Council owns 14 permanent allotments sites with a total area of 62 acres. The Council has a substantial building programme for the erection of houses for rent and sale as well as a programme for the modernisation of older houses. A Crematorium adjacent to the Cemetery serves the district. Within the town there lies the great manufacturing centre known as the Trading Estate, comprising an area of over 600 acres of level land and accommodating approximately 300 factories. The Trading Estate owes its phenomenal development to Slough's commanding and accessible location. As a trading estate it was the first of its kind to be established in the country after the first world war, and has since been used as a model for others in this country and overseas.

TOPOGRAPHY

Southampton's natural advantages have attracted settlement from the earliest times. Roman and Saxon ports were succeeded by the mediaeval town from which has developed the present City. Its first charter was granted by Henry II and Southampton was created a County of itself in 1447. On 24th February 1964, Her Majesty the Queen raised the Town and County of the Town to the title and dignity of a City.

Southampton is one of the largest international ports in Britain which has enjoyed a further boost to its trade in containers, bulk products, general cargo as well as retaining a significant Deep-Sea passenger and cruise business.

There is extremely close liaison between Southampton City Council and Associated British Ports. Redundant dockland is now the focus of a number of private sector redevelopment projects which is creating new opportunities for expanding the city's economy at Ocean Village and Town Quay. The Council is also actively promoting new retail and commercial development within the City Centre and encouraging the expansion of its high technological industrial base.

The city's geographical position, together with its historical interest and first-class shopping facilities, make it a natural regional centre and attraction to visitors. The Council pursues an active policy of developing leisure services and is making a conscious effort to attract more tourists to the city. The Art Gallery and the four museums are just a few of the attractions operated by the Directorate of Leisure Tourism and Amenities.

Southampton is noted for its attractive, well-planned streets, and clean appearance. The Avenue is considered among the most noble approaches to any city. Public open spaces total over 261 hectares in extent, and comprise 9 per cent of the city's area. The Sports Centre has been described as the finest of its kind in England comprising 111 hectares in extent, it includes 2 golf courses, 5 football pitches, 4 hockey pitches, 5 cricket pitches, 12 tennis courts, 2 bowling greens, and crazy golf, putting courses, 2 cycle tracks, 3 artificial ski slopes, an all-weather running track, a synthetic pitch that is the largest in the country marked for two full-sized football and hockey pitches and four six-a-side football pitches, children's and canoeing lakes, play areas, etc., paddling pool and children's corner. Another valuable asset is The Common covering an area of 131 hectares in the central district of the city, and comprising mostly natural parkland. There are several attractive parks and facilities for tennis, football, cricket, bowls, hockey, etc., in the many recreation grounds. Riverside Park has an eighteen-hole pitch and putt course, and nearby Mansbridge Reservoir is used by local anglers. The Weston Shore is also a popular amenity with a 9 hole pitch and putt course and a BMX track. The Council administers the allotments in the City, which comprise 62 hectares.

The Council organises a year-round programme of major events including the Balloon and Flower Festival, a powerboat grand prix, a film festival and water-based events such as the Whitbread Round the World Race and the Round Europe Yacht Race.

The Council manages the Centre 2000, which has a short course swimming pool and three flume rides, and a seating capacity for 902 spectators. It also houses a Health Suite and Beauty Salon. The Guildhall provides a central entertainment/exhibition venue.

Southampton City Transport Co. Ltd. operates a bus undertaking comprising about 140 vehicles on routes throughout the city.

Present housing stock 20,235, whereof houses and flats built pre-1939—2,928; post-war—17,307 and acquired and managed—587. Total sold properties to date—8,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is the most southern part of Bedfordshire, bounded by Buckinghamshire to the west and Hertfordshire and Luton to the south and east. It comprises 80 square miles of mainly rural countryside, with the Chilterns escarpment rising sharply from a terrain which is predominantly gently rolling farmland.

On the western boundary of the district are Leighton Buzzard and Linslade, adjoining townships which existed independently in different counties until they amalgamated within Bedfordshire in 1965. Leighton Buzzard, with its 15th century pentagonal cross and street market, was mentioned as a market town in the Domesday Book. Mellowed 17th and 18th century houses are a feature of both towns and new shopping developments in Leighton Buzzard's town centre blends with the old. There are new residential developments in both towns and Leighton Buzzard has a pedestrian shopping precinct. There are flourishing light industries on its outskirts, where sand extraction has long been of importance.

Continuous human habitation reaching back 4,000 years can be traced at Dunstable, situated in the centre of the district where crossroads are formed by the ancient Icknield Way and Watling Street. The Priory Church of St. Peter is all that remains of the once-important Dunstable Priory, where the dissolution of Henry VIII's marriage to Catherine of Aragon was pronounced by Archbishop Cranmer. The town is now a thriving centre of the motor industry and lives up to its modern image with two fine pedestrian shopping precincts, a civic hall and one of the most up-to-date recreation centres in the country. There are also recreation centres in Linslade and Houghton Regis.

Adjoining Dunstable is Houghton Regis where 2,457 houses built by the Greater London Council have now been taken into the district council's housing stock. In addition, there are 18 rural parishes within the district.

Direct rail links, the M1 and A5 make the district easily accessible from London and Birmingham, and there is plenty to attract visitors. Dunstable Downs provide the spectacle of gliding and hang gliding, as well as opportunities for walking and picnics. Whipsnade Zoo is also situated on the Downs and Luton Hoo stately home is in the south of the district. The canal at Linslade is popular with boaters and anglers and train rides on the old sand-carrying narrow gauge railway at Leighton Buzzard is a popular attraction.

TOPOGRAPHY

Completely surrounding the City of Cambridge, South Cambridgeshire enjoys a buoyant local economy within an essentially rural environment. Comprised of 100 Parishes, many containing settlements of considerable charm, the District has traditionally relied on agriculture and associated industries for its economic base. While the high quality of agricultural land that is to be found throughout the District remains of great importance, the area has experienced rapid change in recent years. A combination of high quality environment, an internationally renowned University, and the emergence of an active high technology sector, plus the development of improved road and rail links with the South East, have resulted in the District emerging as an attractive location for new firms, particularly those involved in Research and Development activities. A number of nationally renowned Research Laboratories are already located in the area, and with the continuing development of the Cambridge Science Park activity in this field remains high.

Main drainage is in operation in the majority of the villages, and every parish has a piped water supply.

A weekly collection of refuse from all parishes is undertaken by direct labour and a cesspool-emptying service on a rechargeable but partially subsidised basis is available to unsewered areas.

Civic expenditure allowance £3,650. Chairman's personal allowance: £650.

TOPOGRAPHY

South Derbyshire is principally agricultural. The Trent Valley provides sites for gravel extraction, angling and other recreational pursuits.

The decline of mining and pottery manufacture in Swadlincote has been replaced by a diversity of engineering and manufacturing industry including rubber, chemicals, lingerie and steel fabrication.

Public Services for the District are administered from Swadlincote and there are a large number of small firms with a wide range of trades.

Considerable housing, community and industrial development is likely as a result of the siting of the Toyota car manufacturing plant at Burnaston.

One of the only two inland canal ports to survive is located at Shardlow in the north east extreme of the district where an active boat building yard exists. With the rapid increase in canal boating, Shardlow is becoming a popular centre for boating enthusiasts. Melbourne, a town of 3,760 inhabitants is the second largest community in the district and is centred within a fertile market gardening area. The town is renowned for its Hall and Norman Church, as well as being the birth place of Thomas Cook, founder of the world wide travel agency.

Centrally situated geographically stands Repton, the former 7th century capital of Mercia, with its notable medieval church and well-known public school.

TOPOGRAPHY

The resident and visitor both benefit from the facilities offered by this thriving commercial, residential, shopping and holiday centre. Situated on the Essex bank of the Thames Estuary with a shore frontage of seven miles from Leigh in the west to Shoeburyness in the east, this modern town is served by two rail links from Liverpool Street and Fenchurch Street.

Flanked by a modern motel and conference and exhibition centre, the Airport, which is now owned by the Southend Borough Council Airport Ltd. and managed by Airports UK Ltd., is one of the busiest in the country with full customs and servicing facilities and its own industrial complex with over 100 tenants. Scheduled daily passenger services to Paris, Rotterdam, Ostend, Billund (Denmark), Brussels and the Channel Islands are operated by the three airlines based at Southend, British Air Ferries, Princess Air and Regionair, together with regular freight and express courier services to other major European centres. There are also five flying schools/clubs based at the airport.

The continuing process of rebuilding has provided the town with a modern multi-storey office centre, pedestrianised and car park linked shopping areas and improved cliffs, esplanades roads, etc., and over 10,000 council-maintained parking spaces.

From obtaining the Borough Charter in 1892, Southend-on-Sea achieved its present size in 1933. County Borough status was enjoyed from 1914 to 1974.

A Civic Precinct has been created, incorporating Council Offices, Civic Suite, Courts, College of Technology, a modern Central Library and Police Headquarters.

Eight local Yacht Clubs demonstrate that excellent water-borne facilities exist for the keen amateur sailor in the sheltered estuary. Other sports well catered for in the Council-owned 1,020 acres of parks and open spaces are football, cricket, rugby and hockey, tennis, and bowls. A public 18-hole golf course at Belfairs is complemented by the private course at Thorpe Bay. The town has three public swimming pools. A new public park on land at Shoebury vacated by the Ministry of Defence was opened in 1986.

The Council's Cliff's Pavilion sees the full range of entertainment from opera to wrestling, from variety to dancing, plus exhibitions and conferences, together with excellent catering facilities.

The Council also owns and manages the foreshore. The bus undertaking was privatised in 1986 in accordance with the Transport Act 1985.

Council developed industrial estates have been created at Eastwood, Southend and Shoeburyness.

The Council has a fund for the provision of hospitality to delegates to conferences held in Southend-on-Sea.

TOPOGRAPHY

South Hams District enjoys exceptional natural advantages, including within its boundaries the southern part of Dartmoor National Park, the South Devon Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and fifty-one miles of coastline. Its historic character is reflected in the thirty-one Conservation Areas which it contains, two of which—Totnes and Dartmouth—are designated as outstanding by the Department of the Environment.

The South Hams is a major tourist area, with the resorts of Dartmouth and Salcombe—the latter one of the country's foremost boating and yachting centres—and numerous coastal attractions such as Slapton Sands, other beaches and coves.

At the same time, the authority is aware of the need to come to terms with pressures for change. The fastest-growing town is Ivybridge, where continuing provision for industrial development is taking place, along with a new leisure centre and town shopping centre.

Twinning. Ross-on-Wye: Betzdorf (Germany); Conde-sur-Noireau (France).

TOPOGRAPHY

The District is large and predominantly rural with a widely dispersed population. An unusual feature is that the City of Hereford, which is a completely separate administrative District, is completely contained within its perimeter. The only other town of any size is Ross-on-Wye which has nearly 6,500 residents.

Much of the natural beauty of the area is associated with the River Wye which has been a popular tourist attraction since the 18th Century. Wordsworth loved it and wrote of it. A local benefactor, John Kyrle, known as the "Man of Ross", was a friend of Alexander Pope who eulogised him in verse. It was he who employed bell to rebuild the ancient sandstone Market House in Ross. Ross is known as the "Gateway to the Wye" and the town and its environs provide an excellent centre for touring the Welsh Mountains, the Royal Forest of Dean, the Cotswolds and the Midlands Counties.

The District is very rich in history and has a number of ancient fortifications, Roman camps and old churches, including those of Kilpeck and Dore Abbey. There are legends of King Arthur, Caractacus and Owen Glendower and, in later times, of Cromwell's armies. Part of Offa's Dyke, which has become a popular walking route, runs through the District. The southern area of the district, which includes Symonds Yat, a famous beauty spot, is an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty—but the remainder of it is hardly less beautiful. Many outdoor activities are available, including fishing and golf. There is a public swimming pool and picnic and play areas in Ross. A number of excellent hotels provide good accommodation and food. Wye salmon, Hereford beef and cider have a world-wide reputation.

The M50 in the South of the District provides ready access to South Wales and, via the M5 and M6, to the Midlands and the North. The M4 for London and the M5 for the South West are conveniently accessible via the Severn Bridge. The Council, with CoSIRA, has encouraged small businesses in several localities, and particularly in Ross-on-Wye at the Ashburton Trading Estate.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Spalding, once an inland port on the banks of the River Welland, is a typical country market town; and it may still be said that Spalding is an handsome town, as James Camden, the historian described it in the 16th century.

Modern Spalding is skilfully blended with the ancient town; the old houses, some of them Georgian, exist alongside the modern shops and houses. In recent years there has been much planned development in Spalding; the expansion continues.

The surrounding tulip fields which have made the town world famous are the shop windows of a thriving bulb and horticultural industry.

No less important is Spalding's place in agriculture. It is the centre of some of the most fertile land in the country.

It is also the focal point of one of the most important land drainage systems in the country, with a network of waterways, controlled by skilled engineers, which plays a vital part in keeping the district immune from flooding by the water which rushes down to the sea from inland hills.

The two-mile Coronation Channel, a by-pass of the river, with its modern electrically-operated sluices, is a masterpiece of engineering, and is an integral part of the Welland Major improvement scheme which is taking place from the Wash at Fosdyke to Stamford, a distance of 30 miles.

The former Rural District of Spalding comprises 10 civil parishes and extends to 87,758 acres around the market town of Spalding.

This is a countryside of flat, low-lying fens, intersected by slow-flowing rivers and dykes, and possessing a distinctive charm and fascination. As in Holland scientific methods of drainage have provided a vast acreage of alluvial soil which is justly claimed as the richest in England.

These fenlands are noted for their magnificent old churches. At Crowland are the remains of its famous abbey and the fourteenth century triangular bridge, the only one of its kind in England.

The former Rural District of East Elloe covers an area of 84,595 acres and comprises 12 parishes.

The main centres of population are situated along the road between King's Lynn and Spalding. North of this are the marshes and southwards lie the fens. The former name of the administrative county, Parts of Holland, indicates the similarity between this scenery and that of the Netherlands. Once a vast tract of fever-infested swamps, this area has been systematically drained so that it now provides some of the richest agricultural land in all England.

The open countryside, with its bracing air, its bulb-fields in spring and its thriving farms and fine old churches, has a characteristic charm and offers much of interest to those who visit it.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the south-west of the County of Lincolnshire, South Kesteven covers 364 square miles of largely unspoilt rural and agricultural countryside. The landscape is interesting and varied from the Trent Vale in the north-west, the Lincolnshire limestone cliff running north to south, the fenlands in the east and the uplands on which once lay the Kesteven Forest. Strategically sited within the District are the three important and historic towns of Bourne, Grantham and Stamford.

With a population of 8,722 Bourne is the smallest of the three towns in the District and is a thriving market centre for the surrounding area. Grantham (pop. 32,226) with a Royal Charter dating back to 1463, is now the second largest town in Lincolnshire and is the District's administrative centre. Stamford (pop. 17,412) received its first Royal Charter in 1461 and with its wealth of stone buildings of architectural and historic interest and being the first conservation area designated in England contains many favoured tourist attractions.

The "Deepings" in the south-east of the District is a rapidly expanding urban group of Market Deeping and Deeping St. James. The visitor will find much to please and interest in South Kesteven, from the natural rural landscape to the antiquity of Stamford; the historical associations of Grantham and Woolsthorpe by Colsterworth with Sir Isaac Newton; to the imposing ancestral homes of the Earl of Ancaster at Grimsthorpe Castle, and of Lord Brownlow at Belton House. Leisure Centres are situated at Deeping St. James and Grantham.

Communications are excellent, with both Grantham and Stamford just off the A1 and Grantham an important station on the main Kings Cross/Edinburgh railway line (now served with electrified new High Speed Trains). The District is therefore well situated for access to the industrial Midlands, East Coast ports, to London and to the North. The Council's vigorous industrial policy has provided sites in strategic locations in and around Grantham, Bourne and Market Deeping. This has resulted in a diversity of employment and opportunity, production ranging from earth moving equipment to marine engines, shoes, specialist tractors, trailers, printing, publishing and book distribution with exports in many industries to all parts of the world. The largest cold store in Europe nestles in the countryside and many country and cottage industries flourish in the rural villages.

TOPOGRAPHY

South Lakeland embraces an area of 620 sq. miles much of which lies within the boundaries of the Lake District National Park and to the south east, also extends into the Yorkshire Dales National Park. The scenery varies throughout the district, ranging from smooth rolling hills and moorlands in the east, to towering mountain peaks at the foot of many of which lie lake waters (numbered amongst which is 10½ mile Lake Windermere, the longest in the country) to the north; the south-west is bounded by the Morecambe Bay Estuary.

There are four market towns within the area—Kendal, Sedbergh, Kirkby Lonsdale and Ulverston, the former being the larger of the four and the administrative centre of the district lying in a valley through which the River Kent flows; Ulverston, situated to the south-west, is a few miles inland on the Furness peninsula. Sedbergh, to the south-east of Kendal, is within the Yorkshire Dales National Park and this area differs—as does that of the whole Lune Valley in which are located the villages of Dent, Garsdale and the town of Kirkby Lonsdale—from the remainder of the district in that the terrain is of a more rugged description having moorland and rounded hills. Apart from the aforementioned, South Lakeland contains the seaside resort of Grange-over-Sands on the Morecambe Bay Estuary and such well-known villages as Windermere, Bowness on Windermere, Ambleside, Conistone, Hawkshead and Grasmere are to be found amongst the wooded fells or by the shores of the lakes to the north of Kendal.

Agriculture, particularly sheep farming, and tourism are the principal industries undertaken within the district although such light industries as shoe, carpet and hosiery manufacture are to be found in Kendal with a fine chemicals plant, leather tannery, electrical engineering and sheet metal works amongst the industries of Ulverston.

Chairman's annual allowance: £10,430 (including a proportion for council and conference hospitality).

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is predominantly rural, agricultural and residential with some industrial development. It borders with Oxford in the north and Reading in the south. There are 86 rural parishes and 4 towns, viz. the ancient market town of Wallingford near the centre; Henley-on-Thames, famous for its Royal Regatta, on the southern boundary; the market town of Thame on the northern boundary and Didcot on the western boundary. The Chiltern Hills, with their extensive beechwoods, stretch across the southern half of the district and a large part of this has been designated an area of outstanding natural beauty. Much of the River Thames from Oxford, through the Goring gap, to Henley is within the district. The M40 motorway crosses the northern part of the district and access to the M4 is only a few minutes from the southern boundary. There are main line railway stations (Western Region) at Goring, Cholesey and Didcot and a branch line serves Henley.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of South Ribble is at the heart of central Lancashire and is an area immediately south of the river Ribble. It consists of three main urban areas at Bamber Bridge, Leyland and Penwortham which are surrounded by many villages with parish communities in pleasant countryside. Road and rail communications are excellent; both the main north-south motorway (M6) and rail routes pass through the area as does the M61 giving access to Manchester and Yorkshire.

South Ribble is an ideal central place to stay for visits to established tourist areas such as the seaside resorts to the west, the Lake District to the north, and the Lancashire/Yorkshire border country to the east.

Considerable development has been carried out by the former Central Lancashire Development Corporation. Employment areas containing advanced factory units are well established at Walton Summit, Bamber Bridge and Moss Side, Leyland. Borough Council initiatives have enabled industrial estates to become established at Braconash Road, Leyland and Liverpool Old Road, Walmer Bridge. Small industrial 'starter' units at Heaton Street, Leyland have also been provided by the Council. Extensive Leyland vehicle development has taken place involving a Truck Assembly Plant at Farington and Test Track at Moss Side. Housing has also been given high priority by the Development Corporation and the Borough. General Improvement Areas and Housing Action Areas have helped to ensure that the older centres of population are not overlooked. New building by the Council has essentially been sheltered accommodation, certain groups being built specifically for sale. A Motel and Conference Centre is situated at Leyland and additional hotel accommodation is available in other parts of the borough.

A leisure centre at Leyland includes a modern swimming pool and learner pool and caters for a wide range of sporting interests. A leisure centre is also located at Bamber Bridge and the council also operates joint-use leisure centres at Penwortham and Lostock Hall. Leisure pools were constructed at the Bamber Bridge and Penwortham leisure centres and became available for public use in the summer of 1990. More traditional recreation facilities take the form of three large areas of parkland and several recreation grounds spread throughout the Borough. A Museum and Exhibition Centre occupies the restored 16th Century old grammar school building in Leyland and the British Commercial Vehicle Museum is also located at Leyland. The restored Worden Hall, Leyland, accommodates the Lancashire Branch of the C.P.R.E., Worden Arts Centre, Craft Centre and a coffee shop.

The Borough has twinned with Kreis Schleswig-Flensburg, a district in North Germany immediately south of the Danish frontier.

The Civic Centre at Leyland houses all the departments of the Council and contains a unique banqueting suite designed not only to provide a Council Chamber and Meeting Rooms but to fulfil a dual role by providing meeting rooms and banqueting facilities for private hire to the public.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District is situated in the south-western part of Shropshire. It is bordered by the Welsh county of Powys in the west and the county of Hereford and Worcester in the south. The district represents 30% of the area of the county but has only 10% of the population.

It is one of the most beautiful areas in England. The scenery varies from the most southern grouse-moor in the country to picturesquely wooded trout-streamed valleys; gently rolling arable plains to craggy hills: South Shropshire can arguably offer the greatest variety of countryside anywhere in the country. In fact 80% of the District is in the Shropshire Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty but the other 20% is not only attractive also — it has the added advantage of containing several of the handsome and historic towns and villages that are scattered through the District.

There is a wealth of buildings of architectural and historic interest, manor houses, castles and attractive villages. Ludlow, the largest of the towns, with its castle, exceptionally fine parish church, black and white buildings and Georgian streets has been described as the most beautiful and distinguished country town in England and was at one time the seat of government for the Welsh Marches. The small towns of Bishop's Castle, Church Stretton, Cleobury Mortimer and Clun are all well worth a visit.

The district is attractive to the tourist and holiday maker not only because of its scenic and historic interest but also for racing at Ludlow, gliding on the Long Mynd, fishing, riding and other sports. But South Shropshire is more than a pretty face. It is a place where business can thrive. Large divisions of international and national concerns operate successfully: The Council has a healthy attitude to commerce and industry — it is in favour of both. There is a continuing factory provision programme both in conjunction with Government bodies and with the Council active on its own: the private sector is also active.

In housing too the choice is perhaps unsurpassed. One of the largest private rented sectors in the country, council houses, housing associations, shared ownership, retirement bungalows, historical houses, starter homes, stately homes are all in South Shropshire. 800 years of housing. Millions of years of scenery. Who could ask for more?

TOPOGRAPHY

South Somerset has been aptly described as the centre of the mid-west, placed as it is, half way between the Bristol and English Channels. A network of main roads links South Somerset with Devon, Dorset and Wiltshire and the M5 motorway is nearby.

South Somerset is predominantly an agricultural area with a countryside of diverse and unspoilt scenery, undulating, wooded and well watered.

The villages have picturesque groupings of cottages, many built of the local stone and with traditional thatched roofs. There are large residences and manor houses dating from Tudor and Georgian times and which have been the seats of notable families. The Churches display features of considerable architectural merit and interest with some fine examples of the handsome towers for which Somerset is justly famous.

South Somerset is a land of contrast from its quiet villages, historic features such as the ancient hilltop settlement of South Cadbury, reputed to be the "Camelot" of King Arthur, to the busy South Somerset towns with their excellent shopping and trading facilities.

In addition to providing superb scenery, some of the best coarse fishing waters in England are to be found in the valley of the River Parrett and its tributaries, the Ile and Yeo, and also the Rivers Brue and Tone.

Yeovil is a fast growing industrial and commercial town in South Somerset. It has been a centre of leather and glove making for several hundred years, and today the industry produces leathers not only for gloving but also for clothing and shoe upper leathers.

The Westland Group of companies producing helicopters, and pressurisation equipment for aircraft is situated in Yeovil.

The South Somerset District Council is encouraging the growth of all types of industries on its various trading estates in the district.

There are excellent recreational facilities both in the town of Yeovil and other parts of South Somerset; the Yeovil Recreation Centre being well known in the south-west as an athletics centre.

The civic Octagon Theatre, provides theatrical shows, concerts, cultural activities, the arts, exhibitions, film shows.

The area has much to offer and this makes South Somerset a pleasing place in which to live and work.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district, which stretches from the boundary with Stafford in the north and from Stourbridge in the south, is situated on the northern and western side of the West Midlands conurbation and contains within its boundaries a large part of the West Midlands Green Belt. Much of the district comprises good agricultural land but there is extensive residential development at Codsall, Great Wyrley, Penkridge and Wombourne where overspill families from Wolverhampton have been accommodated. Heavy industry is located at Four Ashes and there are existing light industrial estates at Cheslyn Hay, Great Wyrley, Penkridge and Wombourne. The district is well known for its beautiful countryside and contains such well-known open spaces as Kinver Edge and Highgate, Penn and Shoal Hill Commons. Part of the Cannock Chase is within the district together with the recently developed Country Park at Baggeridge. These areas are extensively used for recreation purposes by the people living in the nearby conurbation. Five dual-use sports centres are in operation at Kinver, Codsall, Wombourne, Cheslyn Hay and Penkridge. The district is an important source of sand and gravel for the industrial Midlands.

TOPOGRAPHY

Stafford Borough is a thriving and developing industrial and commercial centre. With two links into the national motorway system, and excellent inter-city rail facilities and international air-terminals at Manchester and Birmingham it finds itself at the heart of the country's communications network. When reorganisation of local government took place in 1974 the former ancient Borough was greatly enlarged by merger with the rural districts of Stafford and Stone, and the urban district of Stone.

Now embracing an area of 230 square miles of Mid-Staffordshire with a population of over 120,000 the Borough has two large communities, those of Stafford (56,000) and Stone (12,000) which are surrounded by 36 rural parishes. New development of every description has made its impact in this Borough; new road systems, industrial and commercial developments of a high calibre, a Civic Centre, schools, colleges and District General Hospital with facilities second to none in the Country. Its many attractive features include a wide range of shops, excellent recreational facilities, ancestral homes, historic churches and beautiful countryside. Although the Borough has expanded in more recent years, it has retained all its links as a heritage centre, its charter rights and privileges and to the visitor it offers an interesting and enjoyable stay.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,410.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Staffordshire Moorlands District covers the north eastern part of the county of Staffordshire. The District is bounded in the west by the Potteries Conurbation and by the Counties of Cheshire and Derbyshire to the north and east. Much of the Staffordshire Moorlands is an area of great natural beauty and one third of the District is contained in the Peak District National Park.

The population of the District is just under 98,000 of which nearly half live in the three main towns of Biddulph, Cheadle and Leek and the remainder in villages ranging from the large commuter settlements on the edge of Stoke-on-Trent to the small moorland villages in the Peak District.

In addition to farming and other industries linked with the land there are textile, pottery, cement, copper and colour factories and works, and sand and gravel quarries. While Leek is the Headquarters for the Britannia Building Society and Kerrygold.

Particular places of interest are Thors Cave in the Manifold Valley, Brindley Mill at Leek, a flint mill at Cheddleton and the Caldon Canal with its terminus at Froghall. While Alton Towers famed for its magnificent gardens is a leisure park of international repute.

The Staffordshire Moorlands countryside is as beautiful as it is varied, ranging from the rugged grandeur of the moors and rock outcrops, to the wooded river valleys which cut through the District. The District is a paradise for walkers of all abilities and the Manifold Valley path can be easily negotiated by those in wheel chairs. Leisure activities include rock climbing, hang-gliding and rambling in the Peak District, sailing on Rudyard Lake, cruising on the Caldon Canal and angling in the lakes and rivers; there are excellent golf courses in the District and swimming pools at Biddulph, Cheadle and Leek.

TOPOGRAPHY

Located mainly on the North Bank of the River Tees the Borough also embraces Thornaby and Yarm to the South and brings together the major towns of Billingham, Stockton and Thornaby into one unit. The Borough is contrasting in character, ranging from a quiet agricultural scene to the clamour of heavy industry. The river has for a long time played a vital part in the prosperity of the area and whilst industry still relies upon it at its eastern end, there is an increasing awareness of its potential as a source of pleasure and recreation. Much of Stockton's existing prosperity owes its origin to the famous Stockton and Darlington Railway which was the first public passenger railway in the world.

The Borough is located at the heart of Cleveland County's communications with the trunk roads A19 and A66 passing through it. These roads connect directly with the A1, M1 and M62 roads to the south and the A1M to the north. Both air and rail passengers are catered for very well. Tees-side airport lies just ten miles south-west of the centre of Stockton and regular daily scheduled services operate to many destinations including London (Heathrow). By rail, fast Inter-City 125 High Speed Trains operate from Darlington, just to the West of the Borough, and London can be reached in just over 2½ hours. A further '125' service exists on a daily basis linking Stockton and London direct.

Stockton Borough has excellent shopping facilities. The main centre being at Stockton which also has a market operating three times a week dating back to 1310 and is today one of the largest in the North-East. Other important shopping centres exist within the Borough at Billingham, Thornaby and Yarm, each with their own distinctive character providing the shopper with a wide range of goods.

TOPOGRAPHY

Stoke-on-Trent (Staffordshire), familiarly known as The Potteries, stands on the River Trent, 157 miles north of London. The present municipal area is 22,916 acres (36 square miles), with a population 246,900 (1986). The City is the main centre of employment for the half million population of North Staffordshire. It is the largest clayware producer in the world (chinaware, earthenware, sanitary goods, refractories, bricks and tiles), and has a large coal mining output drawn from one of the richest coalfields in Western Europe, with proved reserves exceeding one thousand million tons. The City has steelworks, foundries, chemical works, engineering plants, rubber works, paper mills and a very wide range of manufactures including textiles, furniture, electrical goods, vehicle components, toys, machinery, plastic materials, metal stampings, glass and glazes.

Extensive reconstruction has been carried on since 1930. A unique feature of the City is that it has six 'centres' and more shops and public halls than other areas of comparable size. The City was formed by the federation in 1910 of the separate municipal authorities of Tunstall, Burslem, Hanley, Stoke-upon-Trent, Fenton and Longton, all of which are now combined in the present City of Stoke-on-Trent. Apart from Fenton, each town has its own public buildings and amenities, but all civic administration is controlled by the City Council.

In recent years, a massive programme of environmental improvements has been undertaken in Stoke-on-Trent which is transforming the appearance of the City. The most notable project is the Land Reclamation programme which has brought hundreds of acres of derelict land back into use for public open space, industry and housing. Central Forest Park, a gently rolling expanse of grass, young trees and wildflowers, was constructed on the site of a defunct colliery—an area previously dominated by huge black pit mounds and whose only uniformity was its utter dereliction. It is a scheme which has deservedly brought national and international acclaim to the City. Similarly, the Westport Lake Park scheme with its artificial beach, visited by thousands on sunny days, has won national awards and commendations.

Boating, canoeing and fishing are catered for here and the nature study area is proving very popular with local schools.

To complement the reclamation schemes, the grime of decades has been removed from dozens of the fine buildings in the city, revealing their original beautiful colours and high-lighting their architectural features.

The reclamation programme, together with the Smoke Control Programme, has made the City a pleasant place to live in. New roads, main drainage schemes, new schools and improved street lighting all feature in programmes for improving the City's facilities. They will enable the City to realize to the full its potential as a major centre for commerce and industry.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Stratford-upon-Avon District is a mainly rural area covering almost half of Warwickshire. It embraces a wide variety of landscapes stretching from the Cotswolds in the south to the suburban fringe of Birmingham in the north. There are flourishing industrial estates in the towns of Stratford-upon-Avon, Alcester, Shipston-on-Stour, Southam and Wellesbourne. The headquarters of a large national insurance company and of an international firm of building contractors are sited in Stratford-upon-Avon. Elsewhere throughout the District, agriculture is the predominant industry.

The District, and particularly Stratford-upon-Avon, is a focal point for both national and international visitors, attracted by many features associated with William Shakespeare. The town is one of the world's principal tourist centres and is well provided with hotel accommodation of the highest standard suitable for use as an expanding off-season conference market. As well as Shakespeare's Birthplace and other properties associated with his family, the town is also the home of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, one of the best known and most successful drama companies in the world. A festival containing productions of several Shakespeare plays runs for nearly ten months every year. A highlight is the performance given on the night of the "Birthday Celebrations" which take place in late April—an occasion when the Ambassadors of many countries visit the town to raise their countries' flags in tribute to the playwright and his work.

The District is proud of its centrepiece and also of the unique surroundings in which it is set. Containing all that is most English about England, it is a prosperous and bustling community.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated on the edge of the southern Cotswolds the western half of the district comprises part of the Severn Vale with the River Severn forming the western boundary, and the eastern part consists of the Cotswold escarpment offering some of the loveliest scenery in the county. The main towns of Stroud, Dursley and Nailsworth offer good facilities for shopping and entertainment. A scheme for the redevelopment of part of Stroud town centre, incorporating pedestrianisation, additional shops, and multi-storey car park is progressing. Other residential centres and villages such as Stonehouse, Painswick, Wotton-under-Edge, Minchinhampton, Berkeley, Chalford and Bisley add to the charm of the area. Extensive commons and National Trust open spaces give considerable scope for the tourist, and rambler in particular, with attractive views from the hills and beacons. Whilst the area has long been noted for cloth making the industrial aspect is diverse including light engineering, plastics, electronics, food products, pianos, fibre board, furniture, printing and a variety of crafts. The District Council is setting an example in the re-use of existing mill buildings by the conversion of Ebley Mill for its new centralised offices.

The District Council seeks to encourage small and other appropriate industry, whether new or existing, within its area and grants may be available. In conjunction with a private company a number of industrial units have been developed at the Stroud Industrial Estate, Stonehouse. Other industrial units are or may become available elsewhere within the district. A directory of vacant premises is published every other month.

Good recreational facilities are available throughout the area and at Stroud there is an indoor recreation centre and pool in a 56-acre park. Joint sports centres exist at Dursley and Wotton-under-Edge with a new indoor pool at Dursley. Five golf courses, two gliding clubs, riding schools, fishing and other facilities exist.

Stroud district has established links of friendship with Kreis Göttingen (W. Germany), which includes Duderstadt. The village of Leonard Stanley has similar links with Dozulé (France) and the town of Wotton-under-Edge has formed a link with Beaumont Le Roger (France).

The M5 motorway bisects the district and the M4 and Severn Bridge are close at hand. Stroud has a station on the main Western Region line from Paddington to Gloucester. By virtue of the Stroud Port Health Authority Order 1979, the Council is the Port Health Authority in respect of the waters of the Gloucester/Sharpness Canal and its Docks.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is justly renowned for its large unspoilt countryside and coastline. Shingle beaches line the coast from Walberswick in the north to Felixstowe in the south. Much of the northern coastline beaches remain undisturbed, except for the occasional Rambler, throughout the year. Estuaries of unparalleled beauty and teeming with wildlife stretch deep inland. Small villages, untarnished by the twentieth century, are scattered throughout the district.

With improved road and rail communications, and London just over an hour away, the district is rapidly becoming one of the most sought after places in which to live and work.

The district contains several towns.

Aldeburgh, whose first charter is dated 1529, is an attractive holiday resort, famous for historical buildings and its annual Festival.

Felixstowe is a popular holiday resort and residential seaside town. There is a modern theatre (seating 977) in which summer shows are presented and, in the out-of-season months, there are drama festivals, amateur musical shows, pantomimes and a wide variety of other events. Felixstowe's Leisure Centre, situated on the seaford, offers superb swimming facilities and an entertainments and conference hall complete with modern audio visual aids. Other attractions include indoor bowls and a fitness centre. There are 4 miles of beach and foreshore, with public gardens, beach chalets, beach sites and a variety of sea front amenities. Extensive expansion is taking place at the privately owned docks, and trade with the Continent and other countries, including America, is steadily increasing. Felixstowe is now an important container terminal and 600,000 passengers use this port of entry each year. Light industry is established and more is being encouraged.

Leiston, an expanding town notable for the nuclear power station at Sizewell, has 2 miles of undeveloped coast open to the public. There is a Sports Centre in the town with facilities for most indoor sports and recreational activities, including a bar.

Woodbridge, on the River Deben, is an attractive country town with many buildings of special architectural and historic interest. Recreational facilities are catered for by a swimming pool, sports centre, Elmhurst Park, several large playing fields and the river wall, along which there are seats, shelters, and children's play areas.

Saxmundham is a small attractive country town on the trunk road A12 which runs on a north-south axis through the district.

Other sport and recreation is catered for in the district by a further sports centre at Framlingham, several golf courses and by sailing and boating clubs on the River Alde/Ore, Deben and Orwell. The district is also popular for rambling, outdoor archery and riding.

Chairman's and Vice-Chairman's annual allowance: £3,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

As its name suggests, the borough includes an attractive heathland area of north-west Surrey, which has for over a hundred years had strong military associations. The borough, which is served by the M3 motorway, is to a large extent of a rural character, although Frimley and Camberley have expanded rapidly in recent years as a result of residential and light industrial development and the redevelopment of the central area of Camberley, providing a spacious modern shopping centre. At Camberley there is a museum and also a modern Civic Hall which provides facilities for public entertainments and social functions. Also at Camberley there is a Leisure Centre—"The Arena"—which was constructed by the Council but managed on its behalf by a private company.

The four parishes of Bisley, Chobham, West End and Windlesham make up the eastern portion of the district. Both Chobham and Windlesham contain several village communities, the latter including Bagshot.

The council owns a number of recreation grounds and open spaces, including a country park of 143 acres at Lightwater.

TOPOGRAPHY

Tamworth has been a borough from Saxon times. Queen Elizabeth I granted a Charter of incorporation in 1560, reciting that Tamworth was an ancient market town which had been held of the Kings of England by the inhabitants from time immemorial. A further charter of incorporation was granted by Charles II in 1663. The corporation owns an ancient castle and grounds with extensive pleasure grounds adjoining, which provide ample facilities for sport and recreation.

For 15 years Tamworth was an expanding town under the terms of the Town Development Act 1952. Between 1966 and 1981, when the Town Development Scheme officially ended, the borough's population more than doubled and 13,227 new dwellings were built (5,470 local authority, 677 housing association, and 6,810 private) mainly to cater for overspill from Birmingham and the conurbation.

The town has since returned to a period of more normal growth catering for the natural increase in its existing population only. Some 2,800 new dwellings have been built since 1981 and a further 2,200 dwellings are to be built during the period up to 2001 by which date it is anticipated that the borough's population will have increased to about 79,000.

The council's indoor swimming pool was opened in October 1971 and a central library was completed during 1973. A municipal golf course has been constructed at Amington and this was opened for play in 1975.

A major new covered shopping centre was officially opened by HM Queen in June 1980 and construction of the second phase has commenced.

Several industrial estates have been developed, including two (at Amington and Lichfield Road, Tamworth) by the Council. Development has recently commenced on two further employment areas.

Major road improvements have been carried out in recent years as part of a comprehensive programme for the provision of an improved highway network. The construction of the A5(T) Fazeley, Two Gates, Wilnecote bypass is programmed by the Department of Transport for the 1991-1993 period, and, together with associated road improvements, this will further enhance the town's highway network.

A pedestrianisation scheme within the town centre has recently been implemented.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district comprises the areas of the former Caterham and Warlingham UD and Godstone RD, and extends from the Greater London boundary in the north to Kent in the east and Sussex in the south.

The character of the northern part of the district has been largely determined by the growth of London. However, the impact has been contained by the natural barrier of the North Downs which has confined development either to the narrow valleys or to the expansion of long-standing upland settlements. Numerous areas of open country still remain in the form of tree-covered valley slopes and arable farmlands which in places extend to the Greater London boundary. The ruggedness of the terrain, the profusion of trees and the pastoral nature of much of the uplands have combined to strike a balance between the material needs of development and the preservation of a natural environment. The main residential areas are at Caterham Valley, Caterham-on-the-Hill, Warlingham and Whyteleafe.

Below the North Downs, the district stretches southwards to the Weald and Sussex, at the same time joining with Kent to the east. Rich and varied, the entire tract of country is still representative of the best of the English landscape. Its natural features blend so well with man-made pastures, woodlands and settlements that even the advent of the M23 and M25 motorways has in many instances created new aspects and vistas which add to rather than detract from the particular enchantment of this beautiful countryside.

Throughout there are delightful villages and hamlets, which retain many buildings of historic interest, including churches, manor houses, timbered cottages and inns too numerous to list. Other objects of interest include a windmill at Outwood (built 1666) which is one of the oldest working examples in the country and a yew tree in Crowhurst churchyard with a girth of 32 ft. Lingfield Racecourse is nationally known and Redhill Aerodrome at Nutfield, extensively used by Fighter Command during the last war, now accommodates the headquarters of the largest private helicopter operator in the world.

The Tandridge District bears a name a thousand years old. Though ancient, its roots are strong and secure; its heritage recognized and respected. The present reflects the careful husbandry of the past and the future is assured by the policy of co-operation between county and district in preserving the outstanding natural amenities of the area.

TOPOGRAPHY

Teesdale district is the largest in Durham County but is sparsely populated. Agriculture is the prime industry, centred on the market town of Barnard Castle although tourism is growing in importance as part of the local economy. The town is designated as a Conservation Area, being one of the finest market towns in the north, and everything is being done to preserve its charm and character.

The town is the recognized starting point for excursions into beautiful Teesdale. For its size it has more than its share of literary and historical associations. The castle built in the 12th century by Bernard Baliol is now a ruin in the care of the Department of Environment. The town has Dickensian associations, the author being inspired to write "Nicholas Nickleby" and "Master Humphrey's Clock" in this locality. Unique is the Bowes Museum of French Renaissance design built in mid 19th century by John Bowes and his wife. Nearby is Greta Bridge and Rokeby, a stately home immortalized by Sir Walter Scott in his epic poem of that name.

A sports centre serving the district and situated in Barnard Castle has recently been opened.

Nearby villages are of interest. Staindrop with its notable church also has 14th century Raby Castle, a well-preserved medieval fortress. Egglestone Abbey, founded 1195 is one mile from Barnard Castle.

Upper Teesdale, that stretch of the valley from the river's source to Middleton-in-Teesdale, contains plants that have survived the last ice age and the area contains two great waterfalls, High Force and Cauldron Snout.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district of Tendring is in the north eastern part of the county of Essex. Thirteen miles from north to south and 15 miles across, the district has a water frontage of some thirty-eight miles stretching from the River Stour in the north to the River Colne in the south. Along the whole length of the coastal strip are the main holiday resorts of Clacton-on-Sea, Frinton and Walton, Brightlingsea, St. Osyth and Dovercourt providing as they do for all types of holidaymaker. The numerous rivers and creeks, together with the coastline, means that the district is very well provided with facilities for water recreation.

Because of the quality and cleanliness of the beaches and the prevailing climatic conditions—plenty of sunshine and rainfall well below the national average—the coastal towns have always attracted those who are interested in family holidays. The piers at Clacton-on-Sea and Walton-on-the-Naze, which are operated by private companies, offer a variety of entertainment. The Princes Theatre and Westcliff Theatre at Clacton offer a variety of theatrical events.

The district is well provided with recreational facilities of most kinds, including three golf courses, indoor and outdoor bowling rinks, extensive recreation grounds with tennis courts and pitches for team games of practically every variety. Heated indoor swimming pools are provided at Clacton and Dovercourt. An open air pool is available at Brightlingsea during the summer season. A new leisure centre at Clacton has been completed offering a wide range of facilities.

The ancient borough of Harwich, incorporating Harwich and Dovercourt Bay, is a port of great importance and provides fast passenger and freight services to and from the various ports on the Continent.

The hinterland of the district is mainly agricultural in character and consists of some of the best farmland in the country. Industrial development is encouraged and the Council is involved with several local companies on economic development projects based on the theme of "The Tending Partnership—public and private sectors working together."

TOPOGRAPHY

The extensive area of the Test Valley Borough is one of the most beautiful areas in Southern England. The world famous River Test, and its associated tributaries – the mecca of trout fisherman – runs through the entire length of the area from north to south. The countryside is typical Hampshire downland interspersed with woods and copses and high quality agricultural land.

The area contains two principal towns; Andover at the north the larger of the two (and the headquarters of the Authority), an expanding town with a modern shopping centre, an excellent sports centre and substantial high quality industrial development, together with further fully serviced land available for lease by industrialists, and Romsey in the south, an ancient mediaeval town with its famous Abbey and Broadlands, the home of the late Earl Mountbatten of Burma, both of which are visited by tourists from all over the world. In the centre of the district is the ancient Borough of Stockbridge, now a small parish but with a fine broad main street and extensive views from the surrounding countryside.

There are many pressures on the district for residential development and the area is divided into the South Hampshire Structure Plan area where certain additional residential development will be permitted, and the Mid Hampshire Structure Plan area where with the exception of Andover the intention is to keep development to a minimum to preserve the character of the existing countryside.

TOPOGRAPHY

Superb communications and environment, and a vigorous expansion programme successfully sustained over many years, are the keys to the present status of the Borough of Thamesdown—and in particular Swindon, its economic centre—as one of the south's leading growth centres.

While recent years have seen contraction of the traditional engineering industry on which modern Swindon was founded in the 19th century, the town has at the same time become increasingly important as a centre for both technology-based manufacturing and commercial operations. The Borough Council is also concentrating considerable effort on stimulating and supporting alternative opportunities for employees displaced from traditional industries.

The expansion programme has also resulted in a particularly high level of housing activity over the past 30 years, in both the public and private sectors (current target 1350 dwellings a year) with the Borough Council acknowledged as an innovator in this as in other areas of activity.

The demands of an expanding population have been met by deliberate provision of "social infrastructure"—from a network of neighbourhood community facilities to large scale amenities (including two major leisure centres, 600-seat theatre, golf complex). The open access to performing and visual arts by a thriving Community Arts programme have been another particularly interesting development in recent years.

The fully-restored 300-cottage Railway Village (designed for the GWR by Matthew Digby Wyatt) and the GWR museum itself, are major attractions for visitors to the town.

Set between the Cotswolds, Thames Valley and Wiltshire Downs, the district is in easy reach of delightful countryside—at the same time enjoying immediate access to both motorway and inter-city networks.

Twinning. Monchengladbach (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Thurrock covers an area of 40,285 acres, or more than 67 square miles. It is situated in Essex on the north side of the River Thames with a river frontage of 18 miles between the London Borough of Havering in the west and Canvey Island in the east.

Within the boundaries of the Borough are the large residential areas of Aveley, Chadwell St. Mary, Corringham, Grays, Little Thurrock, South Ockendon, Belhus, Stanford-le-Hope, Tilbury, West Thurrock, and the villages of Bulphan, Fobbing, Horndon-on-the-Hill, Linford, Mucking, North Stifford, Orsett, East Tilbury and West Tilbury.

The riverside area of Thurrock is highly industrialised and incorporates the large modern container port of Tilbury; extensive oil refineries at Coryton and Shell Haven and bulk storage installations at Purfleet, West Thurrock and South Stifford; plus many industrial organisations of both national and international repute.

The Lakeside Regional Shopping Centre, adjoining the M25, opens in October 1990 and will be one of the biggest of its kind in Europe. In the same area, two large retail warehouse parks are already flourishing.

Other developments on which work has started include a new road bridge across the Thames carrying all southbound M25 traffic from Thurrock to Kent, due to open in Spring 1991. A motorway service area on the M25, between junctions 30/31 opened in Spring 1990.

Work has begun on the Chafford Hundred, a housing development of more than 4,000 units plus schools, a church, community centre and recreation areas, being built on derelict land between Grays and West Thurrock.

But Thurrock is not wholly residential or industrial. The hinterland contains some extremely attractive countryside and charming villages and there are many thriving agricultural communities. There are a number of fine old churches, some of exceptional historic interest.

There are approximately 45,212 domestic properties in the Borough, of which 14,000 are Council-owned.

Grays is the commercial centre of the Borough. A large town shopping centre was built 10 years ago, adjoining the Grays High Street. There are modern shopping centres at Corringham Town Centre; Derwent Parade, South Ockendon; Defoe Parade, Chadwell St. Mary; King Street, Stanford-le-Hope; Broadway, Tilbury; and Crammavill Street, Stifford Clays.

TOPOGRAPHY

Torbay, marketed as the "English Riviera", is Britain's premier holiday resort and has one of the most beautiful settings in Europe. The mild climate, sheltered position and amenities of the Borough combine to produce an ideal holiday environment or conference venue.

The resort comprises the three towns of Torquay, Paignton and Brixham, each of which has its own distinctive character and history. The amalgamation of the three towns took place in 1968 when County Borough status was granted to Torbay.

The location of the three towns around a bay has encouraged the popularity of maritime activities in the area and commercially, the sea plays a major part in the economy of the Borough. Brixham benefits especially from the trawler and pleasure boat trade centred there. The port now boasts a 535 berth marina which includes 110 berths in a town dock with associated onshore facilities in a harbourside housing development.

Great efforts are made to achieve a harmonious relationship between conserving the older parts of the resort and the need for progress. Places of historic interest such as Torre Abbey and Oldway Mansion, as well as the picturesque Cockington Village, are carefully preserved for all to enjoy. Cockingham Court has recently been refurbished and is now being fitted out as a centre for the demonstration and teaching of Rural Skills by a company established by Devon Rural Skills Trust. Development is not stifled, however, as seen by the incorporation of the old Pavilion Theatre as part of the 500 berth marina development at Torquay Harbour and the new £38m 'Fleet Walk' shopping development in Torquay town centre.

In both the public and private sector, steps are taken to accommodate holidaymakers in every possible way. There is an abundance of high-class hotels and holiday apartments in the Borough and ample entertainment facilities both publicly and privately owned. The shopping facilities available are also in keeping with the resort's high standards.

Torbay has a host of attractions for the tourist, apart from its extensive natural beauty, amongst which there is a pre-historic cave network, a spectacular Model Village, several Aquaria, a large zoo, historic buildings and three picturesque harbours.

Communications are facilitated by the M5 motorway and the recently improved A38 as well as frequent rail (including Intercity 125) and express coach services or by air at Exeter Airport or Plymouth, including a Ferry Service to the Channel Islands.

The Borough Council is vigorously pursuing ways to expand the economic base of the resort and a new industrial estate has been developed to complement the two existing industrial and trading estates in the Borough. A major expansion of Torquay involving provision of 900 houses, Superstore, Retail Park and Employment Area, together with a diversion of the A370—the main access to Torquay—is about to be commenced.

Recent developments in leisure/tourism include an expanded leisure centre at Paignton incorporating an international sports hall, squash courts, swimming pool, etc. In Torquay, the English Riviera Centre, a £15m conference, exhibition and leisure centre was opened in May 1987. At Brixham a new extension to the existing Fish Quay has been developed to cater for the expansion of a thriving fishing industry. The major 'Fleet Walk' and 'Haldon Centre' shopping redevelopment plans have improved shopping facilities for residents and tourists. The new marina complexes at Torquay and Brixham Harbours and related shore-based facilities provide improved services for local and visiting yachtsmen, attracting a resurgence of interest in maritime activity on an international scale.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of Torridge district in the north west of Devon, so named after the famous salmon fishing river which flows through it to the sea at Bideford, is predominantly rural, with substantial town centres at Bideford, Holsworthy and Torrington.

Agriculture, particularly dairy farming, is supported by livestock markets at Bideford and Holsworthy, meat processing and dairy factories in Torrington and provides a significant proportion of local employment.

There is also a strong tradition in shipbuilding and a large modern works is situated at Appledore. However, the economic base of the area has widened in recent years and most sectors are represented including electronics, light engineering and plastics.

New industry is encouraged to establish itself at serviced industrial sites within the district, affording the opportunity to enjoy a uniquely unspoilt environment boasting many miles of spectacular heritage coastline and inland scenery of outstanding natural beauty. These natural advantages support an important tourist industry and Westward Hol, with its magnificent sandy beach, attracts many thousands of holidaymakers every year. The Dartington Glass factory and Rosemoor Gardens, both at Torrington, also provide a major attraction to visitors.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Tunbridge Wells extends from the towns of Royal Tunbridge Wells and Southborough in the west to Hawkhurst and Cranbrook in the east. It covers a large part of the area generally known as the High Weald which is formed by an east-west sandstone ridge, much of it over 300 feet high. To the north of the Borough this ridge is bordered by the clay vale of the river Medway and in the extreme south-east by that of the Rother.

The countryside is amongst the most beautiful in Southern England. On the ridge the land is rolling and much wooded. The Forestry Commission has extensive areas of forest south-east of Lamberhurst, including the Bedgebury Pinetum. On the northern slopes of the ridge and in the clay vales are the famous Kentish orchards and hopfields which give the area such a distinctive appearance. Near Lamberhurst is the newly constructed Bewl Bridge Reservoir which is becoming known internationally for its trout fishing.

Royal Tunbridge Wells, the principal town, was founded as a spa in the seventeenth century and developed as a residential centre largely during the nineteenth century. It is a most attractive town, important as a tourist centre and noted particularly for the Pantiles, which are the colonnaded walks adjoining the chalybeate springs, and for its Common which extends almost into the centre of the town. The extensive shopping area contains many antique shops, art galleries and high class fashion shops. Employment is provided by several large commercial organisations which have their headquarters in the town as well as by a small amount of light industry and the usual service industries.

The smaller towns and villages of the borough are, for the most part, typically Wealden, with old tilehung and weatherboarded houses often clustered round the village church or green. Paddock Wood is unique in that it has developed only since the mid-nineteenth century. Its Distribution Centre houses one of the largest warehouse complexes in Europe and is closely linked with a freight rail terminal.

TOPOGRAPHY

Uttlesford contains 58 civil parishes, and is situated in north-west Essex, being bounded by Cambridgeshire to the north, and Hertfordshire to the west. It is rural in character and covers the largest acreage of any district in the County. Its population is the second smallest. Some 20% of the population live in Saffron Walden and its surroundings, the other main centres of population being Great Dunmow and Stansted Mountfitchet. The countryside is widely considered the most attractive to be found in Essex.

The district contains over 3,000 buildings of architectural or historic interest in a wide variety of styles. Some of the best known of these buildings are Thaxted Guildhall, Audley End Mansion near Saffron Walden and Horham Hall near Thaxted. In addition, Saffron Walden and Thaxted boast two of the finest churches in the county.

While Uttlesford is still mainly agricultural in character, there are several thriving light industrial estates, which are still expanding. Recent years have also seen the redevelopment of sites occupied by agricultural support industries for the expansion of service activities, eg the former Dunmow Fitch Bacon Factory has been rebuilt as an industrial estate.

The district is crossed by the M11 Motorway from north to south and by the A120 road from east to west. Stansted Airport lies entirely within Uttlesford's boundaries. Construction work is under way to increase its terminal capacity initially to 7-8 million passengers per annum.

Chairman's annual allowances: £2,700 plus £770 travelling allowance.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district takes its name from the famous monument carved on the crest of Uffington Hill, the oldest of all the White Horses in England, and the Vale is drained by the little River Ock, which empties into the Thames at Abingdon.

The district is mainly rural in character, with areas of great natural beauty along the escarpment of the Berkshire Downs and the sylvan reaches of the Upper Thames, to which river it has the longest frontage of any district. At the same time, it is also the home of modern industries and the major research establishments of the Atomic Energy Authority, the Esso Research Centre and the Agricultural Research Council.

The administrative headquarters of the council is at Abingdon, which possesses a fine civic centre incorporating buildings of every period from the 15th to the 20th centuries. Abingdon is one of the fifty towns listed by the Department of the Environment as worthy of special conservation for its architectural merit and historic associations. Also of interest are the market towns of Wantage, the birthplace in 849 of Alfred the Great, and Faringdon, where King Edward the Elder died in 925. The council maintains area offices in both these towns.

The council owns parks and gardens and public halls in Abingdon and Wantage. In 1975, the council commissioned the Old Gaol Recreation Centre in Abingdon, formed by the conversion of the original gaol building (1811) and a new civic hall in Wantage, where another centre for sports and recreation was opened in 1976. The Charter Centre in Abingdon, which accommodates a new library, medical centre, old people's day centre, citizens' advice bureau, night club, offices and a multi-storey car park for 500 cars, was opened in 1977. In 1980, the Council completed the conversion of the Corn Exchange at Faringdon, which provides a large public hall and new offices for the District and Town Councils. A major superstore upon Council-owned land on the outskirts of Abingdon was opened in 1982; and plans are now proceeding for the second stage of the redevelopment of Abingdon town centre, including the sites of the old railway station and cattle market.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is in the heart of Cheshire. Most of the district consists of attractive and high quality farming land; it includes part of the flat Cheshire Plain, central Cheshire Hills and Delamere Forest.

The Borough has two main towns, Northwich and Winsford, several smaller towns, Frodsham, Helsby and Tarporley and numerous small villages situated in rural surroundings. The main towns were founded on salt production but have now diversified. Northwich, where ICI Plc. is based, is an important centre for the chemical industry, and Winsford is famous for its rock salt mines. There are many sand quarries in the area and most of Cheshire's sand is obtained from these workings.

Many new jobs have been created with public and private co-operation in manufacturing and service industries. High technology based industry is also expanding in the Borough. There are increasing opportunities for professional people. To allow these trends to continue land has been developed and more is allocated to accommodate new industry in the area.

The Borough has good access to the M6 and M56 motorways.

The Borough has good connections with other parts of the country. Winsford is on the electrified London to Carlisle railway line. Northwich has rail links to Manchester and Chester and also Carlisle and London. There are two major international airports within twenty miles at Speke and Manchester.

The district possesses a number of outdoor recreation facilities which attract many visitors; the main one is Delamere Forest and surrounding Forestry Commission holdings. The numerous flashes and meres are used for angling, and the larger ones for sailing. The Weaver Navigation, the Trent and Mersey Canal, and Shropshire Union Canal are used increasingly for inland waterways cruising. A unique hydraulic boat-lift at Anderton is being restored in conjunction with the Marina and pleasure cruising. Helsby and Frodsham hills are attractive walking and rock climbing spots. There are also golf courses, and the Oulton Park motor racing circuit. The National Salt Museum is at Northwich.

Whitegate Way footpath and bridleway makes use of a disused railway line. Marbury Country Park is a major recreation area. Weaver Parkway is planned involving reclamation of large areas of derelict land. There is scope to intensify the use of some resources and to provide other facilities. Sports centres are at Frodsham, Hartford, Northwich and Winsford.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,000.

Wansbeck has a well balanced environment blending coast, countryside and industry in an area with space to cater for further multi-purpose development. At Newbiggin, it has its own bay and sands which are part of Northumberland's heritage. There is a deep rooted history in the area which has 11th and 13th century church buildings and a 14th century castle at Bothal.

The basic industry of coal mining which fostered the early growth continues in reduced form but caters for the needs of England's first aluminium smelter. An electrical generating station at Cambols also adds power to the industrial strength of the area. A continuing growth of new light industries, on sites with ample room for expansion, is becoming established in pleasantly developed modern industrial estates and provides the necessary diversification of industry in the 20th century. Agriculture continues to thrive in the area and gives a quality of open space.

The educational system includes several newly constructed schools and embraces the County Technical College centred at Ashington.

Leisure and recreation is well provided for within multi-purpose sports centres and developed natural resources in the rural, riverside and coastal areas of the district. The development on the River Wansbeck, has attracted support from the English Tourist Board, and is particularly pleasant. The widest possible range of arts opportunities are available serviced by the Area Arts Association, MidNAG, administered by the Leisure and Publicity Department.

The development of the area, which includes a new 300-bed hospital, has not outgrown the shopping facilities and growth in this direction goes side by side with the other projects in the Wansbeck district which still retains a healthy community spirit in changing times.

TOPOGRAPHY

The County of Avon has six districts, Wansdyke occupying the county's south eastern quadrant, with an area of about 125 square miles. Wansdyke encircles Bath and extends across the Avon Valley to Bristol and south to the northern scarp of the Mendips and the Somerset boundary. The Limpley Stoke Valley forms in part the eastern boundary, with Wiltshire. In the west is Wansdyke's "lakeland"—the Chew Valley and Blagdon Lakes so popular with anglers.

Geographically, Wansdyke consists of six distinct areas. In the south west corner are the north facing scarp slopes of the Mendip Hills, which have been designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and are one of the major ridges across the country.

The Mendips slope to the north, down to the Chew Valley and Blagdon Lakes, which are in fact man-made. They are impounding reservoirs—that is they collect water, to feed directly to treatment works, which, together, serve a large area of South Avon and North Somerset. The Chew Valley is also notable for the architectural quality of its churches and its prehistoric remains especially at Stanton Drew.

The former North Somerset coalfield covered much of the south of the district and the towns of Midsomer Norton and Radstock were mining centres. Today there is little to show of the area's mining past. The tips have largely been landscaped or have become covered in trees. The towns and villages of this area now support modern industries. This part of Wansdyke is expected to support the major growth in industry and commerce.

To the east this area descends to the Limpley Stoke Valley—the natural boundary with Wiltshire, with small honey coloured villages. On the hillside, overlooking the valley is Claverton, the home of the American Museum in Britain. Nearby is the Kennet & Avon canal, now part of an extensive recreational waterway through southern England.

The Limpley Stoke Valley, together with the area to the north of Bath, forms the Southern Cotswolds, part of the proposed Southern Extension of the Cotswolds Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The northern part of the area is dissected by several beautiful winding valleys with cream coloured stone villages nestling amongst them. Perhaps the most famous is the beautiful and secluded valley through which the St. Catherine's Brook runs past the Elizabethan St. Catherine's Court.

These valleys emerge into the much grander valley of the River Avon, one of the most beautiful of English rivers, which flows through Bath and Bristol on its journey to the Bristol Channel. Where the River Chew joins the Avon lies Keynsham, the largest town in the District and which has existed since Roman times. It too has busy commercial and industrial centres.

Lastly, to the south of Keynsham is an area of open plains and wooded valleys, across which lies the ancient line of the Wansdyke itself. This was a fifth century AD earthwork from Marlborough to the Bristol Channel at Portishead. There are several theories regarding its construction which are currently being investigated but it is likely that it was built by British tribesmen fleeing south from the Battle of Dyrham in AD 577 after the defeat by the Saxons under their chieftain Cealwin of Wessex.

Thus, Wansdyke can boast of beautiful countryside with ancient churches in attractive stone villages, many of which have been designated conservation areas. There are good road communications with Bath and Bristol and, of course, to the neighbouring towns in the districts surrounding Wansdyke.

Chairman's annual allowance: £2,150.

TOPOGRAPHY

Warrington is situated on the northern border of the county of Cheshire midway between Liverpool and Manchester astride the River Mersey and the Manchester Ship Canal. The original settlement was founded long before the Romans established themselves in Britain. Today Warrington is a progressive industrial town with pleasant dormitory areas. Warrington Borough Council is from a rateable value and population point of view the largest district in Cheshire.

Warrington is, above all else, a district looking to the future and this it may do with well-founded confidence because it has had the added advantage of being developed as a new town with financial assistance from the government being channelled through the former Warrington and Runcorn New Town Development Corporation. The Borough Council has completed the redevelopment of the town centre and the variety of its manufacturers ensures continued prosperity and employment.

In addition to being situated on one of the main crossing points of the River Mersey and Manchester Ship Canal the Warrington Borough is well served by both road and rail. The M6 and M62 motorways conjoin in the Warrington area and the direct access to these motorways gives very easy access to and from all parts of the country. In the southern extremities of the area is the North Cheshire Motorway, M56. The bridges at Warrington are two of the few main road bridges across the River Mersey between Liverpool and Manchester and are the hub of traffic routes in all directions. A network of railway lines links the town with the rest of Britain.

The area combines the best of progressive industrial activity, pleasant dormitory housing developments, open spaces, parks and recreation grounds as well as countryside walks. To enable the people of Warrington to make the most of its leisure time, be it sporting, cultural or other activities, there are numerous Leisure, Recreation and Community Centres.

TOPOGRAPHY

Royal Leamington Spa is a pleasant inland watering place situated in the centre of England. Date of Charter 1875. The town is well planned, being laid out on the grid system. It has spacious avenues and streets and first-class shopping and hotel facilities. The Royal Pump Room establishment, the property of the Council, plays a valuable part under the National Health Service Scheme in the treatment of rheumatism and kindred diseases.

There are ninety-four acres of public gardens, parks and ornamental grounds, including the celebrated Jephson Gardens, and excellent facilities for bowls, tennis and boating. The 309-acre Newbold Comyn Park caters for a variety of recreational activities, including an 18-hole Municipal Golf Course. The Royal Spa Centre provides entertainments and conference facilities.

Warwick traces its municipal history back to the days of Edward the Confessor, the first Charter having been granted by Henry VIII, 15th May 1545. The Council maintains three pleasure grounds and St. Nicholas Park, a large public park and recreation ground on the banks of the River Avon, with river walk and promenade, adjacent to historic Warwick Castle. Other buildings of historic interest are—St. Mary's Church with Beauchamp Chapel, the latter containing the Vaults of the Earls of Warwick; Oken's House (now used as a doll museum); the Lord Leycester Hospital; and the East and West Gates. The town is famous for its architectural beauty and there are many fine examples dating back to the 16th century. Kenilworth is famous for its 12th-century Castle, visited by Queen Elizabeth I in 1575. Adjacent to the Castle are the Abbey Fields comprising 66 acres of parkland and recreational facilities open to the public.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the north-east corner of Suffolk, the Waveney District takes its name from the river which forms much of its northern border. Water plays a significant part in the district's boundaries: the River Blyth separates it from the rest of Suffolk to the south and it is bounded to the east by a North Sea coast-line which includes the most easterly point of the British Isles, at Ness Point, Lowestoft.

The District embraces many different characteristics. Lowestoft, the second town of Suffolk, which is the District's administrative centre, sustains a variety of industries, including food-processing, shipbuilding and engineering. The town also has a long-established fishing industry and its port, as well as handling a thriving general cargo business, is also a base for servicing off-shore exploration installations.

Side by side with the commercial activity, the holiday trade of the whole district has steadily developed, not only because of the more obvious seaside attractions, but also because the towns, villages and surrounding countryside combine to provide the visitor with enjoyment.

The River Waveney is also the southernmost river of the Broads and the yacht stations at Beccles and Oulton Broad provide access to the rest of the district for holidaymakers using the broadland network. Apart from Lowestoft, the major urban features are the four historic market towns which delimit the otherwise agricultural heart of the Waveney District. In the north, Bungay, with its Buttercross and Castle, still maintains the ancient office of Town Reeve, while riverside Beccles, dating from 960 AD, is dominated by the impressive detached tower of the parish church. Coincidentally, both towns have major printing industries. Their southern counterparts are Halesworth and Southwold, each with similar historic attractions. Southwold retains a particular charm as a peaceful holiday resort of the East Coast. The centres of all four towns have been declared Conservation Areas.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Council takes its name from a twelfth-century Cistercian Abbey on the borders of Tilford and Farnham, whose lands once stretched over a large part of the Borough. The Abbey ruins are now open to the public and are protected by the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission. Opening times—March to October 9.30 a.m.–6.30 p.m. Mon–Sat; 2.00 p.m.–6.30 p.m. Sun.

The Waverley borough includes three historic towns—Godalming, Farnham, Haslemere—and many charming villages situated in some of the loveliest scenery in England.

A large part of Waverley's area is designated as Green Belt or Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and contains the most extensive group of commons in Surrey.

In all there are nearly 5,000 acres of land to which the public have access for informal recreation. Significant resources are Frensham Country Park and the Hindhead commons including the Devil's Punchbowl.

Extensive areas of heathland in the western part of the borough are also designated as "sites of special scientific interest". Village greens are a characteristic feature of the borough. At Farnham Park, a public open space of 200 acres, there is a public nine-hole par 3 golf course, and a new nine-hole golf course recently opened at Broadwater Park, Godalming.

A main attraction of the Haslemere district is its strong cultural tradition. It is the home of the Dolmetsch family who are famous for the revival of early music and musical instruments. The town also has an excellent educational museum which attracts visitors from all parts of the South East and is one of the oldest museums in the country, being established in 1889.

Godalming dates from Saxon times, and received its first Charter of Incorporation in 1575. Godalming's history has been dominated by a long and diverse industrial heritage with paper, leather, wool and cloth being the main contributors. The town lies across the River Wey, and Charterhouse School, which moved from London in 1872, stands on a commanding site overlooking the town. A delightful museum has recently opened in the High Street, in a 15th century timber framed building.

Farnham is an area of ancient settlement and the town grew up in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries with the building of the Castle by Henry, Bishop of Winchester. It is the only town in Surrey included in the 1965 report of the Council of British Archaeology as having special historic quality, and the designated Conservation Area contains many buildings listed as being of architectural or historic interest. Primary amongst these is the town's museum with its hand-cut and rubbed brick facade. The Farnham Sports Centre was opened in Autumn 1981.

The town has a lively repertory company housed in the Redgrave Theatre which opened in June 1974, and the highly successful Farnham Maltings, an arts and community centre, attracting audiences from all over Southern England. WSCAD, one of the premier art schools in Britain is also based in Farnham.

Mayor's annual allowance: £3,370.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Wealden district is, in area, the largest authority in East Sussex. The district extends southward across the country from the Surrey and Kent borders between East Grinstead and Tunbridge Wells to the English Channel on either side of Eastbourne. Beautifully wooded country is the keynote of the area which is mainly rural in character interspersed with communities, hamlets, villages and small towns, having several larger centres of development in Crowborough, Hailsham, Heathfield, Polegate and Uckfield. The hilly north of the district includes the High Weald Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and, some ten miles from Gatwick Airport, the Ashdown Forest—6,400 acres covered with heather, bracken and gorse with some trees—the largest area of land in the South East of England which has never been under the plough. Toward the south near Hailsham the countryside levels out as it nears the sea to form the broad Pevensey levels whilst to the west of Eastbourne lies the Sussex Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (renowned for the Seven Sisters chalk cliffs) which runs into the lower reaches of the beautiful Cuckmere Valley, entering the sea near the cross Channel port of Newhaven.

TOPOGRAPHY

Wear Valley, as the name suggests, is crossed by the River Wear which has its source in the western part of the district and contains 40% of the designated Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The County image of the "Land of the Prince Bishops" is intended to bring Durham County and the Wear Valley District into higher public profile both locally and nationally. The Prince Bishop theme is based on history dating back to the 12th century when the area was ruled by the rich and powerful Prince Bishops who took this title when William the Conqueror declared Durham a palatine. The Prince Bishops attracted members of the monarchy to the area for hunting and fishing and once again, through the new "Prince Bishops" image people are being encouraged to spend some of their leisure time throughout County Durham.

There are miles of public footpaths, bridleways, wild heather clad moorland, river and reservoir fishing throughout the district. Killhope Picnic Area is one of many in the district. The Weardale Museum at Ireshopeburn includes an 1870 period Weardale cottage room and a superb mineral collection and is adjacent to the Chapel where John Wesley preached.

Hotels, guest houses, farmhouses and caravan sites throughout the District provide an excellent base from which to explore the surrounding countryside.

The Spectrum Leisure Complex at Willington includes a multi-purpose sports hall designed by the Sports Council who also contributed to its construction. Other facilities include a ski slope and pavilion, all weather multi-purpose playing court, trim track, outdoor bowls and tennis. In addition, the refurbished existing building which was the former Miners Welfare Centre provides a lounge-licensed bar, snooker, jacuzzi pool, sauna and rooms available for dances or private functions.

The previous swimming baths at Bishop Auckland and Crook have been developed into Leisure Complexes with sauna suites, jacuzzi pools, solariums and squash courts. They are known as Woodhouse Close Leisure Complex and Glenholme Leisure Complex respectively, and both contain excellent fitness facilities.

Weardale Leisure Complex, deep in the Dale at Eastgate, includes a sports/functions hall, snooker room, sun beds, fitness room, bar/lounge, changing room, football and cricket pitches, bowling green, childrens playground and fishing rights.

The Council also employs Community Fitness, Leisure and Arts Officers to ensure they are in tune with their customers, realising that the local authority should be the catalyst within its community for a healthier future both mentally and physically.

The commercial centre of the district and S.W. Durham is the market town of Bishop Auckland. The District Council are jointly developing with Durham County Council an Enterprise Park at South Church, Bishop Auckland, which is the prestige site in the area. The site is 26.4 hectares (65 acres) of fully serviced prime industrial land for sale or lease and is extremely popular with many companies locating there. The Council are pursuing many other Economic Development initiatives, and are working closely with the private sector and other agencies to broaden the Economic base of the district. As well as financial incentives available to businesses coming to the area, the 'quality of life' offered in the area is important. Inexpensive housing, an available and adaptive labour force, beautiful countryside, good communications and national award winning leisure facilities, all contribute to a better quality of life in Wear Valley. For further information on relocation to Wear Valley please contact the Economic Development Officer (0388) 765555.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough is in the heart of unspoilt rural England and encompasses many attractive ironstone villages. At Earls Barton there is the famous 1000 year old Saxon Church tower, Great Doddington has its Norman Church and an attractive mill, Ecton is visited by many Americans making a pilgrimage to the graves of Benjamin Franklin's ancestors. Sywell has a privately operated aerodrome from which flights to and from Europe are made. There is also Overstone solarium which is one of the summer playgrounds for people from the Midlands and at Irchester there is the country park where acres of ironstone workings have been opened up for the ramble. The river valley of the Nene is a valuable natural amenity and the river is a navigable waterway.

The Borough's main town, Wellingborough, is a market town which has developed its industry from the traditional base of footwear, clothing and iron founding by expansion of the Council's industrial estates to provide a wide range of employment. The latest development at Park Farm includes an Enterprise Zone with a developable area of 95 acres which has been fully developed in five years by about 100 new companies including major distribution facilities and a variety of industrial activities from new businesses to multi-nationals. A similar area of land at Park Farm South on a greenfield site with excellent road access is being made available in phases for companies seeking an attractive and accessible location. Land is also available for housing development particularly on the North side of the town. The town has many buildings of architectural and historic interest and those in the town include the recently restored Tithe Barn, the Hind Hotel where Oliver Cromwell is reputed to have stayed and the Golden Lion public house with its minstrels' gallery.

The borough is linked to the M1 by the new dual carriageway A45, and is 10 minutes travelling time from the motorway. It is on the midland main railway line between London, St. Pancras, Sheffield and Derby, with London an hour's journey away.

The Borough is geographically the largest in Devon and one of the largest in the country. It is bounded on the west by the River Tamar which divides Devon and Cornwall and stretches from the outskirts of Plymouth in the south for over 30 miles northwards. The coast line and beaches of Devon and Cornwall both in the north and south are easily accessible.

Borough status was granted by Royal Charter in April 1982.

The main towns of West Devon are Tavistock and Okehampton, serving the south and north of the Borough respectively. The remainder of the area is rural in character and contains many very attractive villages. The major part of the Dartmoor National Park also lies within West Devon.

The Borough Council is actively pursuing economic development on a number of related fronts. These include stimulating commercial development in the town centres, encouraging and supporting industrial development, providing leisure facilities and, underpinning all these themes, protecting and enhancing the already superb environment.

Tourism is seen as an important contributor to this task with enormous potential for growth in ways that build upon the natural assets of the Borough. West Devon is marketed as an unspoilt, quality destination of appeal to the discerning visitor.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district covers 417 square miles bounded in the west, north and south by Devon, Somerset and the English Channel, which incorporates the Chesil Beach. Mainly rural in nature, the area includes five towns with many Neolithic, Stone Age, Iron Age and Roman settlements of which the gigantic prehistoric hill fortress of Maiden Castle is the finest example of its kind in Great Britain. An Iron Age settlement surmounts Pilsdon Pen (909 feet)—the highest point in Dorset—whilst Golden Cap (610 feet) is the highest cliff on the south coast.

Beaminster—even though the town suffered many disastrous fires in 1644, 1684 and 1781 there are many Georgian and older houses in existence.

Bridport—famous for its rope and net making; had its own mint from 978–1087. The town's first Charter was granted by Henry III in 1253 and Bridport elected two members of Parliament until 1868.

Dorchester—stands on the site of the Roman Durnovaria (AD 70); at Colliton Park are the foundations of a large Roman town house which was excavated in 1937–38. The Bloody Assize of 1685 was held here when the infamous Judge Jefferies was sent to the town to punish the Monmouth Rebels after the Battle of Sedgemoor.

The six Tolpuddle Martyrs were sentenced to seven years transportation for the crime of forming in their village the Friendly Society of Agricultural Labourers, forerunner of the Trade Union Movement, at the Old Crown Court, now part of the Council's offices.

Lyme Regis—was for many centuries one of the most important ports of England, and its first Charter was granted by Edward I in 1284. In 1644 the town was besieged by the King's forces under Prince Maurice, and in June 1685 the Duke of Monmouth landed near the Cobb. The famous ichthyosaurus fossil was discovered in the cliffs near the town by Mary Anning.

Sherborne—In AD 705 the Kingdom of Wessex was divided into two Dioceses and St. Aldhelm chose Sherborne as the site for his Cathedral. For nearly 400 years Saxon Bishops ruled from here, and Sherborne is dominated by the Abbey Church on the site of the Saxon Cathedral. Sherborne has two Castles, the first, of which the gatehouse, curtain walls, chapel, keep and domestic buildings remain, was built by Henry I's Chancellor, Bishop Roger (1107–1139); the present castle being built by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1594.

TOPOGRAPHY

West Oxfordshire consists of a low clay vale, bordering the Thames in the south-east and the Cotswold Hills dominating the north-west part. The district is well served by the small limestone market towns and villages of Witney, Chipping Norton, Woodstock, Carterton, Charlbury, Burford, Eynsham and Bampton. In addition there is an RAF station at Brize Norton with housing at Carterton.

It is a very attractive area which is increasingly being visited by tourists. Witney is a fast-growing town with a wide range of service and manufacturing industries. The District's earlier overdependence for employment on the declining blanket and motor component industries has been reduced considerably by positive industrial promotion policies aimed especially, but not wholly, at small firms.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District stretches from the mouth of the River Parrett in the north-east, with the boundary running south-westwards inland across Somerset to meet the county border with Devon on Exmoor; it then follows the county border which bisects Lorna Doone Country to arrive at the coast between Lynmouth and Porlock. The northern side of the district thus comprises of some 32 miles of varied coastline providing a contrast to the diversified range of country delights to be found inland.

The main access routes to the area are the A358 from Taunton and the A39 from Bridgwater, with the M5 passing close to both these centres, thereby bringing West Somerset into contact with the national road network.

The area is predominantly rural in character, with agriculture and tourism being the most important commercial activities. The largest settlement is the seaside resort of Minehead with only the peripheral villages of Dulverton, Dunster, Porlock, Watchet and Williton significantly interrupting the surrounding countryside. The moorlands of Exmoor and the Quantocks form a large proportion of the area exhibiting scenery of outstanding beauty with wide heather-clad moors, wooded hills and lovely coombes within which red deer and hill ponies roam freely. Interspersed throughout this rustic terrain are many attractive villages of historical interest, exemplified by Dunster with its picturesque castle and Yarn Market. Minehead, the premier seaside resort in Somerset, acts as the major functional centre, providing recreational and service facilities for the surrounding agricultural hinterland.

West Somerset has a well balanced environment which exhibits tremendous scope in terms of space to cater for further industrial development. The town of Watchet possesses one of the finest tidal harbour basins in the Bristol Channel with a water-space of about nine acres and facilities to accommodate two large craft at the same time.

TOPOGRAPHY

Weymouth and Portland is an attractive area situated in "Thomas Hardy" country, midway along the South Dorset coast, a varied and magnificent coastline designated as Heritage Coast. Additionally, much of the countryside inland is designated as being of outstanding natural beauty. The County Town of Dorchester is 8 miles away with Poole (25 miles) and Bournemouth (30 miles) to the east and Exeter (60 miles) to the west.

Weymouth itself has a mild climate and sheltered location. The bay provides an ideal location for sailing, with discussions taking place to secure the relocation of the National Sailing Centre to Weymouth. The increasingly popular sport of windsurfing is provided for in Portland Harbour, where many world records have been set. Weymouth beach is famous for its clean sands and safe bathing. These factors, together with the entertainment facilities and natural attractions, make the area an ideal holiday location.

The sheltered harbour, good road and rail communications and proximity to France and the Channel Islands have made Weymouth an important port. The recent reduction of the ferry traffic has introduced an element of uncertainty over the roll-on, roll-off ferry service to Cherbourg and the Channel Islands, although the latter are also served by a Jetfoil service.

The Isle of Portland has a charm and fascination all its own. The Chesil Beach which connects Portland with the mainland is one of Britain's great natural wonders. From the Island's numerous quarries, Portland Stone has been used to construct many of London's great buildings, and is still exported worldwide. The rugged cliffs, old stone quarries, prisons, fortifications and busy Naval Base all contribute to the Island's character, as do many communities such as Easton in the centre of the Island, Fortuneswell which clings to the steep face of the northern side and Chiswell, the fishing hamlet sheltering behind the ridge of the Chesil Beach, which is now being regenerated by selective infill development following severe storm damage.

Employment within the Borough strongly features Tourism and Defence, but has been diversified, particularly with the development of the 60-acre Granby Industrial Estate over the past twenty years, providing for a wide range of firms involved in light and precision engineering, printing, building, distributive trades and also office employment. In order to stimulate the economy of Portland, the Borough Council has initiated a "50-50 Partnership Scheme" with the Rural Development Commission for a new industrial estate, the first phase of which has recently been completed. The local economy is buoyant, with particular pressure in the housing sector where the Structure Plan allocation has been reached within 6 years of its approval. There is also considerable investment interest in the commercial sector with proposals for a major town centre redevelopment scheme at an advanced stage together with many other important proposals in the pipeline.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City of Winchester comprises a large part of central Hampshire. At its heart lies the ancient cathedral town of Winchester the former capital of England and burial place of English Kings. It has a rich heritage from the past in terms of its history, its streets and buildings and archaeological remains and both archaeology and conservation are an important part of the Council's work. Winchester has played an important part in its country's history since Roman times and is still an important regional centre. The remainder of the City area is mainly rural, with small towns such as Alresford, Bishops Waltham and Wickham, and many villages set in areas of outstanding natural beauty. The Itchen Valley with its internationally known trout fishing is of particular interest. The armed services play an important part in the life of the City with several army establishments in the northern part and naval establishments in the south.

This area includes Windsor Great Park, the Ascot racecourse, the castle and the town of Windsor, Eton with its famous college, Maidenhead, the villages of Cookham and Hurley, White Waltham and Waltham St. Lawrence.

Maidenhead is also well known because of its history and geographical position on one of the most beautiful stretches of the river Thames.

The whole of Eton town is a conservation area and there are significant areas of Windsor and Cookham similarly designated.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough of Woking lies about 25 miles south-west of London and enjoys excellent road and rail communications. It is primarily a residential area and contains 1,300 acres of common land and open spaces. The area comprises the civil parishes of Woking (which includes Knaphill and Brookwood), Byfleet, Horsell and Pyrford, all of which have long associations with the past. All bring some special contribution to help make Woking popular and attractive. There are various well established industries and modern industrial estates in the district including the Woking Business Park and Genesis Business Park at Sheerwater.

In recent years there have been major office developments in the town centre which is now a thriving commercial location for many firms, in particular those in the field of new technology. Extensive redevelopment of the town centre is under way for the second time in 20 years. The existing covered shopping centre has been modernised and extended, and by early 1992 it will be linked to a new £120 million 12-acre development of shops and entertainment facilities being promoted by the Borough Council. A new indoor swimming pool has been built in Woking Park, next to the Leisure Centre, and the second phase of building will consist of a leisure pool.

The Leisure Centre has been designated as the sub-regional sports centre for Surrey. It includes seven squash courts, a projectile room and a covered 36.5 m x 32 m (120 ft. x 105 ft.) sports hall with a viewing gallery and is available for use as required for a variety of sports, major sporting events, exhibitions and concerts.

The council owns the civic offices, public parks and recreation grounds, some of the commons, allotments and car parks. A modern private development covering some 500/600 acres at Goldsworth Park, housing about 14,000 people, is now completed.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,800.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District is situated in Central Berkshire, some thirty miles to the west of London, with the towns of Bracknell and Reading adjoining, respectively, its eastern and western boundaries. Despite its close proximity to the nation's capital, the District still retains its rural character. The River Thames forms the natural boundary of the District from Reading, around under the Chiltern Hills, past Henley to Remenham, where it provides some of the most contrasting scenic beauty in the south of England. The riverside villages of Sonning and Wargrave are celebrated beauty spots, and the Henley Regatta course is world renowned. The scenery in the south of the District is also attractive containing woodlands, with undulating rides and high-set commons affording panoramic views, of which the best known is Finchampstead Ridges.

The District has excellent road and rail communications. The M4 Motorway from London to South Wales runs through the centre of the District and the M3 Motorway from London and Basingstoke, with connecting roads to the West Country, passes ten miles to the south of Wokingham. The District is served by both the Western and Southern Region of British Rail. Both Heathrow and Gatwick Airports are within easy reach using the motorway network. Wokingham District has several highly successful industrial sites and is becoming increasingly popular as a centre for new high technology industries. Situated as it is within the area which has become known as "the Golden Triangle" it has attracted many of the country's top industrial companies.

The popularity of the District, both as a place in which to work and to live, has led to unprecedented demands for all forms of development, and the District is now one of the fastest growing areas in the south of England.

TOPOGRAPHY

Woodspring is a blend of rural and urban areas extending from the River Avon and Bristol in the north to the Mendips in the south. Within its boundaries are natural splendours such as Burrington Coombe and the Rock of Ages, inspiration of the popular hymn, and areas of outstanding natural beauty or special scientific interest such as the Gordano Valley and Sand Point. Along the Bristol Channel coast are the attractive towns of Weston-super-Mare, Clevedon and Portishead. These, particularly Weston-super-Mare, are popular with visitors who enjoy the resort amenities and entertainments provided both by the Council and the private sector. With their good accommodation they are also used by visitors as touring bases to explore the more rural hinterland of the District as well as the nearby towns of Bath, Wells and Bristol and the surrounding area.

Agriculture is an important industry in the District, but there are also many highly successful light engineering, high technology and commercial enterprises which have located here because of the excellent motorway and main line rail facilities, good choice of housing and the availability of a responsible workforce. Bristol's Royal Portbury Dock and Airport are located within the District.

The attractiveness of the District and the opportunities it provides for work and recreation in beautiful surroundings are largely responsible for a continuing growth of population.

TOPOGRAPHY

The second largest town in Sussex and 58 miles from London, Worthing is a continually growing residential seaside resort situated on the South Coast at the foot of the Sussex Downs. A popular family resort for all ages, it is becoming increasingly used as a touring centre for visiting the many places of scenic beauty and historic interest in the surrounding district. Its original Charter was granted in 1890 when the area was 1,790 acres and the population 16,000. A new Charter was granted with effect from 1st April 1974 conferring borough status on the new Worthing District created by the Local Government Act 1972. The present day area is 8,030 acres and the population over 96,000. With the surrounding rural area, it is a natural shopping centre for approximately 175,000 people. Worthing is noted for the mildness and equability of its climate and most of the town is situated on level ground.

There are five miles of gradually inclined beach giving safe sea bathing, and in addition to a heated outdoor swimming pool there is the Aquarena, a modern indoor swimming centre including a Solarium.

The Pier, owned by the Borough Council, has a Pavilion at the northern end with a seating capacity of 850 and is used for concerts, Summer Season stage entertainments, dancing and Winter productions. Adjacent to the Town Hall, which was opened in 1933, is the Assembly Hall used for meetings, banquets, dances, national conferences and choral and symphony concerts; seating capacity is 920 and refreshment facilities with licensed bar are available. In the adjoining Richmond Room there is an additional licensed bar. There is a Music Festival held annually in November.

Within the Borough, the Council provides and maintains an area of approximately 950 acres open to the enjoyment of the population, and on the Downs the Council has acquired over 400 acres for preservation as public open space. Ornamental parks are distributed throughout the Borough with a total of over 100 acres, and a special feature is made of the town's floral displays. There is an 8½-acre boating lagoon, and sporting facilities include cricket, football, tennis, bowls, putting, croquet, pitch-and-putt, boating, riding, sailing and indoor bowling. There are three 18-hole golf courses in the town including a municipal course at Hill Barn. Beach House Park, where the EBA Headquarters have recently been established, has become the mecca for bowlers everywhere, and is to be the venue for the 1992 World Bowls Championships, and annually stages the EBA National contests, and the "Jack High" TV series.

Worthing's multi-purpose sports complex caters for participants in a wide range of activities and with varying abilities from the enthusiastic beginner to the experienced international. Facilities include large sports hall, squash courts, rifle and archery range, practice hall, weight training room, a hard porous 7-lane athletics track, with a 9-lane straight, floodlit outside Redgrea area, cafeteria, bar and social facilities.

Mayoral annual allowance £5,855.

Whilst the area is mainly rural in character, light industry is in plenty which provides for a wide employment base throughout the District. Industrialists, and visitors alike, take advantage of the M5 running through the District that provides access to Bristol within the hour and to Birmingham within the half hour. There are 5 major industrial sites within the district, two of which are operated by Wychavon.

Variety of interest abounds throughout the 260 square miles of the district and as well as picturesque towns and villages, the area is served by the Rivers Severn and Avon. Wychavon stretches from Broadway in the South to Hartlebury in the North and includes the historic towns of Evesham, Pershore and Droitwich. At Droitwich Spa, work upon the redeveloped brine baths has been completed and was open to the public from July 1985. Also at Droitwich, a marina is being completed which will lead to the River Severn by a canal navigation which is being restored. Evesham has a substantial new retail development opened in the winter of 1989 (Abbey Gates) and comprehensive extensions to the two sports centres at Pershore and Evesham has extended leisure provision to serve the three main towns (including Droitwich). Wychavon continues to attract increasing numbers of visitors thus furthering the district's reputation as a desirable area in which to live and work.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the south-east of the district, High Wycombe lies 29 miles north-west of London, 26 miles south-east of Oxford, 10 miles north of Maidenhead and 17 miles south of the county town of Aylesbury. A section of the M40 motorway London to Oxford passes through the district; and the Marlow by-pass links the M40 at Handy Cross with the M4 near Maidenhead. There are comprehensive train, bus and coach services throughout the district. Although the district includes the urban areas of High Wycombe, Marlow, Bourne End and Princes Risborough, a large proportion is rural, set in the Chilterns, a designated area of outstanding natural beauty, with extensive beechwoods and some of the most celebrated reaches of the Thames, from Henley past Hambleden, Hedmenham and Marlow to Bourne End and Hedsor. The area is rich in history; pre-historic relics, bronze and iron age burial mounds and earthworks have been discovered, and many local places are mentioned in the Norman Domesday Book.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Wyre Forest District Council was formed by the amalgamation of the boroughs of Kidderminster and Bewdley, the urban district of Stourport-on-Severn and the rural district of Kidderminster. Kidderminster is an industrial town with the manufacture of carpets as the staple industry. Both Stourport-on-Severn and Bewdley have extensive frontages to the river Severn with facilities for boating, sailing and fishing. A substantial part of the Wyre Forest is within the new district as is also a large part of the Kingsford Country Park. There are therefore extensive recreation and leisure areas within the district, serving the industrial and commuter population. The centre of the ancient borough of Bewdley and the canal basin at Stourport-on-Severn are conservation areas. The river Stour and part of the Staffordshire and Worcestershire Canal both run through the district and join the river Severn at Stourport-on-Severn.

TOPOGRAPHY

In 1971, York celebrated 1,900 years of recorded history, having been founded by the Romans in AD 71, when Petilius Cerealis built a legionary fortress at the junction of the rivers Ouse and Foss.

The important medieval guilds, including the Merchant Adventurers and the Merchant Taylors, whose guildhalls still remain, were responsible for the annual presentation of the cycle of mystery plays performed on wagons which moved around the city. These plays in a modern version were revived in 1951, and are still performed against the splendid background of the ruined St. Mary's Abbey on the occasion of the City's Festival of the Arts.

York retains so many historic buildings, of which about 850 are listed, and has now become a major centre for international tourism. Visitors flock to see its ancient walls, streets, bars, churches, guildhalls and castle. The glorious Minster, the largest Gothic church in England, built between 1220 and 1472, was restored at a cost of over £2,000,000, in time for its five-hundredth anniversary in 1972. The ancient Guildhall was destroyed in an air raid in 1942, but has been rebuilt and was re-opened in 1960.

The coming of the railways in the nineteenth century made York a major transport centre. Today the city is still the headquarters of the Eastern Region of British Railways. The University of York opened in 1963 and is now a flourishing institution.

Apart from service industries the principal industries are the manufacture of chocolate and sugar confectionery, optical instruments, shock absorbers and railway carriages.

The Strays, covering 818 acres, are managed by the Council. They include the famous Knavesmire, where horse-racing has taken place since 1731. The city has also five parks and many gardens.

The City has become one of the prime museum centres of the country. The Castle Museum is one of the most successful folk museums of the world, and attracts many thousands of visitors annually. The Yorkshire Museum of archaeology and natural history has a national reputation for its unique specimens and the Art Gallery boasts a fine collection of works of art representative of all the major schools of European painting. The National Railway Museum opened in York during 1975 as did the Heritage Centre (now called York Story) which recounts the history of the City from Roman times to the present day.

The Jorvik Viking Centre was opened in 1984 and immediately became a major attraction. It features a reconstruction of life in the viking city of Jorvik.

LOCAL COUNCILS IN ENGLAND AND WALES

The Local Government Act 1972 makes the following provisions regarding parish and community councils.

England

For every parish there is a parish meeting to discuss parish affairs. Parish councils in being before 1st April 1974 continued and 296 boroughs and urban districts became parishes on that day.

If a parish has no parish council, the district council must (and if the parish is grouped under a common parish council, may) establish a separate parish council for that parish:

- (a) if the population includes 200 or more local government electors or
- (b) where the population includes 150-199 local government electors, if the parish meeting so resolves.

If the electorate is not more than 150, the district council may

- (a) establish a separate parish council if the parish meeting so resolves;
- (b) dissolve the parish council at the request of the parish meeting; if rejected a further application is barred for two years.
- (c) if requested, order the grouping of parishes under a common parish council, or dissolve a group and fix the number of councillors for each parish.

The above procedures are subject to the general review of parishes and their boundaries which began after Easter 1978. District councils have been asked to review the pattern of parishes in their area and to make recommendations to the Local Government Boundary Commission for England. This body may either propose these recommendations (with or without amendments) to the Secretary of State or may carry out its own review and make proposals to him. He may by order give effect to proposals, either as made to him, or with modifications. Guidelines for the reviews were issued by the Department of the Environment in its Circular 121/77 and the Commission set out procedures in its Report No. 286. Besides amending the existing parishes, this review may result in new parishes being created in areas at present outside the parish structure. Lists of parishes in this Section have been amended for Orders issued prior to 31st March 1988.

A parish council consists of the chairman and not less than four councillors; for most councils elections were held in 1987 and then every fourth year thereafter, but with the remainder it may be either 1988 or 1990 if the district council elections are held in thirds, or, according to parish reviews.

A parish council may adopt the title "Town Council" (See heading "Town Councils" below)

Parish councils may provide or maintain shelters, clocks, village halls, playing fields, gymnasiums, open spaces and camping sites; baths, washhouses and bathing places; allotments, war memorials, street lighting, car parks, burial grounds, certain public improvements such as public walks, roadside verges, playgrounds, seats, litter bins, and wcs. Important duties are assigned to parish councils in connection with public footpaths and churchyards. Lately they have made enterprising and widespread use of their power of discretionary expenditure under s. 137 of the 1972 Act. Parish councils also administer or are concerned in the administration of tens of thousands of local charities (other than ecclesiastical and eleemosynary charities). They are also the custodians of parochial public documents; in addition to the foregoing they have miscellaneous powers relating to the prevention of unlawful inclosure of common land, obstruction of rights of way and the regulation of recreation grounds, village greens, open spaces and public walks. In addition all planning applications must be notified to them and they must be consulted on the making of certain types of byelaws. (Further information on Powers and Constitution of Local Councils is available in a Handbook published at £1.05 by the National Association of Local Councils.)

Every parish in England must have a Parish Meeting which all the local government electors in the parish are entitled to attend. If there is a council for the parish, the Parish Meeting must meet at least once a year between 1st March and 1st June; its main function is to discuss parish affairs. Most of its legal powers have been abolished.

If there is no Parish Council the Parish Meeting is the local government authority for the parish but with restricted powers, and it must assemble at least twice a year. In such a parish the chairman of the Parish Meeting and the proper officer of the District Council are a body corporate known as "The Parish Trustees". They must in all respects act as directed by the Parish Meeting.

Wales

Since 1st April, 1974 every district consists of one or more areas called "communities", namely the boroughs, urban districts and rural parishes existing before that date together with six small special areas. A community council was established, in place of every parish council, and for 90 ex-urban communities whose urban councils so requested.

A Special Community Review has been conducted by the Local Government Boundary Commission for Wales to provide for a revision of community geography. The Commission has submitted many Final Proposals to the Secretary of State for every District, and some Orders changing community boundaries, establishing new communities and creating new councils have been made. Lists of community councils in this section have been amended for Orders issued prior to 31st March 1987.

A community council consists of the chairman and community councillors and the last elections took place in 1987 and then every fourth year thereafter; the term of office is four years normally, except when the Orders have specified a year other than 1987.

In functions and other respects community councils are very similar to parish councils in England, but community meetings have no formal legal status or obligation to meet annually, and there is no equivalent to the separate parish meetings or parish trustees established in England above.

TOWN COUNCILS

Section 245(6) of the Local Government Act 1972 provides that:

The council of a parish or community which is not grouped with any other parish or community may resolve that the parish or community shall have the status of a town and thereupon—

(a) The council of the parish or community shall bear the name of the council of the town;

(b) The chairman and vice-chairman of the council shall be respectively entitled to the style of town mayor and deputy town mayor;

(c) The parish meeting or a community meeting shall have the style of town meeting.

The following lists are marked (TC) where it could be ascertained that parish councils in England and community councils in Wales had adopted town status. The change of status does not confer additional powers.

The names of parish and community councils which have been granted city status will be found under "Cities" in Section 34.

The Act does not require a parish or community council to notify any official body of its change of status and the lists may therefore be incomplete.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LOCAL COUNCILS

108, Great Russell St., London, WC1B 3LD. (071-637 1865).

The National Association of Local Councils is a federation of county associations formed in 1947 to promote the interests and privileges of local, that is to say parish, community and town councils; to foster the co-operation of these councils with other local authorities and voluntary organisations; to assist local councils in the performance of their duties; to make available to them opportunities for securing information and literature and for meeting together in conference; generally to develop social, cultural and recreational life in all villages and to promote good local government. It provides its member councils with a variety of services such as advice and information, and it publishes a quarterly journal The Local Council Review and Handbooks on Powers, and Chairmanship, etc. of Local Councils. It holds a biennial National Conference (next 1992) and an annual Welsh Conference.

It sponsors through its County Associations, day and residential weekend training courses for clerks of parish and community councils and for councillors. A major activity is the representation of the interests of both its member councils and their areas to Parliament and in national discussions with other local authority associations.

The addresses of the County Associations are set out under each County listing of parishes or communities in this Section, and the names and addresses of clerks to parish councils, town councils and parish meetings in England, and to community councils in Wales may be obtained from the Secretary of the particular County Association or from the particular District Council.

ASSOCIATION OF LARGER LOCAL COUNCILS

This Association was established in 1981 on the basis that the larger local councils among the several thousand parish and community councils in England and Wales should seek a wider range of functions than the average local council was permitted under the Local Government Reorganisation of 1974. Thus its objectives are to seek a regular exchange of information between member councils for action to be taken on policy issues to enhance the community services at local council level.

Secretary: Councillor F. Pendlebury, 53 Ash Hse., Lilac Dr., Northwich, Cheshire.

ASSOCIATION FOR NEIGHBOURHOOD COUNCILS (ANC)

Room 43, Baskerville Hse, Broad St, Birmingham, B1 2NF (021-200 1027).

Established in 1970 as a parliamentary pressure group the ANC is now composed of individuals, residents' associations, self-help groups and varied neighbourhood based organisations as well as neighbourhood councils and parish councils. All seek a convenient and effective local government system capable of providing for the needs of urban neighbourhoods efficiently.

ANC offers information and education on matters relating to local government and the community: provides practical guidelines for setting up voluntary neighbourhood councils and for parish review procedures which are responsive to local demand and can lead to the establishment of new parish councils in urban areas. ANC promotes community development through education, self help, public participation in decision making and involvement in local affairs.

Chairman: Councillor E. J. Eames, JP, Birmingham City Council.

Director: H. Moreton.

PARISHES IN ENGLAND

The Municipal Year Book is the only source for a comprehensive list of the 10,200 parishes in England. This form of local government is currently subject to review of boundaries, and to grouping etc. of parishes under the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1972.

At this stage the parishes are set down in a County and District area basis, and the name of the Secretary of the County Branch of the National Association of Local Councils is quoted as being the source of information. The Editor acknowledges the willing co-operation of the Association's Secretary and of the County Branch Secretaries in the preparation of this section of the Municipal Year Book, and particularly the work of updating all county lists as at 31st March, 1986.

As for Local Council statistics, the Association have reported that the largest local council in England in terms of population is Bracknell Town Council in Berkshire, which has 48,681 inhabitants. Bracknell also has the largest penny rate product of £93,315. Largest in area is Whittlesey Town Council in Cambridgeshire with 22,265 acres. The smallest English parish is Stone Parish Meeting in Kent with no population at all, but a penny rate product of £1. Guys Cliffe Parish Meeting in Warwickshire has the smallest area of only 12 acres. In Wales the largest community council in population is Llanelli Town Council in Dyfed. Llanddewi Brefi Community Council, also in Dyfed, has the largest area with 28,115 acres while Barry Town Council in South Glamorgan has the highest penny rate product of £40,111. Narbeth Town Council in Dyfed has the smallest area of 121 acres. In the same county area Llanydeisant Community Council records the smallest penny rate product in Wales of £30.

All these parishes have a parish council or are in a group/joint parish council, except where the letters PM indicate that there is a Parish Meeting only as the local government authority for the parish within the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1972. Some parishes have resolved under Section 245(6) of this Act to have the status of a town, and below these parishes are noted with the letters TC.

(B) indicates the District has Borough Status.

COMMUNITY COUNCILS AND COMMUNITY MEETINGS IN WALES

The following lists of Community Councils (including Town Councils where marked TC) summarises the establishment of Community Councils in the county areas in Wales at the time of going to press to include Review Orders issued prior to 31st March 1987 with 790 community councils then in existence. CM indicates Community Meeting when no Community Council exists.

WALES ASSOCIATION OF COMMUNITY AND TOWN COUNCILS

The Wales Association of Community and Town Councils was formed in 1976, to serve in particular, the interests of Community and Town Councils in Wales. It welcomes the disappearance of the word "Parish" in Welsh local government; the ancient local unit of administration in Wales was "cwmwd" or commune, and the title "Community" responds to that history. The Association's structure is based on the District rather than the County basis.

The Association issues a quarterly bilingual publication, "Bro", which is distributed to every Councillor and Clerk of member Councils. It maintains a close liaison with the Welsh Office and submits its views on Government Consultative Papers, Reports and Bills before Parliament. Seminars are held both on a National and District basis and the Annual Conference is its policy-making body.

Officers: President: Principal Dr. Glyn O. Phillips; Vice-Presidents: Mr. Geraint Howells, MP; Coun. E. G. Millward; Rt. Hon. John Morris, QC, MP; Mr. Dafydd Wigley, MP.
Adviser: W. I. Samuel.

Chairman: —. General Secretary: Mrs. Mary Thomas, Pen Roc, Rhodfa'r Môr, Aberystwyth, SY23 2AZ (0970 612801).

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS

And Commission for the New Towns

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS AND COMMISSION FOR THE NEW TOWNS

The New Town movement began in Britain immediately after the Second World War with the designation of the first eleven new towns between 1946 and 1950. Eight of these—Basildon (Essex), Bracknell (Berks), Crawley (Sussex), Harlow (Essex), Hatfield (Herts), Hemel Hempstead (Herts), Stevenage (Herts) and Welwyn Garden City (Herts)—were designated to help meet London's urgent post-war housing needs. The other 3 towns—Aycliffe and Peterlee (Co Durham), and Corby (Northants)—offered solutions to problems created by the particular needs of local industry.

The second generation, designated between 1961 and 1964, were concerned with urban congestion, and also, being mostly located in development areas with industrial growth. Skelmersdale (Lancs.) and Runcorn (Cheshire) have taken people from Merseyside, Redditch (Worcs), from Birmingham and the Black Country, and Washington (Tyne and Wear), from Tyneside and Wearside.

The six third generation new towns, designated since 1967, were planned at a time when the country's population was expected to increase considerably, and consequently had larger population targets than the earlier new towns. Milton Keynes (Bucks), Northampton (Northants) and Peterborough (Cambs), lie about 60 miles from London, and were planned to counteract the Capital's attraction, as well as to take some of its overspill population. Telford (Salop), was planned to take people from the Birmingham area, and Warrington (Cheshire), from the Manchester area. Central Lancashire New Town was planned to provide a substantial economic growth point, and thereby to arrest the migration of people to other regions. Except for Milton Keynes, the third generation towns were based on substantial existing populations; Northampton, Peterborough and Warrington being developed in partnership with their respective local authorities.

Since 1962 however, the Commission for the New Towns has been responsible for taking over, from the individual development corporations, the management and the assets of those towns where development was substantially completed.

By 1979, with the advent of the Conservative Government's 'privatisation' policy, the Commission was instructed to undertake the orderly disposal of the commercial and industrial property assets of the towns under its control.

The first towns to fall under the wing of the Commission were Crawley and Hemel Hempstead in 1962. These were followed by Hatfield and Welwyn Garden City (1966), Harlow, Stevenage and Corby (1980), Bracknell (1982) and Northampton, Redditch and Skelmersdale in 1985, Central Lancashire and Basildon in 1986, Aycliffe & Peterlee, Cwmbran, Washington and Peterborough in 1988, Warrington and Runcorn in 1989. Telford is scheduled to be wound up in 1991 and Milton Keynes in 1992.

In Wales there were 2 new towns. Cwmbran (in Gwent) was wound up in March 1988, and Newtown (in Powys), which became the responsibility of the Development Board for Rural Wales.

In Scotland there are 5 new towns, designated under the New Towns (Scotland) Act 1968. Cumbernauld, East Kilbride, Glenrothes, Irvine and Livingston are mainly designed to relieve overcrowding in Glasgow.

This section also makes reference to Letchworth Garden City which, although not a development corporation within the context of the New Towns Acts, is of sufficient magnitude to justify inclusion. More recently, under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 two Urban Development Corporations have been created to re-vitalise the derelict docklands of London and Merseyside, and 9 others to revitalise run-down areas in the Black Country, Teesside, Trafford, Tyne & Wear, Sheffield, Leeds, Bristol, Central Manchester and Cardiff—details of which are also included in this section.

Milton Keynes is 50 miles north of London, next to the M1 motorway. The M25 motorway provides links with Heathrow and the Channel ports. There are three railway stations within the city boundary; of these, Milton Keynes Central is on the main intercity route from London (Euston) to Birmingham and Glasgow. Three major airports—Heathrow, Birmingham and Luton—are within easy driving distance. For private air taxis, helicopters and air cargo, Cranfield airfield is only 15 minutes away.

The existing population is about 148,000. Over 3,500 new jobs are created each year.

Milton Keynes has attractive modern office and factory buildings, a bustling city centre, prime sites for development and a wide range of housing. It also has acres of open space and parkland (over 13 million trees and shrubs have been planted since the city began). It provides an excellent environment in which to live and work.

East Kilbride, the first of the Scottish new towns, became a large burgh in May, 1968. It is now within the East Kilbride District of Strathclyde Region following the reorganisation of local government in Scotland in May 1975.

The town is situated in the Clyde Valley region, about nine miles south of Glasgow. The New Town was established to ease Glasgow's post-war housing problems and to broaden the economy of the West of Scotland, previously dependent on the traditional "heavy" industries of coal mining, shipbuilding and engineering. Industrial and commercial expansion in the New Town has been so successful, that East Kilbride is recognised now as the foremost growthpoint in Scotland.

The site of the New Town is 10,250 acres, of which some 5,700 acres will remain as a green belt to the north-west of the built-up area of about 4,550 acres. 22,843 Development Corporation dwellings were completed at 31st March 1990, of which 11,582 have been sold to tenants. The eighth district of the town, Stewartfield, for 2,500 dwellings which will be built entirely by the private sector, was officially started in November 1985, and the first 550 houses are now complete with another 124 under construction.

At the time of designation the original villages of East Kilbride and Maxwellton had a population of 2,400. East Kilbride is now the sixth largest town or city in Scotland, with a population of 69,400 and 800 acres of industrial estates accommodating 317 manufacturing and service firms in a total factory space of 744,000m². Total employment in the town at the end of March, 1990, was 32,697 of which 16,412 were in industry.

The Corporation is developing the Peel Park campus on the west side of the town, offering fully serviced development sites ranging from 0.3 to 5.7 hectares (1–14 acres), a high amenity campus development set in rolling countryside, yet only five kilometres (three miles) from the Town Centre. The park is tailor-made for high technology and science based industry requiring high quality environment with immediate access to the local expressways. Complementing the industrial development of the area, some 7.5 hectares (18 acres) have been chosen as being highly suited for high technology office users.

East Kilbride is now recognised as a regional shopping centre. The Olympia shopping and leisure development opened in 1990 attracts patrons from a catchment area of 500,000 people, and completes the final phase of the Town Centre with 3,400 free car parking spaces.

Also situated in the town centre is the Inland Revenue multi-storey computer building, Centre 1—which handles the PAYE system for the whole of Scotland. In total the town has 76,000 m² of office accommodation including Abercrombie House, home of the Overseas Development Administration. There are hotels, post office, an Olympic-length swimming pool and youth centre. In the civic area is the headquarters of East Kilbride District Council, health centre, police headquarters and fire station.

There are six neighbourhood shopping centres in each of the residential areas. In addition, sixteen small groups of shops have been built.

Six secondary schools and 22 primary schools have been completed. Twenty-three churches have been added to the three which existed before designation. There are now two former schools occupied by departments of the Cambuslang College.

Five large public recreation areas are equipped with tennis courts, football pitches, rugby pitches, cricket pitch, bowling greens, running track and appropriate pavilions. The facilities also include a nine-hole pitch and putt course. There are five golf courses (three private and two municipal), a large indoor sports centre which was built by the Town Council, and now includes an Indoor Bowls Rink, and a private sports club. An Athletics track was completed in 1989. The Town Centre Park contains a boating pond, a paddling pool and Himalayan putting green.

Enquiries: Enquiries from industrialists and developers of commercial and retail properties are welcomed and should be addressed to the Managing Director of the East Kilbride Development Corporation.

The town occupies a central position in the Kingdom of Fife. On 30th June 1948, 5,760 acres of land were designated for development. There was an existing population within this area of approximately 1,150 persons.

The purpose of Glenrothes New Town is to act as one of the growth points for Central Scotland and to assist in the economic regeneration of Fife Region. The minimum target population is at present 55,000.

Glenrothes has ample industrial estates, of which Queensway, Viewfield, Eastfield and Whitehill are substantially completed apart from option ground for expansion by existing industries. Land is available for new development at Southfield, Bankhead, Airfield Industrial Park and Saltire Centre at Viewfield North.

All sites are near to housing and shopping and give easy access to road, rail, sea and air communications. The town has its own airfield which has a hard runway.

The population of the New Town in March 1990 was 38,500 with 14,377 houses completed.

Irvine New Town, the only British New Town with a seaside frontage, was designated in 1966 and covers 5,022 hectares. Its population at designation was 34,600, and the target for the late 1990's is 95,000. The 1989 population is 56,500. It is situated on the Firth of Clyde some 30 miles south west of Glasgow and incorporates the Ancient Burghs of Irvine and Kilwinning and a number of smaller communities. Since Local government reorganisation in 1975, it has been the headquarters of Cunninghamham District Council.

By 1989, the Corporation had built over 5,300 houses for rent and promoted over 2,000 for sale. Industry has also been expanded in parallel with housing development. Compared with about 58 companies at the time of designation, the New Town by 1988 contained over 200 industrial concerns, including Swedish, American, French and Finnish companies. Products include computers, pharmaceuticals, light and heavy engineering equipment, electrical and electronic components, high-tech and electronic companies, textiles, clothing and carpets, chemicals, heavy goods vehicles and buses, glass bottles, fork lift trucks, golf equipment, valves and bearings, optics, audio-visual and phonograph equipment and equipment for the oil and gas producing industry. The Corporation provides advance factories for immediate occupation together with a range of serviced sites.

Being an industrial centre located in the heart of a resort area of great scenic beauty, the new town has considerable potential for the attraction of tourists. This is being developed not only as a seasonal tourist industry in itself, but also to provide much higher amenities and recreation facilities for the permanent population than would normally be possible in the earlier stages of a New Town development.

Magnum, the largest Leisure Centre of its kind in Western Europe, provides swimming pools, skating and curling rinks, indoor bowling, a theatre/cinema/conference complex, and a complete range of facilities for indoor sports and pursuits of all kinds, was opened in October, 1976. It attracts over 1.5 million visitors a year.

The Centre is located in the heart of a 150 acre Beach Park reclaimed from former industrial wasteland and now landscaped with artificial lochs and picnic areas. A recent new development is Sea World Marine Aquarium. In addition, the nearby harbour is being excavated and improved to provide facilities for all types of aquatic sports and activities and is home to the Scottish Maritime Museum.

At Kilwinning, the existing Eglinton Park is being expanded to create a 1,700-acre country park which will include facilities for sailing, pony trekking, nature trails, a garden and caravan centre. Linear parks are being created along the banks of the four rivers which flow through the New Town.

In the commercial field, the Corporation completed in April, 1974, a shopping and office complex at Bridgegate providing 2,500 m² of shops and 2,800 m² of offices.

In late 1975, in partnership with Ravenscroft and Murrayfield Scottish Investments Ltd., the first phase of a new shopping centre was completed. This contains some 36,000 m² of shopping space, totally enclosed and spanning the River Irvine. The shopping mall is centrally heated and air conditioned. Landscaping, with trees, shrubs and plants, has been carried out extensively inside and around the building. An 11 unit extension was opened in late 1982 by Lyndeane Developments (Scotland) Ltd. Later in May 1984 a new shopping hall of 43 units was opened. A further town centre expansion is planned in 1989.

A complete new system of distributor and service roads for the whole area was substantially completed in 1975, and a new 7 mile by-pass to carry the main Greenock-Ayr trunk route was opened in March, 1976.

The development of bus-only "community routes" using many of the original country lanes and routes began in mid-1976 with the opening of the by-pass. These Community Routes are designed to provide a link between the new areas of high density housing and the industrial estates. Factories and houses are separated from each other by the new road system and are largely screened by landscaping and new earthworks.

When completed, Irvine will be the largest town in Ayrshire, both in population and acreage.

Livingston was designated in 1962, is 6,868 acres (2,780 ha.) in area and has a target population of 70,000. Its principal function is to act as an economic growth point in the Scottish and regional contexts. It enjoys excellent communications being 15 miles from Edinburgh and 30 miles from Glasgow on the M8 motorway which skirts the town. Edinburgh Airport is within ten minutes drive.

The designated area is gently undulating and is situated in the pleasant environs of the River Almond valley which lies between the Pentland and Bathgate Hills. There are many features of historic and scenic interest in and around the town.

With a population of 41,000 Livingston is the largest town in the Lothian Region after the City of Edinburgh and it is the sub-regional centre for West Lothian District which is one of the most rapidly expanding areas of Scotland. In the Lothian Structure Plan Livingston is identified as the primary industrial and residential growth area in the region.

The economy of the town is varied—300 industrial firms are now established—but electronics, health care and office employment are emerging to be of particular significance. The Kirkton Campus high amenity 'science park' is proving especially attractive to high technology firms while the Almondvale Centre is becoming established as a major office location.

Education, health and leisure facilities are being positively planned and provided by the responsible authorities and examples of each are the subject of interest by visitors from home and abroad.

URBAN DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS

Urban Development Corporations are based on the new towns concept. They were set up, under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

LONDON DOCKLANDS DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION: Great Eastern Enterprise, Unit A, Mill-harbour, London E14 9TJ (071-515 3000).

Members of the Board: Chairman: David Hardy; Deputy Chairman: Lord Cocks; Chief Executive: Michael Honey; Other Members: Sir John Garlick; A. A. Benjamin, OBE; Jonathan Mathews; Lewis Moss, CBE; Sir Christopher Foster; D. Y. Davies; L. Spencer.

The Corporation's programme for housing in the UDA has been progressively increased. The projected total housing development on LDDC land now stands at 18,000 dwellings. The total for dwellings on non-LDDC land stands at over 14,000. Of these totals 8,567 (48%) and 6,458 (46%) respectively have been started.

In 1981 only 5% (about 700 dwellings) in the UDA were owner occupied. By September 1987, the number of owner occupied dwellings had increased to over 7,100 (32% of the Docklands dwelling stock).

Of 4,611 properties on Corporation land sold up to March 1988 over 2,000 had been purchased by individuals previously resident in one of the three Docklands Boroughs.

Between July 1981 and March 1988, of the 4,611 properties built on LDDC land for owner occupation, 42% were sold at under £40,000. A further 632 properties were built for rent on Corporation land (537 through housing associations) and an additional 359 for shared ownership (all through housing associations).

MERSEYSIDE DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION: (operative 25 March, 1981), Fourth Floor, Royal Liver Building, Pierhead, Liverpool, L3 1JH (051-236 6090; Fax: 051-227 3174).

Chairman: Philip Carter, CBE; Deputy Chairman: Clive Lewis, FRICS, FSA; Other Board Members: Professor G. W. Ashworth, CBE, RIBA, PPRTPI; Cllr. K. C. Coombes, BA; Cllr. T. R. Glover; Cllr. J. Hale, IPFA; Dr. J. H. Ritchie, MBE, FBIM; B. Thaxter.

Chief Officers: Chief Executive—Dr. J. H. Ritchie, MBE, BArch, RIBA, FBIM; Commercial Director—A. Anderson, ARICS, MInst, AM(Dip), CDipAF; Director of Development—A. F. Potter, BSc, CEng, FICE; Director of Finance and Administration—D. Morse, ACMA, IPFA.

Merseyside Development Corporation was designated under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 for the purpose of regenerating 865 acres of derelict and under-used docklands on both sides of the River Mersey. The Designated Area was extended by a further 1,507 acres on 8th November, 1988, to include further dockland and port hinterland areas, the former commercial centre of Birkenhead, and the New Brighton seafront. The Development Corporation has access to Treasury funds by a combination of grants and loans, and has planning powers for the designated area. Approximately 600 acres of land has so far been acquired principally through Parliamentary vesting orders.

The Corporation's plans were published in August, 1981 as an 'Initial Development Strategy'. This was the subject of intensive local consultations which established a dialogue with those affected by the proposals and provided the context for the physical reclamation and infrastructure provision in order to lay the foundations for private sector investment and development. Area Development programmes are being produced and views sought upon them for all parts of the extended Designated Areas in 1989.

Dramatic progress has been made in the regeneration of the Liverpool South Docks. The Albert Dock, 1.2 million ft² of Grade I listed buildings, was formally re-opened by HRH The Prince of Wales in May, 1988. The Development Corporation's role in the refurbishment of the dock was recognised in October, 1986 when it was presented with the European Gold Medal for the Preservation of Historic Monuments.

A major tourist facility has now been created at Albert Dock, which attracted 3.5 million visitors in 1988 becoming the most popular large visitor attraction in the Region according to a North West Tourist Board survey. This, together with the completion of 69 acres of attractive, unpolluted waterspace has provided a magnificent setting for new leisure investment and for private housing investment in refurbished dockside buildings. The creation in 1987 of the Liverpool Marina, now being extended by the private sector, is already stimulating new interest in housing investment on the waterfront. Major leisure investment is now proposed for land immediately south of Albert Dock. A linked series of leisure facilities—multi-use arena, shopping mall, IMAX film theatre and multi-screen cinema complex—are at the planning application stage. New hotel development are also envisaged.

Elsewhere in the South Docks the Development Corporation has created Brunswick Park from former degraded dock transit sheds. 519,000 ft² is already let to 120 companies. Further buildings are being refurbished and land sold to extend the Park. Major new commercial sites are being made available adjacent to the Business Park and on reclaimed sites on the Birkenhead waterfront.

The Development Corporation is a major supporter of enterprise and skill training projects in inner Merseyside. Skill and enterprise training schemes assisted by the Corporation provided over 7,000 training places in the year to March, 1989. The Corporation is also the major supporter of the Merseyside Tourism Board, a private sector organisation promoting Merseyside's attractions and providing a full range of visitor services and a conference bureau.

The staff structure is streamlined (61 staff in post in March, 1989) 'buying in' services from the private and public sectors. At the end of March, 1989 the Development Corporation had let contracts for civil engineering, building construction, demolition, reclamation and landscaping works totalling £110 million. Of this £100 million was awarded to firms in the County of Merseyside and adjacent districts.

Eight new Urban Development Corporations have been established by the Department of the Environment, and one by the Welsh Office, by orders made under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

They seek to bring land and buildings into effective use; to encourage the development of industry and commerce; and to improve the environment—placing particular emphasis on the reclamation and servicing of land, renovation and re-use of buildings and the provision of adequate infrastructure to encourage the development of land by the private sector.

Letchworth, the first Garden City, was founded in 1903 by First Garden City Limited, a company formed to implement and develop the principles contained in Ebenezer Howard's book "Garden Cities of Tomorrow". The object of the company was ultimately to vest the freehold estate in a body which would manage it on behalf of the community. In the mid to late fifties, First Garden City Limited, a public company, became the target for property speculators and was the subject of a successful takeover bid in 1960. This situation gave rise to considerable concern in the town and the then Letchworth Urban District Council promoted a bill, which became the Letchworth Garden City Corporation Act 1962, which in turn restored the principles on which the Garden City was founded.

The Corporation, which acquired the Letchworth estate of First Garden City Limited on 1 January 1963, was constituted a public authority, charged with the responsibility to manage, develop and extend the undertaking as a public service. The Act empowers the Corporation to precept on the North Hertfordshire District Council in any year in which certain defined expenditure exceeds the revenues of the Corporation, a power which has not been required since 1971. The Act further provides for the way in which the Corporation shall apply its revenues and, after meeting normal expenditure on management of the estate, these are to be used for the benefit of the local community.

Distribution of surpluses from 1974 to 1990 exceeds £11.5 million. Apart from the wide range of local organisations which have benefited in this way, the Corporation has constructed four major projects—a multi-purpose Sports and Leisure centre (administered by the District Council), Standalone Farm Centre (a model farm where can be seen many varieties of farm animals, fowl, birds, etc., for educational and public visits during the period from April to October), Plinston Hall (which caters for theatre and other entertainments and has facilities for conferences, meetings, dinner/dances and other social functions) and the Ernest Gardiner Day Hospital (a rehabilitation hospital where the referred patients are encouraged to re-learn and practice new techniques and to be as independent as possible in their own homes).

In addition, the Corporation administers the First Garden City Heritage Museum which records the role of the Garden City Movement in creating the first Garden City, also the Letchworth Shop, a centre for local and tourist information.

The Corporation has been involved in the development of a 56 acre Business Park, which consists of high quality, low density buildings, set in highly landscaped surroundings. At the heart of the Park is the Letchworth Business Centre which offers consultancy and a wide range of advice and services to local businesses.

Land and properties owned and controlled by the Corporation:

Freehold land—4,900 acres of which 2,710 acres form an agricultural belt surrounding the built-up area. The Corporation farms 2,300 acres in hand and controls a total of 326,000,000 sq. ft. of industrial units on rack rental and long leasehold basis together with a substantial portfolio of shops, offices, houses and undeveloped land.

Amenities—Standalone Farm Centre, Plinston Hall; Ernest Gardiner Day Hospital; First Garden City Heritage Museum; The Letchworth Shop; Letchworth Business Centre.

DEVELOPMENT BOARD FOR RURAL WALES

Ladywell Hse., Newtown, Powys, SY16 1JB (0686 626965).

Members: E. Glyn Davies, Esq. (Chairman); Robert Clee, Esq.; J. Kendall Harris, Esq.; Cllr. Veronica Hollis; Cllr. A. M. Leonard; J. Morgan, Esq.; E. Rea, Esq. OBE; H. Roberts, Esq.; P. Saunders; Cllr. M. W. Shaw; Sir Donald Walters; Cllr. R. Williams.

Officers: Dr. W. Iain Skewis (Chief Executive); M. J. Flanagan (Director of Finance and Technical Services); P. J. Pettigrew (Director of Economic Development); J. E. Hughes (Director of Social Development and Board Secretary); G. W. Jackson (Marketing Director).

The Development Board for Rural Wales (which also operates under the name Mid Wales Development) was established in 1977 under the Development of Rural Wales Act 1976. The Board performs a number of functions previously exercised by separate organisations. Its general task is to prepare and carry out measures for the economic and social development of Mid Wales—the 5 districts of Brecknock, Montgomery and Radnor (all in Powys), Ceredigion (Dyfed) and Meirionnydd (Gwynedd).

The Board's area is large—838,892 hectares (40 per cent of the area of Wales)—from Blaenau Ffestiniog in the North to Ystradgynlais in the South and from the English Borders of Powys in the East to the West Coast from Penrhyndeudraeth to Cardigan.

The population of approximately 205,000, 7.3 per cent of that of Wales, is scattered throughout the area. Heavy depopulation was experienced throughout this century until 1971 since when a reversal has occurred. Sixty per cent of the population live in isolated farms and small hamlets. Only 9 towns exceed 3,000 in population.

The primary aim of the Board is to generate a self-sustaining market economy, providing jobs and assisting the process of repopulation. Various economic and social measures are adopted in pursuit of this aim. The development of Newtown as a designated new town was taken over from the Mid Wales Development Corporation. Attention and capital expenditure is concentrated primarily upon designated "growth areas"—Aberystwyth, Brecon, Llandrindod Wells, Rhayader and Welshpool and other priority locations but the Board reacts to enterprise and offers assistance to projects throughout its area. Measures of assistance include the Mid Wales Development Grant Scheme (where the Board, as agent of the Welsh Development Agency, makes grants to industry) and the Rural Building Conversion Grant Scheme (to assist with the cost of converting redundant buildings to industrial, craft or service use), financial assistance for local authorities for activities which contribute to economic and social development, and the provision of social grants to voluntary organisations.

The Board's general powers and responsibilities do not result in infringing on those of the Local Authorities. Consultation with the elected bodies—the 3 County Councils and 5 District Councils—is essential and will be continuous. Five members of the Board are appointed after consultation with the Welsh Local Authorities.

WELSH DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Pearl Assurance Hse., Greyfriars Rd., Cardiff, CF1 3XX (0222 222666; Telex 497513; Fax 0222 223243).

Chairman: Dr. Gwyn Jones.

Chief Executive: David Waterstone.

The Agency was established under the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975 and came into existence on January 1, 1976. Its task is to help further the development of a self-sustaining market economy and improve the environment in Wales. Administration of the various functions is conducted through a network of 6 Regional Offices. The Agency's main activities include factory building, development of industrial estates, provision of investment capital for industry, reclamation of derelict land, the promotion of Wales as a place for industrial growth and the provision of consultancy and business advice. Welsh Development International the joint WDA/Welsh Office inward investment body, while WINtech (Wales Innovation and Technology) helps to stimulate technological growth in the principality. The Agency is the biggest industrial landlord in Wales. It holds more than 19.2 million sq ft of factory space and firms on WDA estates now provide some 47,500 jobs. The Agency builds speculative factories and units built to individual specifications. It has numerous established estates throughout the industrial South and North East of Wales, as well as smaller units in the more rural areas. The WDA is able to supply investment funds by way of equity finance or loans, in packages tailored to the needs of individual companies. At present the Agency's investment portfolio stands in excess of £35m invested in over 700 companies; and in 1988/89 the Agency made new investments amounting to about £8.4m in nearly 291 companies. In the same year the Agency's Business Development Unit dealt with more than 12,000 advisory visits and interviews/enquiries from small firms. The Agency is responsible for managing the reclamation of derelict land programme in Wales. Since the Agency's inception over 7,500 acres have been reclaimed for industry, housing and other purposes at a cost of about £128m. Schemes aimed at reclaiming a further 10,000 acres are in the Agency's programme for future years. Its total gross expenditure budget for all activities in 1989/90 is £130m.

WELSH DEVELOPMENT INTERNATIONAL

Welsh Development International is a specialised department with the Welsh Development Agency concerned with the attraction to Wales of inward investment from overseas and the rest of the UK.

COUNTY COUNCILS IN WALES

The Local Government Act 1972 abolished from 1st April, 1974 the former 13 county councils in Wales and created 8 Non-Metropolitan County Councils

Elections

County councils consist of a chairman and councillors. A county is divided into electoral divisions, each after 1977 returning one councillor elected for a term of four years. The first election to the new county councils took place on 12th April, 1973 and the next was held on 5th May, 1977, on and after which newly elected county councillors come into office on the day their predecessors retire. Subsequent elections will be every fourth year, and thus the next one will be in May, 1993.

TOPOGRAPHY

Clwyd is bounded by the North Wales coastline and the Dee Estuary, the Northern Marches, the Berwyn Mountains and the Conwy Valley. Its main geographical characteristics are a low-lying sandy coastline to the north, the Vale of Clwyd running South to North between the Hiraethog Mountains and the Clwydian Range, the Berwyn mountains rising to 784m in the South and rich rolling lowlands merging with the Cheshire/Shropshire plain on the East.

The history of human habitation in Clwyd goes back to Neolithic times and there are bronze and iron age forts on the Clwydian range. The Romans settled in several areas of the county and at Rhuddlan an Anglo-Saxon settlement has been recently discovered.

The County has a varied economic base. Along the coast the main industry is tourism, centred on the main resorts of Colwyn Bay, Abergele, Rhyl and Prestatyn. The industrial heart of the county is centred on Deeside and the Wrexham area. Mining and metal-working in the area dates at least from Roman times and a large scale metal industry at Bersham pushed Clwyd to the forefront of the industrial revolution. Other industries such as textiles and aircraft production grew up alongside.

Only one coal pit is now still in production—at Point of Ayr—and a reduced steel industry continues at Shotton and Brymbo. The industrial base of the area has been diversified and broadened to include light industries such as clothing, plastics, microprocessors, chemicals and light engineering. Strong efforts are being made to attract new industries and to create new jobs to counteract the decline of old industries.

The rest of Clwyd depends mainly on an agricultural economy, particularly sheep rearing in the upland areas and arable farming and cattle rearing in the more fertile valleys and plains.

The largest town in Clwyd is Wrexham, a market town with expanding commercial and industrial development. Mold is the administrative centre of the county, housing the County Council headquarters and the Law Courts.

There are many other small towns and villages each with their own attractions. St. Asaph has the smallest cathedral in Britain, while Ruthin is an attractive market town with numerous half-timbered buildings and retaining its original mediaeval street pattern. Denbigh's castle and walls still dominate the town and its fortress was among the last of the Royal castles to fall in the Civil War. Llangollen is another major tourist centre, situated on the River Dee, famous for its Annual International Musical Eisteddfod and home of ECTARC, the European Centre for Traditional and Regional Cultures whose activities cover research, courses and exhibitions.

A number of cultural and heritage attractions are provided by the County Council, including Theatr Clwyd which is located on the civic centre site; the Victorian experience, Bodelwyddan Castle at St. Asaph, which houses a magnificent National Portrait Gallery collection of 19th century art and photographs in authentically-refurbished settings; and the popular Ruthin Craft Centre where skilled artisans can be seen at work. The County Council is also developing a new industrial heritage attraction at the site of the 18th century Bersham Ironworks near Wrexham, made famous by the industrialist John Wilkinson who used a special technique to cast cannon for the American War of Independence and cylinders for James Watt's steam engine.

Clwyd has produced a number of important historical figures including three of the principal translators of the Welsh Bible (William Salesbury, Richard Davies and William Morgan) as well as Daniel Owen and John Ceiriog Hughes, the "Burns of Wales". A major contribution to British art was made by Richard Wilson who lived near Mold.

Politicians from Clwyd have played a prominent role at every level of national life. Ednyfed Fychan, from near Colwyn Bay, became chief minister to Llywelyn the Great, Prince of Gwynedd and a direct progenitor of the House of Tudor. Owain, Lord of Glyndyfrdwy and Cynllaith Owain—better known as Owain Glyndwr—came from the County. Another native, Elihu Yale, helped found the famous American University which is named after him. The County has contributed one Prime Minister, William Ewart Gladstone, who lived at Hawarden.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Carmarthen, Ceredigion, Dinefwr (B), Llanelli (B), Preseli Pembrokeshire, South Pembrokeshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

Two thousand square miles of coast and countryside in south west Wales make up Dyfed, the largest county in Wales.

Formed by the amalgamation of the former counties of Cardigan, Carmarthen and Pembroke, the county has all the characteristics of Wales. To the west and north are mountains and lakes, fast flowing rivers and quiet coastal villages which contrast with the industrial area around Llanelli in the south eastern corner of the county.

About 170 miles of the county's coastline is within the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park—an area of spectacular coastal scenery, unspoilt cliffs and rugged headlands. To the east the hills of Carmarthenshire form part of the Brecon Beacons National Park.

The county's predominant industry is agriculture with dairying playing a major role. On the industrial scene two areas are prominent. The anthracite coalfield and manufacturing area around Llanelli in the south east and the oil refining area of Milford Haven, Britain's premier deep water harbour, in the south west.

The recent completion of the M4 which now links the county with the rest of South Wales and with London is expected to contribute greatly to the manufacturing and tourism potential of the county.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Blaenau Gwent (B), Islwyn (B), Monmouth (B), Newport (B), Torfaen (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

The county of Gwent is among the richest and most heavily populated counties in Wales. The largest towns are Newport, Pontypool and Cwmbran—the first new town in Wales and the administrative centre of the county council.

Although only a comparatively small county, few areas in Britain have such a variety of history, culture and countryside. Physically it is a county with markedly different landscape types and a full share of natural beauty. In the centre and east is the Plain of Gwent, an area of undulating landscape containing 59 square miles of the Brecon Beacons National Park, the Wye Valley area of outstanding natural beauty and some country parks. In the west is the highland area with deep valleys separated by plateaux, some rising up to 1,750 feet, while in sharp contrast the Gwent Moors skirting the River Severn in the south of the county rises only a few feet above sea level.

Gwent is the gateway to South Wales, its important strategic position evidenced by a long turbulent history. The Romans built their western military headquarters at Caerleon and a civil settlement at Caerwent. The eastern areas, especially the Monnow and Wye Valleys, and the southern margins of the county, reflect the influence of the Norman occupation. This is most clearly seen in the settlement forms, in such castles as Chepstow, Monmouth, Grosmont, Skenfrith, White Castle and Raglan, in the abbeys of Tintern and Llanthony, in manor farms, and in ancient field and tenurial arrangements. Apart from a limited number of Anglo-Norman Settlements over three-quarters of the county was and has remained Welsh.

The Industrial Revolution changed the county from a predominantly agricultural area to part of the important industrial complex of South Wales. The development of ironworks and collieries was accompanied by rapid population growth as workers moved into the county. Today the industrial pattern of the county is changing as a large number and variety of industries particularly in the high technology fields, have created a more balanced industrial structure. New firms can benefit from government financial assistance available in parts of the county and also from the excellent access to the industrial areas of the West Midlands via the A449, M50 and M5 motorways, and to the south-east via the Severn Bridge and M4 motorway.

Aberconwy (B), Arfon (B), Dwyfor, Meirionnydd, Ynys Mon—Isle of Anglesey (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

By any standards the area of the county is one of spectacular natural beauty. The county contains the whole of the Snowdonia National Park, which stretches from near Conwy in the north to the Dyfi estuary in the south, and covers an area of 845 square miles, or 54.7% of the Gwynedd area. Further areas under protective designation are the Llŷn Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty with an area of 60 square miles, and the Anglesey Coast Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, with an area of 83 square miles. The Great Orme, the coast of Llŷn and five sections of the Anglesey coast have been defined as Heritage Coasts and comprise 90 miles of the county's 311 miles of coast. Some 135,000 people in the county, 63% of the total, are Welsh-speaking, the highest percentage of any county in Wales.

Geographically the county falls into five distinct physical areas, which in turn have a noticeable effect on economic structure and settlement patterns. These are as follows:

(a) Ynys Môn—The Isle of Anglesey

The island has a beautiful coastline with many sandy coves much frequented by holidaymakers, and rising in places to form spectacular cliffs.

Holyhead, situated on Holy Island in the extreme west, is a deep water port, and an important road and rail terminus.

Sealink and B & I Ferries cross to and from Ireland, linking with the Holyhead/London railway line and the newly improved A5/A55 Euro Route to the motorway network. The Menai Straits is traversed by means of two spectacular bridges built by Telford and Stephenson.

Anglesey is known as "the Mother of Wales" because crops from its rich farming land used to feed the people of the mainland.

Tourism is becoming increasingly important. There is a major aluminium smelting plant at Holyhead and a nuclear power station at Wylfa. Light industries are concentrated on industrial estates in the larger towns and villages, particularly at Holyhead, Amlwch, Llangefni and Gaerwen.

(b) Snowdonia

Snowdonia consists primarily of an extensive mountainous tract, with large areas lying above the 2,000-ft. (610 metres) contour, and rising in Yr Wyddfa (Snowdon) and the Carneddau to over 1,000 metres. Most of Snowdonia has been included in the Snowdonia National Park, which also comprises most of Meirionnydd. Large stretches are covered by heath and heather moor, with extensive sheep farming the main economic activity. Slate quarrying, the area's traditional heavy industry, which developed rapidly in the 19th century and resulted in the growth of the area's most notable settlements, is still carried on at Bethesda, Blaenau Ffestiniog, and to a lesser extent at Dyffryn Nantlle and Corris.

Agriculture is the largest single land use in the upland areas. Large areas of this region, approximately 14%, are at present under forests—mainly coniferous species, and these forests have a very considerable impact on the landscape. By far the largest operator is the Forestry Commission, although some areas are under the control of private concerns. The largest Pumped Storage Electricity Generating station in Europe is located at Dinorwig near Llanberis.

The other major economic factor in the Snowdonia area is tourism, although the tourist industry is of major importance throughout Gwynedd. The National Park is within easy access of the Midlands and North West England, and attracts some 11 million visitors mainly in the summer months.

(c) The North Coastal Belt

An area which may be taken as extending from Llandudno in the north-east to Caernarfon in the south-west. A comparatively small area, this coastal zone nonetheless has a more diversified economy than any other area in Gwynedd. The northernmost of the coastal settlements, Llandudno, is a 19th-century resort town of spacious layout, and characterized by numerous large hotels. Conwy and Caernarfon both boast medieval castles of outstanding importance and within their town walls both still exhibit a well-preserved medieval street plan.

Bangor is a University town with much employment associated with both the University College and other branches of further education.

The A55 along the whole of the north Wales coast is being improved to dual carriageway standard including a new tunnel under the Conwy estuary.

(d) Dyffryn Conwy

In many respects this area is associated economically with the preceding North Coastal Belt, but is considered separately chiefly on the grounds of its distinct geographical unity and character.

The sides of the valley hold many small villages, and there are no large settlements, Llanrwst being the market town; and Betws-y-Coed, midway along the valley, being the main tourist centre.

(e) The Llŷn Peninsula

An outstandingly attractive area. It is a strongly agricultural region of small, isolated farms, and scattered villages and hamlets. It is a stronghold of the Welsh language and culture.

Farming, tourism, public administration and services are the main sources of employment. There are small manufacturing industries at the towns of Pwllheli and Porthmadog.

At Nant Gwrtheyrn a derelict quarry village has been transformed into a European Centre for the Teaching of Minority Languages.

A good selection of vacant industrial sites, most in local authority ownership, is available to attract prospective industrialists. Most of Gwynedd is a Government Assisted Area. Most of Anglesey has Development Area Status, and the rest of Anglesey (the Beaumaris and Menai Bridge area), and the districts of Arfon and Dwyfor have Intermediate Status. Mid Wales Development Grants are available in the District of Meirionnydd. The whole of the county is eligible for Government assistance for tourism projects.

TOPOGRAPHY

With over 534,000 residents, Mid Glamorgan is easily the largest County in Wales in terms of population. Drained by the Rivers Taff, Rhondda, Rhymney, Cynon, Llynfi, Ely and Ogmore, the County includes most of the best known South Wales Valleys. It also contains the western part of the Vale of Glamorgan, and more than half of the Glamorgan 'Heritage Coast'. The northern area of Mid Glamorgan forms a part of the Brecon Beacons National Park.

Mid Glamorgan is a County of quite remarkable variety. The early development of iron-making at Merthyr Tydfil, and the later nineteenth century expansion of coal-mining, established a pattern of almost continuous development along the floors of the deep-sided valleys that occupy two-thirds of the County. Forestry and rough grazing characterise the intervening hillsides. Recent colliery closures and the rundown of manpower by British Coal means that mining directly accounts for less than 2% of jobs in the County. Service employment is now the principal source of work in Mid Glamorgan forming 56% of all jobs. Today the image of the valleys is changing. For more than a decade, land reclamation has played an important part in the work of local authorities and the 'greening' of the valleys is well advanced. Reclaimed land also provides sites for new houses, schools and industry.

Caerphilly, Llantrisant, Bridgend and Porthcawl, within the southern lowland area of the County, are experiencing expansion of industry and housing. These areas are well linked through the M4 motorway and the Intercity railway stations at Bridgend and Cardiff to the national transport networks. Frequent local rail services operate from the Rhymney, Taff and Rhondda valleys to Cardiff and their development is being financially supported by the Mid Glamorgan County Council. As part of an important priority for the County Council, a programme of new highway links to the M4, the A470(T) (North and South) Trunk Road, and the A465(T) Heads of the Valleys Trunk Road, is well underway to provide high quality links from the Valleys.

Brecknock (B), Montgomeryshire, Radnorshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

Powys Paradwys Cymru—Powys Paradise of Wales—this ancient Welsh quotation aptly describes the second largest county in the principality and by far the most sparsely populated. It has an area of one and a quarter million acres and a population of only 111,400, some 11½ acres per person.

The county is an upland area and the principal activity is agriculture in the form of stock rearing, with sheep farming being predominant. Approximately 11 per cent of the county is afforested and the area also provides a major water catchment area, with reservoirs supplying water to Merseyside, the Midlands and South Wales.

Depopulation has been of serious concern in the county for many years, and there have been vigorous and continued efforts by the local authorities and government agencies to halt and reverse this trend by the introduction of manufacturing industry and new jobs. In the past twenty years, over a million square feet of factory floor space has been built and many new industries and workers have found a home in the county.

The development of tourism also plays an important role. The county contains sixty per cent of the Brecon Beacons National Park and the hills and uplands, together with the rivers of the Severn, Wye and Usk provide opportunity for a wide range of outdoor activities. It is clear however, that most visitors come to the county to enjoy its scenery and its peaceful atmosphere. To cater for visitors the area has a wide range of holiday accommodation from farmhouses and inns to first class hotels.

Cardiff (City), Vale of Glamorgan (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

South Glamorgan—population of 403,400 situated on the coastal plain of South Wales, includes the City of Cardiff, the seaside towns of Barry and Penarth, the ancient market town of Cowbridge and the Vale of Glamorgan.

Although Cardiff—capital and largest city of Wales—has for 150 years been a major city, for centuries it was smaller than Cowbridge.

The expansion of Cardiff came largely as a result of the building of the Docks to export coal and iron from the Valleys which fan out to the north.

Since the mid-19th century, Cardiff has developed into the major commercial, administrative and financial centre for Wales and it has a wide range of arts, entertainment, cultural and sporting facilities.

There is Cardiff Castle, which for centuries was the heart of the community, also Llandaff Cathedral, the National Museum of Wales and the St. Fagans Folk Museum.

The Arms Park—the National Rugby Stadium—is known throughout the world and other sporting facilities include Ninian Park (Cardiff City AFC headquarters) and the National Sports Centre for Wales.

Despite the disappearance of the coal export trade, Cardiff Docks still flourish and, in addition to being a major office centre—it has the Welsh Office and other Government Regional Offices—it also has a wide range of industries including steel and car component manufacturing.

Cardiff's waterfront is now in the process of being substantially redeveloped and the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation was set up in April, 1987 for this purpose. South Glamorgan County Council's new County Hall has been built in the heart of the new development as a gesture of commitment to the future of this exciting new scheme and is intended to act as a catalyst for further investment in the area.

Barry, the second largest town in the county, also has a busy docks and is also known as one of the major holiday towns in South Wales, with many tourist attractions including a huge holiday camp. It also has many industries.

Penarth is another favourite South Wales seaside resort and has developed as a popular residential area.

Cowbridge and the Vale of Glamorgan make up one of the most beautiful and rich farming areas in Britain.

A feature of the recent development of the county has been the improvement in communications by road, air and rail.

London is under 2 hours away by train and under 3 hours by car, while there is an impressive airport at Rhosee with the most modern air traffic control and passenger handling facilities.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Lliw Valley (B), Neath (B), Port Talbot (B), Swansea (City).

TOPOGRAPHY

The word Glamorgan comes from the Welsh 'Gwlad Morgan', meaning 'land of Morgan', Welsh King of the 8th century.

The area of West Glamorgan includes the City of Swansea and the large towns of Neath and Port Talbot, together with many smaller towns and communities. It lies on the northern coast of the Bristol Channel and extends from the Gower Peninsula and the Loughor estuary in the west to the rural Kenfig and Margam areas in the east together with the main inland valleys of the Rivers Afan, Neath and Tawe and their tributaries.

Traditionally, the County's economy has been dominated by heavy industry, particularly coal and metal industries, but today it has more diversified structure. Metal industries continue to provide the backbone of job opportunities in West Glamorgan with the production of steel, tinplate, aluminium, nickel and titanium. While coal mining and basic steel employment has declined other new industries have been established including car components, fashion clothes, micro-electronics, toys, chemicals and the area has now become the service centre for South West Wales.

The M4 motorway and A465 Trunk road serve to give the area a quick and efficient link to London (320 km/200 miles), the South East of England and the North and Midlands via the M5 and M50. The County is also connected to London by British Rail's High Speed Train and rail freight forwarding and receiving facilities are available in Swansea, providing links with the domestic market, Europe and most parts of the world.

Swansea Docks and Port Talbot tidal harbour provide the County's shipping facilities and, in addition to the municipal airport at Swansea, the area is less than an hour's drive from the Cardiff-Wales international airport.

Within the County is a wide variety of contrasting scenery and places of interest. In the north the landscape is one of hills, forested slopes, rivers and waterfalls in the strongly traditional Welsh valleys of the Loughor, Tawe, Neath and Afan. The coastline includes the sandy beaches and cliffs of the Gower Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Swansea Bay sweeps around from the Mumbles to the Marina and to Margam Sands, taking in the holiday resort of Aberavon.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN WALES

Under the local government reorganisation from 1st April 1974, the number of local authorities in Wales below county council level was reduced to 37 district councils, including the two cities of Cardiff and Swansea. This was a major change from the former structure of four county boroughs, thirty-two boroughs, seventy-three urban districts and fifty-nine rural districts.

Elections

Elections are normally held on the first Thursday in May each year, except in those years when County Council elections are held; the next county council elections are in 1993.

In Welsh Districts, councillors are also elected for a term of four years but the individual District Councils have a choice of procedure of a whole council election every four years or elections by thirds. The Secretary of state for the Environment may, if requested, vary the election system adopted by a district council but not more than once in ten years. The next whole council election will be in 1991, and the one-third elections in 1990 and 1991.

Thirty-two District Councils in Wales have whole council elections, and only five elections by thirds.

The Council of Welsh district councils, known as the Welsh Council, was set up in 1989 as the successor to the Committee of Welsh District Councils and comprises one elected representative from each of the 37 district councils in Wales. It also includes the Chairman of the ADC and the Leader of the ADC Labour Group.

The 'Walsit Arm' formed by the amalgamation of the former Council for the Principality and the ADC's Committee for Wales. Objects of the Welsh Council are to protect and further the interests of Welsh District Councils as they may be affected by legislation or proposed legislation or otherwise and to promote a high standard of administration of the public service in Welsh districts.

The first Annual Meeting of the new Welsh Council was in July 1989. Each district elects one of its members to serve on the Committee for a period of 2 years at the end of which period members are eligible for re-election. However, it is a proviso that each member of the Council of the ADC elected by districts in Wales under the appropriate Rule of the Constitution is entitled, as a right, to be his district council's representative on the committee.

Under these arrangements the ADC has established a Welsh Branch Office at the above address.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES

In the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, the Director and Registrar General controls the local registration service in England and Wales in the exercise of the registration and marriage duties in accordance with the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1963, the Registration Service Act 1963, the Marriage Acts 1949 to 1970, the Children Act 1975 and other relevant enactments.

There are 39 registration districts in Wales and the Superintendent Registrars act within the framework of the district councils. Their districts are not, however, always coterminous with present local authority boundaries and a district council area may spread into more than one registration district (RD) or a number of district councils be contained in one registration district.

The detailed list below indicates this spread of area responsibility by quoting the office address of each superintendent registrar operating within the boundaries of the respective local authorities.

TOPOGRAPHY

Alyn and Deeside District Council incorporates the former Hawarden Rural District, Buckley Urban and Connah's Quay Urban District Councils. The district is at the gateway to North Wales, and includes Saltney which is effectively a suburb of Chester. The District offers contrasts between the industrialised urban area on the banks of the River Dee, incorporating Connah's Quay, Shotton, Mancot, Queensferry and Sandycroft to villages such as Hawarden, Ewloe, Hope and Caergwrle. In the southern half, the emphasis shifts from industry to agriculture; there is attractive countryside, extending into the eastern flank of the Clwydian Range.

Whether you are interested in travel for business purposes or for leisure, Alyn and Deeside is ideally situated; the A55 expressway which bisects the District offers direct links to the national motorway network (Manchester is under 50 miles away) and on into North Wales, making Snowdonia, the Llyn Peninsula and Anglesey relatively short journeys away. With the coming of the single internal market in 1992, Alyn and Deeside will be on the main route between the Republic of Ireland and the rest of Europe. There is also an airport at Hawarden, making for even better links with outside the United Kingdom.

With regard to cultural and recreational activities, the District benefits from its closeness to Chester, which was the Roman Garrison town of Deva, and to the other cities of the North West of England. Theatr Clwyd, at Mold offers Theatre, Cinema and Arts Centre facilities, while the annual International Musical Eisteddfod at Llangollen is easily accessible. The Deeside Leisure Centre at Queensferry which is owned by the Council is a vast complex which includes an international sized ice rink and, indeed, is the National Centre for Ice Sports in Wales. Other notable leisure attractions are the Wepre Country Park at Connah's Quay, together with Buckley and Connah's Quay Swimming Baths.

The North East Wales Institute of Higher Education which incorporates Colleges at both Connah's Quay (within the District) and Wrexham (just outside the District) offers many first class courses, including degree courses; it is effectively a Polytechnic for North Wales.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District is situated on the north west coast of Wales and the area of the Authority extends from a point north of Aber to a point on the northern side of the river Llynfynyw estuary near Pont Llyfni, giving a seaboard of approximately twenty miles. It extends inland to include Snowdon and other well known peaks in the Snowdonian range. Included in the area is the University City of Bangor, the historical Royal Town of Caernarfon, where the Prince of Wales was invested at the Castle in 1969, the once thriving slate quarrying settlement of Bethesda and many picturesque villages, both inland and on the coast, the best known of which is Llanberis, where the biggest hydro-electric scheme in Europe has been constructed inside a mountain. Arfon is a district of great natural beauty, combining sea, mountains, lakes and forestry areas and is central for the whole of the Snowdonia National Park and the Island of Anglesey. The district can be reached by a main line rail service to Bangor, which extends to Holyhead in Anglesey, to provide a sea-link service to Dublin. The main arterial road services are by way of the A5 trunk road from London and the Midlands, the A55 coastal road from Chester, Queens Ferry and the North West and the A487 from Aberystwyth and South Wales.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is situated in the north western part of the County of Gwent and extends over some 50 square miles of hills and valleys with many contrasts of hill and moorland scenery and towns built along the contours of the valleys. The highest point is 1350 ft above sea level.

The area in the past has depended on the coal, iron and steel industries for its industrial base but this is now being diversified. The area is well served by the Heads of the Valleys Road which is linked by dual-carriageway with the M5 and M50 and gives easy access to the Midlands, the North of England and West Wales, while the M4 provides good communications to London and the South of England.

The district has substantial investments in housing, roads, town centre redevelopment programmes and in the provision of industrial sites. Considerable expenditure has also been incurred in the reclamation of former derelict industrial land, which is now available for new development and for recreational purposes.

The Brecon Beacons National Park lies partly within the Council's area and includes facilities for hill- and mountain-climbing, fishing, pony trekking, sailing and canoeing. Within the district are three indoor leisure centres which provide excellent sporting facilities for all ages.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Brecknock is predominantly rural in character and covers an area of 692 square miles. A large area of the Borough lies within the Brecon Beacons National Park and is thus a landscape of high scenic quality with mountainous areas separated by fertile lowland areas. The famous Rivers Wye and Usk offer excellent fishing, and for those seeking an active holiday the opportunities are endless, from walking to riding, boating and hang-gliding, among many other outdoor activities.

The area comprises of a number of small towns with populations ranging from 1,500 to 8,500. Brecon is a market town and is an important service centre as well as being a popular base for visitors. Ystradgynlais in the south-west of the Borough was traditionally a centre for iron and steel manufacture and coal mining. These activities have been in decline for some years and their place is being taken by modern light industries. Hay-on-Wye is famed as the largest centre in the world for secondhand books whilst Llanwrtyd Wells is listed in the Guinness Book of Records as Britain's smallest town.

Small industrial sites exist in the five divisional areas of the Borough and there is constant endeavour by the Council in the creation of suitable conditions for industrial growth.

TOPOGRAPHY

Cardiff, capital of Wales, has a style all its own. It is a mixture of the quaint and elegant, the bustling and the beautiful. It boasts one of the most famous civic centres in the world, constructed of gleaming Portland stone, a castle with 1900 years of history, attractive shopping arcades, modern stores, cinemas, theatres, a concert hall, and hotels, all within a few minutes' walk of each other. With these amenities and the nearby attractions of the Brecon Beacons National Park, Heritage Coast and many historic castles, Cardiff is an important tourist and conference centre. The city has diversified new industry, together with facilities for further industrial development, a major office centre and serves as a focal point for financial and cultural activities for Wales.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District's southern boundary is a delightful 22 mile stretch of the coastline of Carmarthen Bay, its western boundary is the old boundary of the former Pembrokeshire County, now part of Dyfed, and the northern boundary is formed by the attractive River Teify. Carmarthen Town, a busy market town and shopping centre with attractive light industrial estates, is the administrative centre of both the District and of Dyfed County, and it also contains central government offices as well as a base general hospital, and the Dyfed Powys Police H.Q.

During recent years road communications have improved dramatically. The M4 motorway and bypass links now proceed to and beyond the town of Carmarthen. The Paddington/Fishguard main railway line passes through the District with main stations at Carmarthen and Whitland. Agriculture is the major industry of the District and about four-fifths of the total acreage is devoted to it. The agricultural pattern is generally one of scattered farms, with grass and leys as the main crop, so it is not surprising that dairy farming is the principal activity. In addition to tourism the District's other industries are diversified and range from various forms of high-tech enterprises, woollen mills and milk processing factories. The District Council welcomes light industry for which sites are available.

Tourism is significant and very much a growth industry within the District which offers a variety of coastal and country activities as well as being an admirable centre from which to explore West Wales. It is recognised very much as the second largest industry to agriculture within the district.

TOPOGRAPHY

Ceredigion District, on the shores of Cardigan Bay, extends from the Snowdonia National Park in the north to the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park in the south and eastwards to the uplands of Plynlimon. It includes the University and administrative centre of Aberystwyth, the largest town in Mid-Wales, and a number of smaller market towns including Lampeter with its own University College of St. David's. It is an extremely attractive part of the country with much unspoiled natural inland and coastal scenery.

The area experienced some growth in recent years. This was in contrast to the decline of the previous century. Aberystwyth is an important regional centre within Wales. The whole district benefits from being within the area of the Development Board for Rural Wales, active in encouraging industrial, commercial, social and housing projects in a number of centres throughout the area. Despite these efforts and the growth of educational institutions and other service providers, agriculture has remained the principal employer. This dependence on agriculture underlies the weakness of the local economy. Most of the District is now designated as Less Favoured Area.

Tourism provides another important aspect of the local economy. Ceredigion offers a wide range of attractions and facilities both in the coastal centres and inland.

Chairman's annual allowance: £4,796.

TOPOGRAPHY

The splendid scenery and facilities of the coastal belt extending from Colwyn Bay to the Forth Estuary at Kinnel Bay is backed by beautiful farmland and hills extending as much as 50 miles inland which, with its mild climate for which it is renowned, makes Colwyn attractive to visitors throughout the year. Colwyn Bay, the largest town in Colwyn with a population of some 26,000, is a popular family resort with three miles of safe golden sands and the 50-acre Eirias Park with a Leisure Centre opened in May 1981. Pwllcrochan Woods and Welsh Mountain Zoo form a natural backdrop to the town from which one has panoramic views of the bay. Colwyn Bay has the municipal Prince of Wales Theatre and a unique Puppet Theatre. The North Wales Coast Expressway in Colwyn Bay gives easy access to the Promenade and to the Town Centre Shopping Complex. The nearby thriving market town of Abergele, where cattle markets are still held weekly, is situated some 7 miles to the east of Colwyn Bay. Pensarn, Towyn and Kinnel Bay are predominantly camping and caravan areas with extensive sandy beaches and many other attractions for the younger visitor and families.

The many hinterland villages each have their own character rich in history and Welsh culture. Llyn Brenig Reservoir is set in the heart of the rural area of the Borough and is a developing centre for water recreation under the control of the Welsh Water Authority.

BACKGROUND

Cynon Valley is basically a long valley following the path of the River Cynon to its confluence with the River Taff at Abercynon. Situated north-west of Cardiff it is 11 miles in length, narrow at the southern extremity but becoming gradually broader until reaching the town of Hirwaun, where it joins the southern reaches of the Brecon Beacons; it also includes the neighbouring Clydach Valley. It is a former mining area which now has a diverse range of industries. There are industrial estates at Hirwaun, Ynysboeth, Cwmbach, Aberaman, Pontcynon and Robertstown. The northern part is predominantly rural with settlements at Rhigos, Hirwaun and Penderyn. The area includes part of the Brecon Beacons National Park, the Dare Valley Country Park and a large area of afforestation at Llanwonno in the Clydach Valley which would be of great interest to tourists. The council administers two major sports centres, the Michael Sobell Centre at Aberdare and the Abercynon Sports Centre, also a major swimming pool at Aberdare. Twinning. Menden (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

Delyn occupies the west bank of the Dee Estuary. It is an area of wide contrast with urban centres at Flint, Holywell and Mold and a rural hinterland stretching deep into the scenic Clwydian Hills. From the higher points of these hills, it is possible to see the 14 miles of Delyn's attractive coastline. However, the view is deceptive owing to the river Dee's capricious and unpredictable currents. For this reason, only the couple of miles actually out of the estuary and facing Liverpool Bay is used by holiday-makers and tourists. However, this deterrent to people makes the estuary a wonderful haven for birds of every description. An enormous variety of waders and wildfowl visit the area annually.

In stark contrast to the tranquility and aesthetic quality of much of Delyn's landscape and seascape, the coast is also the location of heavy industry and docks. Textiles once played an extremely important part in the economy of the area, but this industry is now in decline and the Borough Council is developing and encouraging industry in smaller and more diverse units. In this context, the Delyn Enterprise Zone came into operation on the 21st July, 1983. The zone comprises 293 acres of land in Flint.

Industry has played an important part in the history of Delyn. The Greenfield Valley at Holywell was at the forefront of the Industrial Revolution; it is now a 60 acre heritage park, comprising a farm, agricultural museum, five reservoirs, nature and heritage trails and seven scheduled monuments.

Delyn has rich historical associations. The legend of St. Winefride dates from AD 660, and now St. Winefride's Well is a Catholic Shrine, one of the seven wonders of Wales, whilst Maen Achwyfan—The Whitford Cross is an unusual disc headed cross of the tenth century. Bailey Hill in Mold is the site of a Norman Motte and Bailey Castle and Flint Castle, built by Edward I, is of a design unique in the United Kingdom.

The Borough also has a cultural heritage: Daniel Owen, considered to be the father of the Welsh novel was born in Mold, and actor-playwright Emlyn Williams was born at Glan yr Afon, a tiny village in the Clwydian Hills.

Mayor's annual allowance: £5,350.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Dinefwr covers approximately 400 square miles, of which more than 80% is rural and includes some of the most magnificent scenery in South West Wales. The variety of the scenery may be considered unrivalled with such variety as lush meadow pastures, rugged mountains, gentle hills with a variety of heather, gorse and bracken with lakes and forests. In the southern part of the Borough the floor of the Tywi Valley is barely 100 feet above sea level but the surrounding hills are amongst the highest in South Wales. The range of natural life is as diverse as the habitat. A considerable part of the Borough lies within the Brecon Beacons National Park.

The three main Towns in the Borough are Llandovery, Llandeilo and Ammanford. Both Llandovery and Llandeilo are small market towns serving the surrounding agricultural community. Although Ammanford has been an anthracite mining centre for more than a century it is by no means a typical industrial town, and is within easy reach of beautiful unspoilt countryside. In addition to the above towns there are many villages and hamlets and the Borough is divided into twenty-four Community and Town Councils.

There are several historic and ancient castles in various states of repair, the main ones being Carreg Cennen, Dryslwyn, Llandovery and Dinefwr standing on imposing promontories. Many churches in the area have features dating from the fifteenth century but the main ecclesiastical monument is the ruin of Talley Abbey and was founded in the 12th century by Lord Rhys of Dinefwr Castle.

TOPOGRAPHY

This predominantly Welsh speaking district stretches from the summit of Snowdon, the highest mountain in England and Wales, in the east, to Bardsey Island in the west. The land boundary leaves the coast about 6 miles south of Caernarfon, proceeds inland to encircle Snowdon and then moves south down the shoulder of Moel Siabod along Cnicht and the village of Croesor to the coast near Porthmadog.

The Snowdonia National Park extends over a quarter of the eastern part of the land area of Dwyfor whilst a further 25% of its area is classified as an "Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty" and most of its 100 miles of coastline is designated as a "Heritage Coast".

To the west, away from Snowdonia, the land takes the form of a peninsular peneplain, dissected by small rivers, and overlooked by granite hills such as Yr Eifl. Although varied in parts, soil quality is generally good.

Agriculture is still the main economic activity in the area although tourism, despite its seasonal nature, has, since the war developed into a major employer. The area has no large scale manufacturing industries and few large firms in any industrial category. Realistically, the Council's policy is to concentrate on attracting small firms into selected sites and to encourage the growth of existing firms.

Selective out migration resulting mainly from the economic structure, the provision of basic services, and housing are problems common to other similarly situated rural areas.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

Virtually the whole of the Glyndŵr area is situated in pleasant open countryside. Its most northerly sector comes within ten miles of the North Wales coast and the whole area, with its mountain ranges and deep valleys, makes it a most popular tourist attraction. The most popular resort for visitors is the town of Llangollen, famous throughout the world for the International Musical Eisteddfod which has been held there without a break since 1947. The River Dee runs through Llangollen and the town is bounded by the Berwyn Mountains on one side and the Ruabon and Llantysilio Mountains on the other. Conveniently situated on the A5 road, Llangollen has excellent communications with the Midlands.

Among the attractions to tourists are Denbigh Castle which is open throughout the year. Denbigh first came into prominence during the Norman period when it became a frontier post guarding the approach to the Hiraethog Hills and Snowdonia. In the year 1282, after Edward I had overcome Welsh resistance in this area, the town was granted to Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, and it was he who started to build the Castle. The Castle Museum is well worth a visit.

The Castle in the neighbouring town of Ruthin can also be traced back to the Norman Conquest. In recent times the Castle was converted into a luxury hotel with acres of picturesque surroundings, and it has become internationally famous for its Mediaeval banquets. There are several buildings in the town which are of outstanding architectural and historical interest. Each Wednesday, during the summer months, "Mediaeval Days" are held in the town and these have proved to be very popular tourist attractions.

To the extreme south of Glyndŵr, stands Chirk Castle, one of the few border fortresses still in occupation. The present building was erected between 1282 and 1310. The magnificent staterooms contain furniture, decorations and superb plaster ceilings of the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries. The castle, including its gardens is open to the public from April to September.

Glyndŵr derives its name from that famous Welsh warrior, Owain Glyndŵr, who after a long and bitter struggle against an army of Englishmen was crowned Prince of Wales in 1404. He held Parliaments at Machynlleth and Powys but his reign was short-lived. Owain Glyndŵr lived for a time in a small village on the outskirts of Corwen, called Glyndyfrdwy, which is named after him.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,150.

TOPOGRAPHY

Islwyn (pronounced ISS-LOIN) takes its name from a local mountain that also in the 19th Century gave name to one of the greatest Welsh poets Islwyn, the "Sweet Singer of Sirhowy".

In the South, the Borough reaches to within a few miles of Newport and extends northwards along the wooded and picturesque valleys of the Rivers Ebbw and Sirhowy.

The principal townships are those of Blackwood, Crumlin, Newbridge and Risca, all with attractive shopping centres.

Over the years, the former dependence on the iron and coal industry has greatly diminished. The forbidding spoil tips, for long an unwelcome feature of the South Wales valleys, are being reclaimed, providing attractive sites for alternative industry. Many such sites within the Borough have attracted investment both from home and overseas.

Islwyn provides a wide choice of recreational facilities in its many acres of parks and open spaces, supplemented by extensive areas of natural beauty such as the Ebbw forest (with its nature trails and scenic drive) and the mountains within its area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Llanelli came into being in April 1974 and received its Charter in September of the same year. It is the most south-easterly authority in the County of Dyfed and incorporates the former Municipal Boroughs of Llanelli and Kidwelly and the former Burry Port Urban and Llanelli Rural Districts.

The Llanelli Borough Council administers areas of marked geographical and historical diversity. A substantial sweep of the authority's area of over 57,000 acres lies on the coast and this affords a fine expanse of unspoiled sands known as Cefn Sidan. In agreeable contrast, the inland area's softly rolling countryside is some of the most pleasant in the whole of South Wales. Llanelli has important and enduring links with the past; Kidwelly, on the western edge of the authority, was granted a borough charter as long ago as 1115, while the Duke of Lancaster established a formidable castle there which survives today, providing the authority with a popular tourist attraction. Yet modern Llanelli has been shaped predominantly by the industrial revolution, indeed such was the scale of its industrial development that by the early 20th century the town was established as Britain's major tin-plate centre. More recently, and to meet the needs of today's more complex economic system, Llanelli has been successful in attracting a wide range of new and diversified industries which should ensure the town's prosperity for many years to come. The authority's Country Park at Pembrey, which extends over 520 acres, was officially opened in 1980.

TOPOGRAPHY

Most of the Borough is contained between the natural boundaries of the River Tawe situated to the east, the Loughor River and Estuary to the west, and beautiful Gower Peninsula to the south, and the upland region of the Black Mountains and the Brecon Beacons National Park to the north. Through the heart of the Borough flows the River Lliw which, rises in the scenic hilly country that covers much of the northern half of the Borough area, and flows southwards to the Loughor Estuary. The towns and villages of the Borough mostly originated from the needs of the traditional mining and metal industries of the area although Loughor the oldest of the Borough's towns was first settled by the Romans as a military station and settlement known as Leucarum. In more recent times diversification and growth in both agriculture and manufacturing industries has taken place within the district and the extension of the M4 motorway through the area in 1977 has made it a very attractive location for new and expanding industries. The main district centres are Gorseinon and Pontardawe with other related residential settlements which possess good communications and are within easy reach of the City of Swansea, and other large towns in the locality which have a wide range of commercial, cultural and entertainment facilities.

The situation of the Borough between town and country with a sea coast of unparalleled natural beauty and uplands of high landscape value afford excellent opportunities for natural leisure and recreational activities. The Borough contains substantial parks and playing fields with swimming pools and indoor recreational facilities providing for most organised sports.

TOPOGRAPHY

Meirionnydd is a mountainous area in Wales almost wholly in the Snowdonia National Park, and bordered by the sandy beaches and clear waters of Cardigan Bay. Its rivers find their source in the mountains of Cader Idris, the Aran and Arenig, above Bala, or the Rhinog, the rocky backbone behind the great castle of Harlech. It is a land cleft by deep estuaries, where mountains come down to the sea. The Mawddach Estuary, which divides the southern mountain area from the rugged northern section, is one of nature's most beautiful features. Eight miles long, its waters extend deep into the mountains from Barmouth to Dolgellau forming a scenic bowl of hills and pine-clad cwms, tumbling from the heights of 2,927 feet high Cader Idris and of Rhinog to the still waters and sand bars of the probing estuary. Peaceful mountain-ringed lakes—like Bala Lake and Trawsfynydd, Tallyllyn and Llyn Celyn—are a feature of Meirionnydd, a district whose people are bi-lingual, equally at ease with Welsh or English. Its towns are small but interesting, each with a backcloth of heather-moorland, oak woods, waterfalls and miles of walks. As a holiday venue, the regions of Meirionnydd offer scenic beauty, good accommodation, sandy beaches and a wealth of things to see and enjoy in busy small towns and quiet interesting villages.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Merthyr Tydfil is made up of the main settlement of Merthyr Tydfil itself with a population of approximately 40,000 together with six valley villages each with a population of around 3,000. The borough occupies two valleys, the larger of which, the Taf Valley, stretches from the middle of the Brecon Beacons National Park through to the traditional coal mining heart of the valleys.

Since 1945, there has been complete restructuring and consolidation of the local economy based on a hard core of primary and manufacturing employment of 10,000 workers. To this must be added over 8,000 who are employed in the service industries.

The settlement has become an important centre for public administration and includes a Crown Court and Magistrates' Court, a College of Further Education and a Sports Centre. Hospital facilities have recently been improved with the opening of a new district general hospital at Gurnos on the outskirts of the town.

The relatively strong position which Merthyr enjoys in comparison to the traditional image of the valley town is due to its role as the shopping, commercial and administrative centre for the Heads of the Valleys sub-region which has a population of almost a quarter of a million.

A quick glance at any map of South Wales shows that Merthyr is strategically placed in the centre of the South Wales region with two major modern trunk roads crossing at the town. As such its service centre role is likely to become increasingly important in the next decade as industries, commerce and shopping activities centralise at sub-regional district centres within the South Wales region.

A multi-million pound covered shopping mall is programmed to start in 1988-89 on the railway station site in the town centre of Merthyr. Other major commercial, housing and land reclamation schemes are programmed over the next 3 years.

The policy of the town's Council has been to expand and diversify the local economy as much as possible while consolidating Merthyr's position as the centre of the Heads of the Valleys area. Within this context, the town centre has been completely redeveloped with a new shopping complex and ancillary traditional shopping streets have been pedestrianised. An ambitious programme of land reclamation has yielded 650 jobs in new factories on one site and 500 jobs on the Merthyr Tydfil Industrial Park which is under development at the present time.

Tourists in Merthyr may seem unlikely, but the town's Council is convinced that there is a growing awareness of the intrinsic importance of industrial archaeology and in this respect, Merthyr has few equals in the country. After all, the town saw the world's first steam railway in 1804 and the largest ironworks in the world in the mid nineteenth century. To many historians, Merthyr's social and industrial heritage is unique and many would claim that the town was one of the first centres of modern western industrial society. An important aid to tourism development was the opening in 1980 of the narrow gauge railway which extends from Merthyr Tydfil into the Brecon Beacons National Park and annually receives 60,000 visitors.

TOPOGRAPHY

Montgomeryshire (Maldwyn) is the largest in Wales containing some 206,435 hectares and measuring about forty miles across from the Breidden Hills in the east to the estuary of the Dovey in the west and about thirty-six miles from the Berwyn Mountains in the north to the junction of Montgomeryshire, Radnor and Ceredigion Districts in the south. It contains the catchment areas of the Severn and Dovey and part of the headwaters of the Wye—three of the most famous and beautiful rivers of Wales.

One of the main features of the District, now part of the large county of Powys, is its architecture—the splendour of Powis Castle, the beauty of the many ancient churches and the contrast between the black and white half timbered houses of the Severn Valley and the stark stonework of the western valleys.

Still very much an agricultural area Montgomery has miles of undulating countryside scattered with lovely little villages and market towns serving the farming communities. There are no very large centres of population but the principal ones of Llanfyllin, Llanidloes, Llanfair Caereinion, Machynlleth, Montgomery, Newtown and Welshpool are sufficiently dispersed to act as centres for their respective areas.

In an effort to create additional employment opportunities, Newtown is being expanded as the second new town in Wales and Welshpool has been designated as a growth area. Since 1976 the District has been included in the area covered by Mid Wales Development whose general task is to prepare and carry out measures for the economic and social development of Mid-Wales.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Neath occupies a central position in the County of West Glamorgan between Port Talbot to the east and the City of Swansea further west. It borders Swansea Bay and the Brecon Beacons National Park. The bulk of population and urban development is concentrated in the plain, around the estuary of the River Neath. The Borough contains areas of great scenic beauty, particularly in the Vale of Neath.

Most industry lies where the Neath Valley opens out onto the South Wales coastal plain. Three main industries dominate: specialist refining at Llandarcy Oil Refiners, metal manufacture and processing, and vehicle component manufacture. However, this broad picture is undergoing rapid change.

Communications are excellent—the Borough lies at the junction of two national road networks—the M4 to Cardiff and London which connects with the M5, and the A465 Heads of the Valleys road to the M50 and the Midlands. Neath is served by British Rail Intercity Services and the non-registered port at Neath Harbour has experienced rapid increase in trade with Ireland, Northwest European ports and the Mediterranean.

The town of Neath has a friendly, compact shopping centre with major retail chainstores. Facilities are available for a wide variety of activities and include: a wildlife park, sports centre, golf course, yachting marina, pony trekking centre, a gliding club, museums and numerous sports clubs.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Newport covers an area approximately 12 miles by 7 miles on the North side of the Bristol Channel. The industrial town of Newport and the historic town of Caerleon straddle the River Usk which bisects the Borough. To the East and West of the urban area lie a number of villages, many of whose inhabitants work in Newport, although a strong agricultural tradition still thrives.

Newport, the gateway to the Eastern valleys, grew rapidly during the nineteenth century and was largely dependent on the coal and iron trade and its associated heavy industries. This century has seen a policy of industrial diversification, though the giant Spencer Steelworks at Llanwern with its 4,500 employees is still the major employer in the area. However, the trend away from heavy engineering has continued and in recent years a number of major international companies have set up factories on the town's industrial estates on the coastal plain. Over 500 acres of land are being developed in this area for industrial purposes with an unlimited reserve of industrial potential.

Newport has a superb position in the communications network of Great Britain. The M4 connects Newport to London and the South-East and the dual carriageway trunk road to Ross leads onto the M5 and M6 to the Midlands and the North. The regular high-speed train service to Paddington means that London is now only ninety minutes away and although there are international airports at Bristol and Cardiff, London Heathrow can be reached in less than two hours by car. As the town's industrial role has changed, so has the role of its Docks. Until recently, they were dependent on the coal and iron ore trade but this has now declined and new trades such as timber, tea and car importing are being built up.

The town has a first-class shopping centre in which a great number of nationally known chain stores are represented. A new pedestrian-only shopping centre which includes a theatre, library, museum and art gallery has been completed and the pedestrianisation of the main shopping area of the town has also been completed. A main feature of the shopping facilities is the fine Victorian Provision Market which has recently been refurbished and extended.

Although the remains of Newport's twelfth century castle still stand by the river and the Cathedral of St. Woolos, which dates from the same time, dominates the town centre, the Borough's main historical fame is to be found in the town of Caerleon. The "City of the Legions" was established in the first century A.D. and covers a 50-acre site. The Amphitheatre, which seated 6,000 spectators, is the only one in Britain to have been fully excavated. Other tourist attractions include the seventeenth century Tredegar House, a superb multi-purpose leisure and entertainment complex and the Transporter Bridge over the Usk. The Borough's rural areas are particularly attractive, and Newport is an ideal centre for touring the surrounding countryside.

Mayor's personal allowance £5,350.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of the Borough covers approximately 28,500 hectares. Its long history is indicated in particular by the remains of many Norman castles. Physically its diverse character is reflected by its subdivision into three broad geographically distinct areas—

(a) the northern part of the Borough which contains the three former mining valleys of the Ogmore, Garw and the Llynfi with their fine scenic background with recreational potential. The area's last coal mine closed in January 1986. Newer industrial development, particularly at Maesteg in the Llynfi Valley, has helped to diversify the economy of these communities but unemployment remains high and job opportunities are few. The Borough Council is maximising efforts to regenerate the economy and social fabric of its surveys through a range of measures which include the recent establishment of a Groundwork Trust and a Community Development Foundation project.

(b) The Valley Mouth area based on the main town of Bridgend is the focus and main growth point in the Borough where major residential and industrial development has taken place along the M4 corridor. This has led to improvements in the facilities of the town including major new shopping developments, and a large Recreation Centre, indoor bowls hall and leisure pool.

(c) The Coastal Vale area forming the southern part of the Borough and comprising lower lying and better quality agricultural land and rural communities. Within this area the holiday resort of Porthcawl, where the Council is seeking to stimulate new tourism investment, contrasts with the remaining coastal area, part designated as the Glamorgan Heritage Coast, which is protected by conservation oriented policies but nevertheless provides an important recreational function.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated on the South Wales Coast on the eastern side of Swansea Bay, the Borough of Port Talbot extends from a coastal plain, inland to the mountainous upper reaches of the Afan Valley beyond Glynccorwg and Blaengwynfi.

The majority of the population of Borough is located on the coastal plain in the major industrial and commercial centre of Port Talbot with Baglan, Aberavon, Taibach and Margam. All these areas offer the industrialist a wide range of purpose built factory units and sites for commercial development.

The centre of Port Talbot is being redeveloped and a new Civic Centre was completed in 1987. This is linked to the Aberafan Shopping Centre by a new Civic Square, and a recently completed pedestrianised area links the newer shopping areas with the older established centres of the town.

The Borough's seaward boundary is marked by Aberavon beach, a two mile sandy shore which offers safe bathing, surfing and windsurfing, whilst the promenade offers many features for the visitor including the Afan Lido, one of Wales' major Sports Centres. The location of the Borough also makes it ideal as a base for visiting other holiday areas in South Wales.

In historical contrast to the modern developments, Margam Abbey on the south eastern boundary of the Borough was founded by Robert, Earl of Gloucester in 1147 and was affiliated to the Cistercian Order. Although most of the cloisters have disappeared there still remains part of the 13th Century Chapter House, the walls of the Presbytery and the South Transept. The Museum established on the Abbey site contains many features of interest, including relics unearthed when the modern steel plant was built.

Port Talbot boasts two country parks, at Margam and Afan Argoed in the Afan Valley which has an associated Welsh Miners Museum. This area is the centre of a network of footpaths and cycle tracks, some based on the old railways, for the exploration of an area known locally as 'Little Switzerland'.

TOPOGRAPHY

Rhondda, in the South Wales County of Mid Glamorgan, extends across 37 square miles of the two Valleys of the Rhondda Fawr (Great) and the Rhondda Fach (Small). The two Valleys converge at Porth, the principal town at the eastern end of the Borough.

Synonymous with the heyday of coal, the face of Rhondda has changed dramatically. Coal is no longer king and the "black diamond" Valleys are now rapidly changing back to green through massive land reclamation schemes. The Borough is regaining natural beauty which, long before coal was discovered, made this one of the loveliest areas in Wales.

The Council's active policy of regenerating economic and industrial growth has resulted in a vigorous resurgence of interest in the Borough for both industry and tourism.

There are excellent educational facilities including a College of Further Education and a comprehensive libraries service.

There are ample leisure opportunities in Rhondda—mountaineering, fishing, golfing, swimming, scenic views, picnic areas in forestry reserves, etc. There is quick and easy access to unspoilt countryside and famous Welsh national resorts, including the Brecon Beacons National Park only eight miles away.

Today, Rhondda is so easy to reach. From the east, it is linked into the M4 at junction 32 and then the A470 dual carriageway to Pontypridd—which is also the swift road to the Midlands and the north. From the west, junction 34 and then a smooth passage on new roads opens up Rhondda to businessmen and tourists alike.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,500, plus hospitality and donation fund of £10,600.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Rhuddlan comprises the seaside resort towns of Prestatyn and Rhyl and the rural district of St. Asaph. The name Rhuddlan has great historical significance, and in the present village of that name are the remains of the Old Parliament House where King Edward I held his Parliament in 1283 A.D. in which was passed the Statute of Rhuddlan. Prestatyn and Rhyl are seaside holiday resorts and there are many and varied facilities for the holiday-makers, including beaches, promenades and gardens, an indoor heated swimming pool, theatres and, opened in 1980, the Suncentre, a major new indoor entertainment and leisure complex containing many unique features, including pool with simulated waves and beach, surf-pool, Dragon slide/water flume, monorail, restaurants and bars. The Nova complex at Prestatyn is a newly built indoor leisure pool, seafront restaurant, and function suite with licensed entertainment areas. The complex is ideal for conferences of 50 to 500 persons. There are many excellent sporting facilities in the area of the Borough, including four golf courses and three modern indoor sports and recreation centres. The Borough is situated on the North Wales coast, at the mouth of the Vale of Clwyd and offers an ideal centre for permanent residents as well as its holiday attractions, possessing an excellent climate and easy accessibility to the beautiful scenery of the Vale of Clwyd and the Snowdonia National Park. Whilst the staple industries of the Borough are those primarily associated with tourism and holiday-making and which the Council continues actively to promote and encourage, it also seeks to establish a more balanced and diversified economic base through the introduction of a greater measure of suitable manufacturing industries.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Rhymney Valley stretches some 24 miles between the edge of the Brecon Beacons National Park, in the north, and the outskirts of the city of Cardiff, in the south.

At the centre of the Valleys area of South Wales, the district is surprisingly diverse, with large areas of upland and rural countryside, contrasting with towns and villages, many of which owe their existence to the coal and iron industries of the industrial revolution.

Much of the land scarred by the industry of the past has been greatly improved by derelict land schemes and this, together with the availability of sites for new, modern industry, makes the area an attractive one in which to live and work. Many light industrial companies are already established throughout the valley, producing a wide range of products.

The valley is rich in historical interest. There is evidence of the presence of the Beaker Folk; the Romans left their mark, principally in the form of a major fort (which, it is hoped, can be re-excavated) at Gelligaer; and the Normans—who were long-term inhabitants of the area—left Caerphilly Castle, the second largest castle in the U.K. and the finest example of its kind in Europe.

Modern-day developments include three major recreation centres, together with a number of sports halls; community centres are located within most of the communities in the valley. A wide choice of private housing complements the stock of council-owned dwellings which includes warden controlled OAP complexes.

Plans are in hand to develop further the leisure and recreational facilities of the valley for the benefit of both local people and of tourists who are actively encouraged to visit the area. A seasonal tourist information centre operates at Caerphilly.

An Arts Festival, organised by the Council is held annually in the summer and autumn.

Chairman's personal annual allowance: £3,250.

TOPOGRAPHY

The South Pembrokeshire District is situated in the South West of the County of Dyfed. It's principal industries are agriculture, tourism and energy (oil/electricity).

It's attractive southern coastline comprising beaches, cliffs, islands, bird sanctuaries, etc. has outstanding scenic beauty and combined with it's delightful holiday resorts, such as Tenby, represents a mecca for tourists and holiday makers. From the southern coastline, along the eastern sector to the northern border of the Preseli Mountains, rural and agricultural industries predominate. The area is dotted with market towns and villages of charm and interest.

To the west the district boundary comprises the River Cleddau and the deep water harbour of Milford Haven, an oil port of national significance with capital intensified oil refineries, catalytic cracker and power station.

The twin towns of Pembroke and Pembroke Dock situate on the banks of the Haven are the main commercial and industrial centres of the area.

With the ancient 13th Century walled town of Tenby, and the great castles of Pembroke, Carew, Manorbier, Llawhaden, Narberth, residents and visitors are constantly reminded of the culture and impact which Norse, Normans and Flemish influence brought to the area.

The provision of an important ferry port of B. & I. at Pembroke Dock, operating to Cork and Rosslare, and the improved British Rail Link and the extension of the M4 Motorway have brought the area good communications.

Chairman's annual allowance: £2,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

Swansea was established by the Normans shortly after AD 1100 as the fortress and administrative centre of their new Lordship of Gower. It continued as the market town for the area, until industrial development in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries greatly increased its size and importance. The heavy industries of the last century have now been replaced by trading estates providing sites for modern light industry, major industries having been established around the boundaries of the district. The extensive docks at Swansea provide excellent facilities for the area and the airport is located within five miles of the commercial centre.

The commercial centre at Swansea has been completely rebuilt following severe war damage and now serves a large area of South Wales. A covered shopping precinct known as the Quadrant Centre incorporating forty unit shops opened for trading in November 1978 along with a newly constructed Departmental store which is one of the largest in Wales. Further major developments are being constructed which will extend the shopping area on the most modern lines. Re-development has provided modern office accommodation, and a vast Leisure Centre and a Marina complex are now open on the sea front. The extensive campus of the University College is beautifully situated between the seashore and Singleton Park.

To complement the industrial and commercial activities, the Swansea district possesses considerable natural amenities. The wide curve of Swansea Bay provides a fine setting for the principal built-up areas and to the west of these lies the delightful peninsula of Gower. The varied cliff scenery and sandy beaches of its south coast are backed by an undulating landscape of fields and open commons, features which have led to the peninsula being declared the first Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The peninsula is rich in prehistoric remains, castles and churches and these, added to the natural amenities, encourage a busy holiday trade. The good soils, mild climate and convenient markets support a successful mixed farming economy.

TOPOGRAPHY

Taff-Ely Borough can be divided into a northern upland area with a lower and more undulating area to the south. These two sections are separated by a hilly ridge which extends from east to west from Caerphilly Mountain in the east to Llanharri in the west. This ridge also defines the southern limit of the South Wales coalfield. The upland area is cut into by the Taff and Ely rivers which now, appropriately, give the Borough its name. The river valleys, too, determined the pattern of residential and industrial development and the lines of communication during the iron and coal mining years.

Towns such as Pontypridd and Tonyrefail grew up as mining and commercial centres. Today the upland area is a major source of labour for industries and services which have been encouraged into the area to replace the declining coal industry. Many people, however, commute to industrial centres at both Llantrisant and Treforest and, indeed, in recent years there has been a general drift of population away from the valley to the valley mouth areas with resultant growth in the Llantrisant-Tonteg-Church Village areas.

In the south the pattern of settlement is less restricted by topography and tends to be based on the long established villages. Some of these have, in the last decade, grown as commuter settlements (places such as Creigiau and Pentyrch) for those who work in Cardiff.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough of Torfaen comprises an amalgamation to create the Eastern Valley of Gwent as one district with one name. Torfaen is the old name of the river (now called the Afon Lwyd) which flows from top to bottom of the valley and joins the Usk near Newport.

Pontypool itself is the home of the Welsh iron industry, forges being established in the 15th century. In the 18th century, iron works and coal mines were developed in Pontypool and Blaenavon and the area became famous for its iron, particularly for the development of Japan ware.

Cwmbran to the south was, before the war, a small industrial town which, because of the creation of the Cwmbran New Town, all of which lies within the Torfaen area, has become a modern residential area with an ultimate population of 55,000. It incorporates a fine shopping centre with covered walkways and excellent free parking facilities (mostly multi-storey) for 3,500 cars. The town centre covers 650,000 sq. ft., including some 115,000 sq. ft. of office space and was acquired in 1985 by Ladbroke City and Country Land, which implemented an on-going programme of improvements to what is the only U.K. town centre wholly-owned and run by private enterprise.

Unit factories built and leased by Cwmbran Development Corporation (including the hi-tech epicentre of Llantarnam Park) passed into Welsh Development Agency control. Some 6,425 former Cwmbran Development Corporation houses, other community facilities and related assets passed into the control of the Borough Council on April 1, 1986, bringing its total housing stock to 15,521 units—proportionately more (compared with private sector housing) than any of the 37 Welsh district councils.

The old iron and coal industries have virtually ceased in the area and in their place there are ICI Fibres, Parke-Davis (Pharmaceutical Manufacturers), Girling, British Steel Corporation, Fibreglass Ltd., Saunders Valve Co. Ltd., Alfa Laval Ltd., Ferranti and many other smaller industrial units.

Torfaen is excellently placed to attract industrial development. It is within easy reach of the Newport docks and in close proximity to the M4 to London and the south and the M5 to Birmingham and the north together with the Heads of the Valley road from Swansea and the valleys of Glamorgan.

Torfaen is an area of great natural beauty ranging from the mountains in the north and west to the wooded and arable land to the south and east. The river Usk and its tributaries are well stocked with salmon and trout and the Brecon Beacons National Park extends into the area. The Big Pit Mining Museum at Blaenavon (officially opened in April 1984) and the valley's developing heritage trails (projected by Torfaen Museum Trust) attract a growing stream of visitors from home and overseas.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough includes the length of the South Wales coastline between Penarth Head and Nash Point, extending inland northwards to the line of the M4 South Wales to London motorway. The area has attractive countryside, numerous industrial estates, prosperous agriculture, traditional villages in unspoilt rural settings, splendid beaches and cliff scenery, which includes 10 miles of the Glamorgan Heritage Coast "Conservation Area".

Barry is the borough's principal industrial centre with established chemical industries and extensive docks with a deep-water entrance. A recent important development has been the opening of a new fruit and general cargo terminal at Barry Docks. The Docks are also the site of a major development proposal by Associated British Ports for leisure, shopping and housing purposes. There are several industrial estates in Barry, but the town is also a tourist centre with splendid beaches, holiday camp, fun fair and the usual facilities associated with a holiday seaside town. A 5-year Resort Action Programme is currently underway to further enhance the tourist facilities on Barry Island. Modern leisure centres provide indoor and outdoor sports facilities. The Knap swimming pool is one of the larger open-air pools in Wales.

Within the borough there are two Country Parks, Porthkerry at Barry and Cosmeston Lakes, south of Penarth, where a medieval village is being authentically reconstructed.

Penarth is a gracious Victorian seaside town with excellent public parks, a pier, and a modern leisure centre. The Borough Council has developed the former Penarth Dock as a Marina and industrial park. These now form part of the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation area.

At the heart of local agriculture lies Cowbridge, an ancient town with a regular cattle market and a new leisure centre opened in 1986. Further west are the Waterton and Llandow industrial estates.

Cardiff—Wales Airport located 2 miles west of Barry is one of the most modern regional airports in Britain, providing international and domestic flights, including new trans-Atlantic routes. A large Royal Air Force Station is located at St. Athan.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Wrexham Maelor area can justifiably claim to have some of the finest scenery that Wales has to offer. Visitors will find that its 90,000 acres provide an unrivalled blend of thriving and expanding urban, commercial and industrial development with large areas of outstanding natural beauty. Indeed, one of its principal attractions is that it offers a scenic paradise on the very doorstep of its houses and factories. For those wishing to venture further afield, it provides a convenient and interesting starting off point for touring with direct and easy access to the beaches, rivers, lakes and mountains of North Wales and the Snowdonia National Park.

As to the future, there is every reason to forecast with confidence that the area will rapidly increase in size and importance during the next decade or so. The past few years have witnessed a significant change in the industrial character of the region with an encouraging inflow of a wide variety of new factories compensating for the decline in the older traditional extractive industries such as coal-mining and brickmaking. There is every indication that expansion will make the Wrexham area one of the most important industrial regions of Wales.

Wrexham Maelor is well located for this kind of industrial growth, offering good industrial estates and having good and ever-improving road and rail communications with the north-west and the Midlands and being within 45 minutes travelling time from Manchester International Airport. It is listed as a development area and full advantage has been taken of this special status to attract a variety of industries to compensate for the decline in more traditional industry.

Mayoral annual allowance: £6,200.

TOPOGRAPHY

Anglesey is an island separated from the mainland by the Menai Straits and linked by two Bridges, namely Telford's splendid suspension bridge and Robert Stephenson's Britannia tubular bridge. Those who cross the bridges to Anglesey will be welcomed by the sign announcing 'Mon Mam Cymru'—'Anglesey—Mother of Wales'.

Agriculture remains the traditional occupation, but during the last twenty years a number of industries have developed on the Island, including a nuclear power station and an aluminium smelter plant, thereby establishing a mixed economy. Anglesey, however, still remains a major tourist attraction with its 124 miles of coastline and sandy beaches.

The largest town is Holyhead which is a major Sealink port for passenger and freight transport to Ireland and is served by a fast inter-city train service from London.

Llangefni is the administrative centre of the Island.

GENERAL REGISTER OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES (SCOTLAND)

New Register House, Edinburgh, EH1 3YT (031-334 0380)

The first Registrar General for Scotland was appointed in 1854. His appointment was provided for under the Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Scotland) Act 1854 which introduced compulsory registration in Scotland from 1 January 1855.

District Registrars are employed by the local registration authorities (the Regional and Islands Area Councils) but are directly responsible for the exercise of their registration functions to the Registrar General. The main Acts governing the functions of the registration service are the Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages (Scotland) Act 1965, the Marriage (Scotland) Act 1977 and the Law Reform (Parent & Child Act 1986).

The original registers of births, still births, marriages, deaths and adoptions as well as the parochial registers in which events were recorded prior to compulsory registration and those older Census records which are open for searching, are kept at New Register House, Edinburgh. National indexes of the current entries in the Registers are compiled quarterly and annually and these may be searched on payment of a fee. Extracts of entries in the registers may be obtained on payment of a fee by applying personally or by post to either New Register House or the registrar for the district in which the event was registered.

Since 1861, the Registrar General for Scotland has been responsible for taking the census of population in Scotland. He also prepares and publishes a wide range of statistics and appropriate commentary relating to population, fertility, births, still-births, marriages, deaths and causes of death, infectious diseases, sickness and injuries.

The Registrar General also maintains in Edinburgh a central register of persons on doctors' lists for the purposes of the National Health Service.

Chairman: Hon. Lord W. A. Elliott, MC, QC.

Principal Clerk: K. H. R. Graham, LLB, WS.

The Scottish Land Court was established in 1912 and its jurisdiction extends throughout Scotland. The Chairman must be an advocate of the Scottish Bar of not less than ten years' standing and on appointment is given the rank and status of a Judge in the Court of Session. The other Members are expert agriculturists and there is statutory provision for the appointment of seven of them, one of whom must be a Gaelic speaker. The number of Members has varied over the years according to the volume of work—at present there are three Members.

The Court deals with a wide range of subjects, including disputes between tenants and landlords, succession to tenancies, valuations, rents etc. of agricultural land under the various Agricultural, Small Landholders and Crofters Acts. It has no jurisdiction in matters concerning urban land. The Court is peripatetic and simple cases are heard before a single Member. There is a right of appeal from the decision of a single Member on both fact and law to the Full Court but there is no appeal on facts from the Full Court. They can, however, be asked to state a case to the Court of Session on a question of law.

SCOTTISH HOMES (see SECTION 15)

REORGANISATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN SCOTLAND

In a White Paper (Cmnd 4583) published in February 1971 the Government set out its proposals (based on the recommendations of a Royal Commission under the chairmanship of Lord Wheatley) which forms the basis of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. The Act came into force on 16th May, 1975.

The numbers and types of local authorities in Scotland were:

County Councils	33
City and Burgh Councils	201
District Councils	197

These councils were abolished and reorganisation resulted in the creation of:

1. Regional Authorities. Nine regional councils were established with executive powers and resources for dealing with strategic planning including the use of resources, transportation and roads, industrial development, police, fire, education and social work.

Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles, because of their separate identity and remoteness from the mainland, became virtually all-purpose authorities.

2. District Councils. Fifty-three district councils were established which are responsible for local planning, housing, local health and amenity services and building control.

The regional authorities in the Highlands, the Borders and Dumfries and Galloway are responsible for public libraries, but elsewhere the districts undertake this function.

3. Community Councils. Any community which wishes to set up a community council will, with the approval of the Secretary of State, be enabled to do so. Such councils, are however, optional and do not have statutory functions.

Election of Councillors

Ordinary elections of councillors will take place on the first Tuesday in May. The next election for regional and islands councils is in 1994 and for the district councils in 1992. The term of office for councillors is four years.

Each council consists of a chairman and councillors. The title of Lord Provost is given to the chairman of each of the district councils of the Cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Prevention of River Pollution

River purification boards established under the Rivers (Prevention of Pollution) (Scotland) Acts 1951 and 1965 were abolished.

The Secretary of State by order divided Scotland into new river purification board areas for each of which a board has been established. (See Section 31).

Members of a board are appointed as to one third from among their own members by regional councils within the area, one third similarly by district councils and one third by the Secretary of State.

Water

Regional water boards established under the Water (Scotland) Act 1967 were abolished and their functions transferred, with minor exceptions, to water authorities which are the regional or islands councils of the respective areas. (See Section 31).

The Convention is an association of local authorities in Scotland established in 1975 following the passing of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 which reorganised Scottish local government. All regional, district and islands authorities in Scotland are members of the Convention.

The Convention meets four times a year but its day to day business is conducted by its Executive and Standing Committees which cater not only for common policies of local authorities in Scotland but also the policies which are appropriate to the types of authority.

The objectives of the Convention are, inter alia, to promote the welfare and good government of the people of Scotland and to advance and maintain principles and values of local democracy, to make representations to central Government and Parliament seeking changes in legislation/practice or supporting/opposing such changes which may be proposed by others and to ascertain the views of member councils on issues which concern them, to provide a forum for discussion on these views and to communicate them to central Government, other public bodies and the general public.

TOPOGRAPHY

In contrast to other Regions in Scotland, the Borders Region contains no city or major town to serve as a magnet for its shopping, administrative, employment or cultural functions. The 1987 estimated population of the Region was 102,000, and within the entire region there are only twelve settlements exceeding 1,500 population and containing 65% of the Regional population, leaving some 35,000 persons living in the landward area. Major investment in infrastructure, new housing and social provision, coupled with successful diversification of the economic base away from the previous heavy dependence on agriculture and textiles has successfully reversed a long term trend of population decline. The age structure of the population is also improving as more young families discover the attractions of the Border way of life. Despite this broadening of the economy into other spheres, notably electronics, agriculture and high quality textiles remain key components of the economy. Indeed the Borders has a world-wide reputation for producing the very highest quality woollens, cashmere and tweed. Land is available in parts of the region with planning permission for housing and industry. The District General Housing at Huntlyburn, Melrose, opened in 1988. In parts of the Region, particularly in the Ettrick and Yarrow valleys, forestry now stands alongside farming as a major land use. In recent years the substantial Forestry Commission holdings have been supplemented by an increasing proportion of land planted and managed by commercial forestry groups, with significant implications for future employment prospects, subsidiary industries and recreation (the last-named a large, relatively untapped resource).

TOPOGRAPHY

The region, which reaches from the industrial growth area of the Forth Valley to Loch Lomond in the west and Tyndrum in the north, already has a rich mixture of industry—petro-chemicals, dye stuffs, engineering, castings, distilling, brewing, glassware, electronics, textiles, aluminium rolled products and paper manufacturing to name a few, and more new industries are eager to join us—an extensive and prosperous agricultural hinterland, and a rapidly growing conference and tourist business. This is backed by an infrastructure of port, road, rail and air communications, modern housing and community services including social, educational, cultural and recreational facilities, and Scotland's most modern university.

TOPOGRAPHY

The region covers an area of 2,460 square miles (637,006 hectares) and is comparatively sparsely populated. Within its boundaries it contains almost every type of scenery normally associated with Scotland, from the hills and moors of the 250-square-mile Glen Trool National Park to the 200 miles of coastline indented by estuaries and bays. Sixty per cent of the area is mountainous moorland and the population lives mainly in the coastal plain and the river valleys. The Glasgow-Carlisle trunkroad, A74, the most important road link between Scotland and England, skirts the eastern fringe of the region and from it, across the breadth of the region, runs the Gretna-Stranraer A75 trunk road. This road links the centres of population of Annan, Dumfries, Castle Douglas, Gatehouse of Fleet and Newton Stewart to end at Stranraer, the port for the shortest sea route to Ireland, and is an important link between Europe and Ireland. Most other centres lie within 15 miles of the A75 but although it is estimated that 80% of the total population lives within this communication corridor there is, nevertheless, a good network of principal and lesser roads serving the whole region. The climate is the mildest in Scotland and in the west, where sub-tropical plants can be seen in some gardens; the mean monthly temperatures are the same as in Cornwall.

Dumfries and Galloway has been lived in since pre-history and the region is rich in archaeological, historic and literary associations. Earthworks, standing stones, peel towers, castles, abbeys, monuments and memorials abound, bearing witness to a past often turbulent and stormy. The region, however, does not cater only for those interested in history. The countryside and seaside are relatively unspoiled and the visitor in his different capacities is well looked after. There is plenty of good accommodation. There are caravan and camping sites and there is ample room throughout the region for sport and recreation of all sorts.

Agriculture is the most important single industry in the region and agriculture and forestry occupy most of the land area. There is, however, a wide and varied range of manufacturing industries and much of the population is employed in service industries. The percentage of unemployed is high although the actual figure is small. There are sites available and many industries have opened up branch factories in the region and some have moved to the region in their entirety. Probably all have been influenced by the lack of congestion in the region, including the relatively light traffic on the roads, the scenery and the easy access to recreational activities, the coast and the countryside. The attractions for industry and tourism are much the same and grants and loans are available for new hotel accommodation and for specific tourist projects.

TOPOGRAPHY

Fife Region is a peninsula in the east of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Tay, on the east by the North Sea, on the south by the Firth of Forth and on the west by the Central and Tayside Regions. It is a region with a long, varied coastline and a generally undulating relief which is punctuated by the Lomond Hills and the broad plain of the Howe of Fife. The area of about 500 square miles is divided into three districts—Dunfermline, Kirkcaldy and North East Fife. Glenrothes New Town, separately administered by a Development Corporation, is located in the north of the Kirkcaldy District.

At one time, Fife's economy was dominated by coal-mining, but in recent years industry has diversified and coal is not so important as formerly. Among the newer industries are electronics, light and marine engineering, metal fabrication and chemicals sectors. In the last ten years growth, as a result of electronics and North Sea oil, has helped to produce a more balanced economy. Agriculture is most important in the Howe of Fife and on the fringes of the Firth of Forth.

Fife has many historical associations. At Tentsmuir is the site of the earliest evidence of man's residence in Scotland. Dunfermline was the burial place of eight Scottish kings, including Malcolm Canmore (1093) and Robert the Bruce (1329) and the birthplace of the industrialist/philanthropist, Andrew Carnegie. Kirkcaldy was the birthplace of the economist, Adam Smith, while the Palace at Falkland was a favourite home of Scottish kings. St. Andrews has been the ecclesiastical centre of Scotland, the seat of Scotland's oldest University (1411) and has the most famous Golf Course in the world, where the Royal and Ancient Golf Club was founded in 1754.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Grampian region comprises an area of widely differing topography and scenery, ranging as it does from the high granite plateaux of the Cairngorms to the fertile coastal plains of Moray, Banff and the Mearns.

Considerable climatic variation exists in the region, which varies in altitude from sea level to over 4,000 ft. Rainfall varies from about 60 inches in the highland areas to approximately 25 inches on the coastal areas of the Moray Firth. Winter snows on the Cairngorms can persist until May and June, a fact of importance to the expanding winter sports industry. Temperature variations at Aberdeen range from average mean minimum of 0°C to an average mean maximum of 17°C.

The region's industry is broadly based and includes agriculture, fishing, food processing, malt whisky distilling, papermaking, textiles, boat-building, marine and general engineering.

In addition, in recent years, the ports of Aberdeen and Peterhead have become important centres for the administration, service and supply of Britain's offshore oil industry and the Region supports a rapidly-growing industrial sector oriented towards offshore oil technology.

Aberdeen is the administrative capital of the region and houses the University (founded 1494), Technical Colleges and Research Institutes in addition to being the main centre for medical, distributive and professional services.

Convener's annual allowance: £8,540.

(8): Badenoch and Strathspey, Caithness, Inverness, Lochaber, Nairn, Ross and Cromarty, Skye and Lochalsh, Sutherland.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Region covers a third of the Scottish land surface and includes a number of Inner Hebridean Islands, notably Skye. Much of the landscape is dominated by mountain, loch and moorland, including the highest peak in the United Kingdom at Ben Nevis (4406 feet) and part of the Cairngorm plateau. The Region is traversed between Fort William and Inverness by The Great Glen which contains the notable features of Lochs Ness, Oich and Lochy which are linked by the Caledonian Canal.

Most of the population are settled around the Moray Firth area in the east, at Fort William on the west and in Thurso and Wick in the far north. Otherwise settlement is sparse in the vast rural hinterland. Inverness (42,860) is the Region's capital town, and main shopping centre, providing a wide range of services and job opportunities.

The main sources of employment in Highland Region are in the service industries. The Region's most significant economic activities are tourism, including winter sports, the primary industries (forestry, farming and fishing, including fish farming), oil related industries at Ardersier, and the Cromarty Firth, nuclear energy at Dounreay, aluminium smelting in Lochaber. An Enterprise Zone has been established at Invergordon.

The principal road links with the south are the A82 and the A9, the latter being totally rebuilt in recent years. Inverness Airport is continuing to generate more traffic particularly to and from London and this is proving especially important to the business community. The Region includes some of British Rail's most scenic routes including those from Fort William to Mallaig and Inverness to Kyle of Lochalsh.

TOPOGRAPHY

Lothian Region is situated in the South of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Forth, on the east by the North Sea, on the south by Borders Region, and on the west by Strathclyde and Central Regions. A region with a long coastline and a varied landscape rising to the Lammermuir, Moorfoot and Pentland Hills. The area of some 677 square miles is divided into four districts—East, Mid and West Lothian, and the City of Edinburgh, whilst Livingston New Town, separately administered by a Development Corporation, is located in the centre of West Lothian District.

Agriculture is most important in the east of the region while Edinburgh is the hub of commercial activity providing banking, insurance and communication services as well as being the Government and Legal centre for the whole of Scotland. Industry is diverse and includes light and heavy engineering, oil related services, and electronics. With two universities, five colleges of further education and several central institutions, the region is well placed to provide training and research facilities in the newer technologies.

Lothian Regional Council is responsible for schools, social work, roads and streets, public transport planning, water and sewerage, industrial development, regional planning, trading standards, and the registration of births, marriages and deaths. Jointly with the Borders Region, they operate the police and fire services, and with Fife Region the Forth Road Bridge.

Convenor's annual allowance £9,847.

TOPOGRAPHY

Strathclyde Region was established under the terms of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. The region encompasses a land area of 5,348 square miles extending from the mountains of Glencoe in the north to the lowland farming areas of Ayrshire in the south, and from the isles of Mull, Coll, Bute, Arran and Tiree in the west to the farming areas of Lanark in the east. The most heavily populated district is Glasgow with its ring of satellite towns. The region has a population of 2,344,585 people, which is almost half the population of Scotland. The main industries are diverse, including light and heavy engineering, oil-related services, ship-building and repairs and the production of consumer goods. Glasgow and the west central belt is also the hub of commercial activity, providing banking, insurance and communications services coupled with a growing network of Government agencies. Strathclyde Regional Council is responsible for such services as education, social work, police, fire, roads and streets, road safety, public transport, water, sewerage, industrial development, regional planning, regional parks, trading standards and the registration of births, deaths and marriages.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Highland Boundary Fault divides Tayside into sparsely populated highland and more populous lowland areas. The urban areas cover less than 2% of land area yet account for 63% of the population. Most people live in the coastal arc from Montrose to Perth.

Tayside Region is virtually the crossroads of Scotland both naturally and in its development of communications such as the M90/A85 interchange at Friarton Bridge, Perth.

Situated on the East coast, Tayside is bound to the North by Grampian and Highland regions; to the West by Strathclyde and Central and, in the South, the Tay acts as a natural barrier between Tayside and Fife.

Indeed, Tayside is known as Scotland's Region of rivers with the natural drainage systems of the Rivers Earn, Tay, Tummel, Garry and Esk lying in a band some 90 Km deep stretching 140 Km east to west.

Tayside contains 11% of the total agricultural land in Scotland but the extent of its importance is emphasised by the fact that this land contains 27% of Scotland's top quality soils. A further 11% of this land is classified woodland. Alongside this, Tayside has a wide industrial and commercial economy, in which Dundee is the principal centre engaged in engineering, textiles, electronics and offshore oil-support. Parts of Dundee and Arbroath have been designated a Tayside Enterprise Zone. 22% of the population are involved in the manufacture of goods with an increasing number working in the service sector (about 67%). Growing steadily is the Tourist Industry which provides about 6,500 full time and about twice as many again seasonal jobs. Education prospers and Tayside is well served with a university, three FE colleges offering a variety of courses.

Overall, Tayside is noted for its diversity in physical, geographic and economic features.

TOPOGRAPHY

The region comprises the area of the County of Orkney which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975.

The Orkney Islands lie on latitude 59 degrees north and are the second most northerly group of islands in the United Kingdom, being separated from the Scottish Mainland by a seven-mile stretch of the Pentland Firth. There are three main groupings, the north isles, south isles and the largest island known as the mainland. There are two towns, Kirkwall, the capital and administrative centre, and Stromness.

The islands are rich in historical interest and archaeological sites and many of these are of significance in the National and, in fact, European context. Best known are the chambered cairn of Maeshowe dating from 2000 B.C., the stone-age village of Skara Brae and the magnificent St. Magnus Cathedral which is owned by the people of Kirkwall as a result of a Royal Charter in 1486.

The predominant industry in the county is agriculture, with the principal production of beef stock and dairy products, especially Orkney Cheese. Other vital industries to the community are fishing, which is one of the growth industries, boat-building, tourism, distilling, knitwear and crafts.

The oil terminal at Flotta, opened in 1977, now handles about 15m. tons of crude oil annually from the Piper, Claymore, Tartan and other smaller fields.

Educationally, the islands are well served with primary schools in all the main areas and full secondary education provided in Kirkwall and Stromness. Medical services include a range of hospital facilities in Kirkwall and doctors and district nurses covering the principal centres of population. An air ambulance service to Aberdeen is also in operation.

Recreational facilities include two eighteen-hole golf courses, free loch fishing, sea angling, tennis, badminton, squash, sailing, swimming, football, rugby, etc. There are two indoor swimming baths and first-class indoor sports facilities in Kirkwall and Stromness. There are local clubs participating in sub-aqua, motor cycling and scrambling. For the less athletic, there are opportunities for nature study and ornithology, an excellent library system and the islands' only cinema, which is in Kirkwall.

In June 1983 Orkney Islands Council signed a twinning agreement with Hordaland Fylkeskommune, the County Council for that part of Western Norway which surrounds Bergen, an area with which Orkney has strong historical ties dating from the period of the Jarldom in Orkney. These ties have been revived in recent years by the Orkney-Norway Friendship Association, and with the twinning an expansion of cultural and social links is due to take place.

Convener's annual allowance: £3,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

The region comprises the area of the county of Zetland which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975.

The Shetland Islands lie 204 miles north of Aberdeen and 234 miles west of Bergen in Norway. There are over 100 islands, of which 12 are inhabited. Excluding the outlying islands of Fair Isle to the south and Foula to the west, the islands extend for about 70 miles from north to south and 35 miles from west to east. The total land area is 552 square miles.

Shetland was part of Norway until the 15th century. The place names are mainly of Norse origin and the local dialect still retains traces of the old Norse language.

The total population of the islands at the end of March, 1989 (Health Board Estimate) was 23,138 of which the main town of Lerwick had approximately 7,500. The village of Scalloway on the west side, the second largest settlement, has a population of about 1,119. Population growth has been rapid since 1971 when the census recorded 17,327 inhabitants.

The islands are now an important centre of the North Sea Oil Industry, providing the landfill for the Brent and Ninian oilfield pipelines. The Sullom Voe oil terminal is the largest facility of its kind in Europe. There are also service bases, mainly in Lerwick, supplying offshore oil exploration and development.

The traditional industries are fishing, knitwear, agriculture, craft industries and tourism. Major developments are currently taking place in salmon farming, the value of which in 1988 was approx. £18 million, almost equalling that of the fish catching industry. The fishing fleet ranges from modern purse seine-netters over 180 feet long to small 'lobster' boats of less than 30 feet. There are a number of fish processing factories scattered throughout the islands. Traditional hand knitting using 'Fair Isle' patterns is now supplemented by machine knitted garments. Agriculture is mainly small scale crofting, although there are a number of larger farms. Tourism relies mainly on the natural attractions of the scenery and specialist interests such as birdwatching, fishing and sailing.

There are regular scheduled air and sea links to Aberdeen, Edinburgh and Orkney and to Faroe and Scandinavia in the summer months.

Convener's annual allowance £3,756.

TOPOGRAPHY

Known as the Outer Hebrides, the area served by the Islands Council is a wild, rugged yet colourful collection of islands stretching for 130 miles from the Butt of Lewis in the north to Barra Head in the south.

On Lewis, the largest of the islands, 30 miles long and 28 miles across at its widest point, there are a hundred scattered villages of which all but three are on the coast. The Butt of Lewis Lighthouse stands on the rugged sea cliffs of the extreme northerly point, while inland small lochs are to be found amidst the rolling peat moors.

On Harris, which is joined to Lewis, the landscape changes to bare hills and grand peaks, some of which are 2,000 ft high. North Uist, across the Sound of Harris, has an abundance of small lochs and a 40-mile long road encircles it. Then in contrast South Uist is divided by a road running the full length of the island and splitting the lochs on the west from the mountainous hills on the east.

Convener's annual allowance: £3,750.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Angus is essentially agricultural although its six towns have long sustained substantial industrial elements, now diversifying according to current trends. One third of the District is hill-country. To the north and west the Braes of Angus quickly give way to the mighty Grampians where several tops exceed three thousand feet above sea level. The Angus glens—Clova, Prosen, Isla, Esk, Lethnot and Ogil thrust northwards into the massif.

Angus has an additional scenic and recreational asset in its varied coastline. In the south, the beaches and internationally famous golf course make Carnoustie (9,000) very much a residential and holiday centre, although not lacking in commercial enterprises. The coast north of Carnoustie is initially rocky becoming sandy to the south of Arbroath (24,500), the largest town in Angus. Although very much a working town—engineering (some oil related), textiles, metal products, boat building, fishing, etc.—Arbroath is also a well-balanced and popular holiday resort, with beach, cliffs, historic Abbey and other attractions.

The coast is at its best and most varied—cliffs, green headlands, sandy bays and rocky coves—between Arbroath and Montrose (11,500), another resort with one of the best beaches in Scotland, wide streets and fine buildings. It is also an important industrial town with major food and pharmaceutical works, a busy port, and more recently an oil rig servicing base. The three coastal towns of Carnoustie, Arbroath and Montrose are on the main London to Aberdeen rail link, including the '125' service.

Between the hill country and the coast is the great valley of Strathmore with some of the best agricultural land in Scotland, renowned particularly for seed potatoes, cattle breeding (Aberdeen—Angus) and raspberries. At its eastern end, and in the heart of the District, lies the old county town of Forfar (13,250), the administrative centre and major market town, with a variety of industries, particularly textiles, but also light engineering, ladder-making, soft drinks, etc.

To the north-west of Forfar is Kirriemuir (5,600), the gateway to the glens, a pleasant red sandstone town retaining much character and providing employment in textiles and milling in addition to a growing tourist trade. The cathedral "city" of Brechin (7,800) lies to the north-east. Architecturally interesting, it is also a considerable industrial centre with textiles, distilling, engineering and food canning.

The District has many attractions as a place in which to work and live. For the naturalist and historian there is great scope in the reserves and undeveloped areas and many and varied historic buildings and sites, while opportunities for the sportsman abound with a wide range of activities available, or within easy reach, of all parts of the District. These include cricket, football, rugby, squash, tennis, badminton, bowls, golf, sailing, fishing, skiing, etc. There are indoor swimming pools and modern Leisure Centres in each of the Angus towns providing opportunity for most types of indoor sports and leisure activities.

Chairman's annual allowance: £2,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District comprising the eastern part of the former County of Dumfries, derives its name from the two salmon rivers, the Annan and the Esk, which divide the area into two broad valleys. The District Council's motto "QUINQUE UNITER" derives from the amalgamation of five former small burgh administrations into the new District Council. The area is predominantly agricultural with sheep farming concentrated in the north and east. Most industries are light, the only heavy industry, boilermaking, being located on the outskirts of Annan, the varied including weaving, cheese manufacture, manufacturing pharmaceutical chemists, forestry and tourism. An electricity generating nuclear power station which also produces tritium lies near Annan. Industrial sites and units are available in several locations in the District which is favourably positioned for such development because of the A75/A74/M6 road system and its proximity to the railway network. The most famous centre of population is Gretna Green renowned for its runaway marriages performed over the blacksmith's anvils. Less well known but with important historical and literary connections are Lochmaben, reputed to be the birthplace of King Robert the Bruce; Ecclefechan, the birthplace of Thomas Carlyle; Annan, with its associations with King Robert the Bruce, Bonnie Prince Charlie and Robert Burns and Langholm, birthplace of Thomas Telford and Dr. C. M. Grieve (Hugh McDiarmid).

TOPOGRAPHY

Argyll and Bute District is the largest district in the United Kingdom having an area of over 2,500 sq. miles. Off its 3,000 odd miles of coastline lie some 550 islands the main ones being Bute, Coll, Colonsay, Iona, Islay, Jura, Mull and Tiree. Over 25% of the District's population of 64,700 are resident on 27 inhabited islands.

The main centres of the District are Bowmore, Campbelltown, Dunoon, Lochgilphead, Oban, Rothesay and Tobermory. Travelling time to the nearest Area Office from Headquarters is approximately one hour.

The main industries tend to be related to the natural assets of the area, the land, the sea and the scenery. Forestry and agriculture or retained industries are prevalent inland. In coastal areas boat building companies in addition to fishing concerns and a growing number of fish farms are found.

The area has long been renowned for its spectacular natural beauty ranging from rugged mountain terrain to miles of deserted silver sand and it is the District Council's policy to preserve these assets. Tourism related industries, therefore, play a most important and successful role in the economy of the area. One traditional industry, associated particularly with Islay, is the age old art of distilling the world's finest malt whiskies.

All kinds of sports are catered for in the main towns and endless leisure pursuits can be found in the open country—all-weather pitches, four major swimming pools, many bowling greens, tennis courts and golf courses and of course the area is a fisherman's paradise for both sea and fresh water fishing. Many of the beautiful sea lochs have proved ideal for yachting, sailing and windsurfing.

For the less energetic opportunities to "potter around in history" are multifarious with 45 castles and ancient monuments to explore and many archaeological sites.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,056.

TOPOGRAPHY

Through these ancient lands runs the famous salmon river of the Spey, whose valley is the broadest and longest in the Scottish Highlands. The Cairngorm Mountains dominate the area, the greatest mountain mass in the British Isles where snowfields survive throughout the summer to the first snows of winter. The highest peaks are Ben MacDhùl (4,300 ft.), Braeriach (4,248 ft.), Cairntoul (4,241 ft.), and Cairngorm (4,084 ft.).

Spey Valley is reached from the south by the new, swift A9 and by a fast regular rail service, and Inverness Airport is less than an hour away.

The region has a vast variety of climate, scenery, flora and fauna, and offers year-round tourism attractions in its towns and villages.

Kingussie, once the capital of the ancient lordship of Badenoch, is the seat of the District Council and a thriving Highland town. The other principal centres are Grantown-on-Spey, Carrbridge, Nethybridge, Boat of Garten, Newtonmore, and the modern holiday complex of Aviemore.

The landscape ranges from riverbank and marsh to forested hillsides, both man-planted and natural, with a large remnant of the old Caledonia Forest. The foothills rise from pasture, grassland up into heather and finally the bare crags of the mountains.

Such widely differing country supports what has been described as the best wildlife area in Britain, with constant interest to both naturalist, walker, angler and hunter. The famous osprey is a summer visitor, and high on the mountains the reindeer has made its home.

In the winter Cairngorm becomes the largest winter sports area in the U.K. with four chairlifts and ten ski-tows capable of lifting up to eleven thousand skiers per hour, and a growing interest in cross-country ski-ing.

TOPOGRAPHY

Located in the north-east corner of Scotland, the District has magnificent and contrasting coastal scenery with long, empty stretches of dune-backed sandy beaches and towering cliffs with villages such as Crovie and Pannan nestling at their foot. Inland, Aden Country Park acts as a focus to an area with a fine heritage and much to offer the holidaymaker and tourist. It is an area to whose traditional economies of agriculture and fishing—Peterhead is Scotland's premier fishing port—oil and gas activities have added another dimension. Almost half of the UK gas supplies are piped ashore at St Fergus and Peterhead is a major service base for North Sea activities.

A wide range of available labour skills and an outstanding record of industrial relations complement the District Council's positive attitude towards the attraction of new industry and a wide range of incentives is available.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Council's jurisdiction covers a compact area lying generally 6 to 12 miles north-west of the City of Glasgow. It took over two well-established burghs, mainly residential in character, but with a sizeable amount of light industry, principally in the Milngavie area. The landward part is sparsely populated but covers about half the acreage of the district and takes in a major industrial development at Douglas Muir Quarry and a major switching station of the South of Scotland Electricity and North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Boards. Recreationally the district includes seven golf courses, with a further course and leisure complex planned by private developers at Dougalston, Milngavie. A major swimming pool/sports complex at Burnbrae, Bearsden, inherited from the former local authorities, is now operational. There are also private football, rugby, cricket and tennis clubs.

Historically, the district coincides with the ancient parish of New Kilpatrick. Perhaps the main historical relics are the sections of the Roman Antonine Wall, which may be traced at New Kilpatrick cemetery. Recent excavations have uncovered the remains of a Roman bath-house in the grounds of a demolished villa in the aptly named Roman Road, Bearsden. This is now regarded as the major antiquarian find made in Scotland over very many years.

TOPOGRAPHY

Mainstays of the economy in Berwickshire are agriculture and fishing with an increasing proportion of these products being processed, frozen, packed and exported from local factories. There are also small factories producing high quality knitwear and tweeds from the large wool producing firms in the Central Borders. Alongside them has grown up a variety of other industries, including paper-making, factory prefabricated timber houses, toys, trout and salmon flies and precision engineered components. Many other people are employed in engineering and contracting, and services to the fishing industry through boat building and marine engineering.

Berwickshire, with its beautiful coastline and rolling countryside, is attractive to tourists and holidaymakers as well as being a congenial place in which to live and, has proved a fertile ground for the growth of workshops producing hand-made pottery, jewellery, toys, furniture and weaving. A notable feature of new industries which have grown up in Berwickshire in the past few years is that almost without exception they are the product of local initiative, capitalising on the natural and human resources of the district.

TOPOGRAPHY

Clydebank District is small in area but contains a wide range of industry types, a major shopping centre and a diversified economy as well as the vast open spaces of the Kilpatrick Hills.

Although there are important Bronze Age and Roman remains, modern Clydebank started little more than a hundred years ago with shipbuilding and sewing machine manufacture. These are gone now and the District's economy is much more diversified with manufacturing, service industry and high-tech firms as well as engineering and more traditional concerns.

Clydebank is well served by transport, being only 7 miles from the centre of Glasgow. Links to the national road network are excellent with motorways only ten minutes away and the A82 tourist route to the Highlands passes through the District. Rail links are excellent and the expanding Glasgow Airport is only 10 minutes drive, over the Erskine Bridge.

Over 500,000 square feet of purpose built shopping has been developed over the last ten years and a retail warehouse park of a further 100,000 square feet has recently opened. These facilities are all centrally located and include a wide range of shopping and eating facilities, a ten-screen cinema and a 36 lane ten pin bowling alley.

Clydebank has one of Britain's first Enterprise Zones which is generally considered to be one of the most successful. There are special incentives for developers and a wide range of industrial, office and commercial floor space has been constructed. A new hotel has just opened and a major hospital development with associated facilities is about to start.

The function and appearance of Clydebank continue to change—for the better!

General industrial enquiries about the District can be made to the District Council's District Planning Officer or Industrial Development Officer (Tel 041-941 1331).

TOPOGRAPHY

Clydesdale District extends from the village of Law in the north to Beattock in the south and from Dolphinton in the east to Stonehouse in the west. The greater part of the District is of a rural character and there is extensive sheep grazing in the south where the land is in the nature of 1,000 feet above sea level. The upper waters of the Clyde run through the area and in the valley from Lanark to Crossford intensive fruit cultivation is carried out. The principal towns are Lanark, Biggar, Carlisle and Lesmahagow, and in all of these, as also in Douglas and Forth, various light industries are located. A limited amount of coal mining is still carried out, but not so extensively as pre-war. Sand and gravel extraction is worked fairly extensively in the proximity of Carstairs and Carnwath. The M74 and A74 run through the District and Carstairs is an important British Rail junction. Lanark has a weekly auction market which is one of the largest in the country, and is noted for its annual Lanimer Week. There are several conservation areas and the Clyde Valley National Tourist Route runs through the District.

Parliamentary Constituency: Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the south of Strathclyde Region at the foot of the Galloway Hills the District is essentially rural but within the tranquil landscape there lies an impressive industrial heritage.

The District has many associations with science and art. Macadam experimented with the improvement of roads here and Murdoch who invented gas lighting used the caves within the banks of the Lugar Water as his laboratory. Keir Hardie, the founder of the Labour Party lived in Cumnock and was once editor of the local Cumnock News. Associations with the arts abound, Robert Burns, George Douglas Brown and James Boswell to name but a few.

During the Industrial Revolution exploitation of the area by the Coal and Iron Companies was merciless both of the land and of the labour force but although the Iron Works have long since closed, dereliction and despondency is not the aftermath.

The District Council has pursued a comprehensive programme of rehabilitation and environmental improvement and the people themselves have with enthusiasm turned their skills to alternative employment. Much of this employment has been in the many new manufacturing industries attracted and located in modern industrial estates.

The attraction of industry and rehabilitation of derelict land has been supplemented by modern housing developments for both the public and private sector, the creation of indoor shopping facilities and the building of indoor sports halls in many of the settlements. A superb indoor bowling centre built to international standards has been provided at Auchinleck.

These policies and projects ensure that the District is well prepared to develop to its full potential in the future.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District comprises the Cunninghame Coast, the Garnock Valley and Kilbirnie Hills, the north Ayrshire coastal plain and the Islands of Arran and the Cumbraes.

The towns of Skelmorlie, Fairlie, Largs and West Kilbride lie on the narrow coastal strip between the Firth of Clyde and the Kilbirnie Hills. Kilbirnie, Beith and Dalry sit in the Garnock Valley which provides a lowland routeway for road and rail traffic from Ayrshire to Glasgow and Clydeside.
 The Ayrshire Plain occupies the heart of the District and extends from the coast at Ardrossan to well beyond the southern administrative boundary of Cunninghame. It is the most densely populated area of the district and includes the towns of Ardrossan, Saltcoats, Stevenston, Irvine, Kilwinning, Dregghorn and Springside.

Industry is concentrated in the south of the District and in the Garnock Valley; a reflection of the pattern of development of the traditional industries and the more recent success of Irvine
 New Town (Britain's only New Town by the sea).
 The Hunterston deep water port, iron ore terminal and associated land represent a site of national importance for future development opportunities.

The North Ayrshire coast and the islands of Arran and the Cumbraes comprise one of the most important tourist areas on the Clyde estuary with breathtaking scenery, extensive sandy beaches and some of the best sailing waters in the world.

Cunninghame is an area of unique contrasts ranging from the Clyde coast holiday resorts to the Irvine New Town environment set in rural Ayrshire close to the industrial heartland of Scotland. Industry in Cunninghame is a blend of those derived from past strengths and new high technology industries which the District Council intends to utilise fully in tackling the major problems of industrial decline and unemployment.

TOPOGRAPHY

In many ways Dumbarton District forms the transitional zone between the essentially urban Districts of Glasgow and the "Highland" District of Argyll. It is an area of great physical contrasts and enjoys attributes associated with both urban and rural life. The topography and associated landscape comprise a combination of river, estuary, sea lochs, freshwater lochs, agricultural land, mixed forest, low hill, moorland, valley and the great beauty of Scottish highland scenery. The settlement pattern which has been superimposed on this landscape is such as to leave much of the District completely spoiled.

TOPOGRAPHY

In the twelfth century Dundee was made a Royal Burgh by King William the Lion, and its ancient rights were re-established by a Charter of King Robert the Bruce in 1327. The Great Charter of Charles I, dated 14th September 1641, finally confirmed these rights.

Dundee is one of the four large cities in Scotland and is the administrative centre of the Tayside Regional Council and the Tayside Health Board. The City's first class port and dock installations are important to the Offshore Oil industry and the airport also provides servicing facilities. Rail and road bridges span the 2-mile wide estuary to complete a comprehensive range of excellent communications. Principal industries include jute and other textiles, computers and other electronic industries, publishing, tyre manufacture, food processing, carpets, heavy electrical engineering, greetings cards, oil-related marine engineering, instrument engineering, clothing manufacture, bio-technology and agri-technology. Six sites totalling 210 acres have Enterprise Zone status. These include the Technology Park, Central Waterfront, the Airport, the Port, and General Industrial sites at West Pitkerro and Wester Goudie. The Dundee Project—a partnership between the SDA, the District Council and Tayside Regional Council—co-ordinates and promotes a range of economic and environmental initiatives. The University of Dundee was established in 1967 and now includes the Medical School of Ninewells Teaching Hospital. There are also Colleges of Art, Technology, Education and Further Education.

The unique City Churches—three churches under one roof, together with the 15th century St. Mary's Tower—is a most prominent architectural feature in the City Centre. Other notable buildings include the Castles of Broughty Ferry, Dudhope and Claypotts, Mains Castle, Dundee High School, Morgan Academy, McManus Galleries, Barrack Street Museum, Camperdown Mansion House, Caird Hall and Harbour Chambers. Public parks total some 1,510 acres and include the magnificent 400-acre Camperdown Country Park wildlife centre and play complex. Mills Observatory, in Balgay Park, houses Scotland's only public planetarium.

TOPOGRAPHY

Dunfermline District lies north west of Edinburgh in the Kingdom of Fife with a long coastline to the Firth of Forth and can be reached by crossing either the Forth rail or road bridge, or the Kincardine Bridge to the West.

Dunfermline is the largest town in the District with a population of 53,000. Steeped in history, it was the seat of kings and the capital of Scotland for 200 years. It is dominated by the Abbey which was founded by David I in the 12th Century. Alongside the Abbey are the ruins of the Royal Palace which date from the reign of James IV circa 1500. This was used as a favourite residence until 1603 when James VI became I of England. The last king to stay in the Palace was Charles II in 1650. The District claim to fame also extends to Glasgow Cathedral, the erection of which was influenced by the inhabitants of the Cistercian Abbey at Culross, a small town west of Dunfermline.

Traditionally, Dunfermline District is an area of high industrial achievement, and during the industrial revolution grew into one of the most prosperous areas of Scotland, due mainly to the coal mining and associated industries. Sadly, during the 1950's and 1960's the area suffered from the decline of these industries in line with many other parts of the country.

During the 1970s and 1980s the District has experienced dramatic changes on the industrial, commercial and retail fronts. The economic base has diversified and the area is now home to a wide range of manufacturing companies involved in electronics, defence, oil related equipment and protective clothing. The District's largest employer, however, still remains Rosyth Royal Dockyard—established in the early years of this century.

Major projects during the 1970s and 1980s include the establishment of the petrochemical complex at Mossmorran near Cowdenbeath along with the associated marine terminal facilities at Braefoot Bay, and the development of the Bank of Scotland's Card Services H.Q. at Pitreavie Business Park, Dunfermline, now a major employer. National Cash Register (NCR) started a development and manufacturing facility in 1988.

The town centre of Dunfermline has been transformed with the Kingsgate Shopping Centre now forming a focal point of activity in the town. The development of the East Fife Regional Road has improved links to/from the north east sector of the district, while considerable investment in environmental improvements has ensured that scars of the past are being transformed into visitor attractions of the present—the Lochore Meadows Country Park at Ballingry being a prime example of what can be achieved.

Change has indeed been the key feature in the District for the past 2 decades.

TOPOGRAPHY

East Kilbride lies 9 miles south of Glasgow and was Scotland's first New Town. Before designation in 1947 the former village of East Kilbride had a population of 2,500. East Kilbride New Town now has a population of 70,500 and the East Kilbride District, which takes in an area of over 100 square miles and includes the town of Strathaven and the villages of Glassford, Chapelton, Auldhouse and Jackton, has a total population of 81,718. East Kilbride has a great diversity of industry, but particularly engineering, electronics and fashion-wear manufacturing, with many well known firms, such as Rolls-Royce, Motorola Semiconductors, Leroose, Laird-Portch and others represented in its industrial estates, while outside the New Town the principal industry is dairy farming. The very modern Plaza and Olympia shopping developments in East Kilbride attracts custom from a wide area. Strathaven by contrast is a small but attractive tourist centre in its own right standing as it does at the crossroads of the A71 Irvine to Edinburgh road and the A726 Paisley to Lanark road (both linking to the main M74 Glasgow to London motorway). Among the leisure and recreational facilities available in the District are the Dollan Baths (with the first Olympic length pool in Scotland), the John Wright Sports Centre, The Village Theatre in East Kilbride, the Strathaven Town Mill Theatre, a Central Library and 5 Branch Libraries, 6 golf courses, and a large number of playing fields, tennis courts and bowling greens. The District combines the bustle of a thriving New Town with the more rural atmosphere of Strathaven and the surrounding countryside, offering contrasting but equally desirable choices of place of residence, place of work and shopping facilities and for the pursuit of leisure-time activities.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Council's area is that of the County of East Lothian with the addition of the Burgh of Musselburgh and part of the County of Midlothian. The more heavily populated western fringe is involved in coal mining and industry, while the remainder of the area is devoted mainly to agriculture and tourism.

There are 16 golf courses in the area, including the world-famous championship courses of Muirfield and Gullane No. 1. There are nearly 30 miles of coastline, most of which is in Council ownership or control and there are well-known yachting centres at North Berwick, Musselburgh and Prestonpans, while Dunbar is a sand-yachting centre. There are various pony-trekking centres in the Lammermuir Hills.

TOPOGRAPHY

Eastwood District is located immediately to the southwest of the City of Glasgow and covers an area of some 45 square miles. Geographically the District can be divided into two parts: in the north are the residential areas of Thornliebank, Giffnock, Clarkston and Newton Mearns whilst to the south are extensive agricultural Green Belt and moorland areas in which the only significant settlement is the Outstanding Conservation Village of Eaglesham.

The District is renowned for the high quality of its residential environment and its functions as a desirable place to live for people working mainly in the adjoining towns of Glasgow, Paisley and East Kilbride. Its major asset is the supply of land which has still to be developed for residential purposes and which is likely to accommodate more than an additional 2000 houses in the private sector. Education and leisure facilities are in good supply: the District contains six private golf courses, two attractive parks, Eastwood Park and Rouken Glen Park, and has schemes under consideration to provide more facilities including the White Cart Walkway. Thornliebank, Clarkston and Giffnock have important, well established shopping centres, while a modern indoor shopping mall which attracts customers from far and wide has recently been constructed at Newton Mearns.

Agriculture has always been an important activity in the District, although employment is now mainly in services, trades and light engineering. It is hoped that the recently laid out Spiersbridge Industrial Park will generate new manufacturing industry, and one major foodstuffs processing firm has located there already. The Industrial Park and indeed the District as a whole is well served by road and rail communications to Glasgow, its Airport, the Ayrshire coast and the motorway network.

TOPOGRAPHY

Edinburgh, the Capital of Scotland (population approximately 450,000), is generally acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. The city centre, with its imposing Castle perched on the precipitous Castle Rock alongside the main thoroughfare of Princes Street and formal gardens, is familiar throughout the world. Edinburgh is built upon a series of hills, and is in consequence a dramatic city visually: the backdrop to the panorama may be the waters of the Firth of Forth, which lies to the north and east of the city, or the range of the Pentland Hills, to the south-west.

Edinburgh's attractions for visitors have made it the most popular holiday centre in the United Kingdom after London, and this tourist trade makes a significant contribution to the economy of the city. Since 1947 it has been the venue of the Edinburgh International Festival of Music and Drama (three weeks in August), which has been described as the most comprehensive arts festival in the world. Edinburgh is also a popular centre for conferences. The Old Town, built upon a sloping ridge to the east of the Castle, contains numerous historical buildings, including the Palace of Holyroodhouse; while the New Town (begun in 1767) is the largest area of neo-classical architecture in Europe and is the subject of an extensive restoration programme. Edinburgh is the administrative centre of Scotland, being the seat of the Scottish Departments of the central government. The city's character has also been stamped by the presence of the supreme Scottish law courts, its two universities (University of Edinburgh and Heriot-Watt University) and the influence of the Protestant Churches, notably the Church of Scotland. The city's native sons include Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Alexander Graham Bell.

Industrially, Edinburgh is the home of several famous engineering companies, but there is a diverse range of light industry. Traditionally, it is famous for its beers (the local water is excellent) and printing (the educational, legal and administrative influence). The city has available a large number of attractive industrial sites, including an estate at South Gyle. The city's port is Leith.

Edinburgh is a very sport-minded city. Golf has been played in Edinburgh since at least 1457 and there are no fewer than 22 courses within the city, six of which are publicly owned. Meadowbank is the largest of three modern municipal sports centres, while at Hillend there is the largest artificial ski centre in the UK. There are facilities for soccer, rugby, tennis, bowls and other sports, and yachting in the Firth of Forth.

TOPOGRAPHY

Falkirk District is situated to the south-east of the Central Region, the heart of Scotland's industrial belt.

The central Scottish motorway system from both Edinburgh and Glasgow converges in Falkirk District, placing the entire area within easy reach of any part of Britain. Falkirk is served by British Rail's 90 m.p.h. Glasgow-Edinburgh Inter-city Service while from Larbert direct trains run to London, Aberdeen and Inverness. Edinburgh Airport is just down the motorway.

Extensive developments have taken place in both private and local authority housing.

Falkirk District has first-class shopping facilities with large shopping centres in Falkirk and Grangemouth.

Grangemouth is Scotland's Europort and has some of the most modern facilities in the world for handling oil, gas and containers. Elsewhere there is light engineering, distilling, heavy vehicle assembly, and the host of manufacturing industries which make up the industrial structure of the district. Iron-founding began in the area at Carron in 1759.

Education is well catered for in the district by modern primary, junior and senior secondary schools, and one of Scotland's finest technical colleges.

There are many historical connections from the Roman Wall and Fort, Blackness Castle, Callendar House, at Airth, and the curiosity of the Pineapple at Dunmore.

Sport forms an important part of the range of recreational opportunities. There is something for everyone—golf, swimming, bowling, athletics, riding, archery, cricket, water-skiing and many others and for those who prefer less energetic pursuits, the district boasts a number of beautiful parks and gardens. A new leisure centre, the Mariner Centre, opened in April, 1985.

Provost's annual allowance: £7,282.

TOPOGRAPHY

Glasgow is Scotland's largest city. Although well known for its industry and commerce it has a long and interesting history. Patron Saint Mungo, set up his Church at GLASGU—"the beloved green place"—over fourteen hundred years ago and the magnificent Cathedral which holds his tomb was begun in the 12th century. Later, wealthy merchants built to last—halls, mansions, and churches. Now amid many changes, this splendid Victorian architecture is world famous.

Glasgow is also proud of its wonderful art galleries, fascinating museums, lovely parks and gardens. Music echoes from concert hall, theatre and opera house, and of course there are shops, sport and entertainment for all tastes.

Gordon District is of a predominantly rural character, with a wide range of contrasting scenery and a number of interesting settlements.

The 15 miles of coastline offer craggy cliffs and wide sandy beaches with sand dunes rising in places to over 180 feet. From the coastal plain the land rises to the rich soft rolling farming and forestry countryside of the Garioch and Strathbogie areas through which the two famous rivers, the Don and the Deveron cut winding pathways and the whole area of which is dominated by the mountain Bennachie, 1,700 feet high. In the far west of the District the land rises to 2,000 feet in the foothills of the Grampian mountains and is in an area of grandeur contrasting with human settlements and endeavours.

Approximately 72,000 people live in the District, predominately in scattered rural communities and villages. More than half the population live in the seven largest towns, most of which act as traditional market towns for the surrounding agricultural area i.e. Inverurie (headquarters of the Gordon District Council), Huntly, Ellon, Oldmeldrum, Kintore, Kemnay and Westhill.

Farming and forestry and related industries are the dominant activities of the District but there are in addition a wide variety of engineering firms in the towns and some are expanding with business relating to the oil industry. The District also offers great opportunities for industrial expansion with serviced industrial land available at Huntly, Inverurie and Alford and considerable additional areas of land throughout the district ready to be redeveloped.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hamilton District forms part of the Eastern Sub-Region of Strathclyde and occupies a most important position on the edge of the Clydeside Conurbation.

Lying along the South-Western side of the Clyde Valley, the basically linear shape of the District helps emphasise the pronounced transition from its concentration of urban development in the North to the extensive and predominantly rural areas of the South and West.

The population is largely contained in six principal settlements—Uddingston, Bothwell, Blantyre, Hamilton, Larkhall and Stonehouse—which have grown up along the old North-South communications routes which, in turn, are tightly controlled by major physical features such as the river valleys.

This linear form has been strongly reinforced by the character of the M74 Motorway which is now one of the most striking features on the map of the District.

Less important features of the District's physical structure are the three major cross routes. In the North there is the A725 East Kilbride Expressway, from the Bothwell interchange on the M74 to East Kilbride, then the A723 route which passes through Hamilton itself and links the M8 at Newhouse with Ayrshire Coast, and to the South there is the A71 which links Edinburgh with the Ayrshire Coast.

The remainder of the District is mainly agricultural and includes extensive Areas of Great Landscape Value.

In summary, therefore, the District exhibits a physical structure which (a) is heavily influenced by transport routes, (b) displays a marked urban/rural dichotomy, and (c) even within the urban zone comprises a collection of individual communities with varying characteristics.

TOPOGRAPHY

Inverclyde District is situated on the southern bank of the River Clyde and enjoys some of the most magnificent vistas in Scotland.

Over two-thirds of the population of some 95,000 live in the highly developed coastal strip stretching from Port Glasgow and Greenock to Gourrock. This built-up area contrasts with the rest of the unspoilt 25 mile coastline and the predominantly rural hinterland.

With a population of some 57,000, Greenock is the largest town and the seat of the District Council. There are many fine buildings in the town, including the Victorian municipal buildings and the early 19th century Custom House which is arguably the grandest in Britain. These buildings date from when the burgeoning local economy was strongly associated with the river—shipbuilding and repairing, docks and the sugar trade. As these traditional industries have declined, they have been replaced by, in particular, computer and electronics firms. Both IBM and National Semi-Conductors are major employers with large manufacturing plants in the town. Recent developments include the preparation and opening of sites throughout the developed coastal strip for the Enterprise Zone which totals 274 acres. Crusader Cigna, a provider of insurance and financial services worldwide is busy building its UK headquarters on a riverside E.Z. site.

Port Glasgow is the second largest settlement with some 21,000 persons. Although electrical engineering and clothing manufacturers are now important employers, the town is famed for its shipbuilding skills which stretch from the production of the first steamship to be run commercially in Europe, the 'Comet', to oil related structures. A replica of the Comet—which operated in the Clyde in the early 1800's—is displayed near the town centre.

Gourrock, with a population of 11,000, is ideally located for sailing enthusiasts and is a seaside resort popular with both day-trippers and tourists. At the hub of the Clyde ferry services, the town is an excellent base for pleasure trips on the river or as an access point to the Highlands.

Within Inverclyde, there are three growing villages—Inverkip, Wemyss Bay and Kilmacolm. Inverkip is the location of the Kip Marina which, with access to its 700 berths at any state of the tide, is one of the largest and most attractive marinas in the country. Wemyss Bay is an important ferry terminal with services to Rothesay on the island of Bute. Kilmacolm, with its rural setting, is one of the finest residential areas in the west of Scotland. The renowned architect, Charles Rennie Mackintosh, worked on several buildings in the village around 1900—including his first independent commission for a house.

TOPOGRAPHY

Inverness commands the eastern approaches to the Great Glen of Scotland. To the north, south and west the town is ringed by mountains, its open eastern flank protected by the water of the Moray Firth. Its geographical position establishes it as the natural hub for communications in the region being ideally suited for free ranging journeys of exploration. Glen Cannich, Glen Affric, Glen Moriston and Glen Shiel four of the loveliest unspoiled glens in the Highlands all lie within easy reach and close to the town there is that most famous of all lochs—Loch Ness. The Highland Capital, part county town, part market town, part modern administrative and business centre of an enormous developing region has an ambience compounded of all these diverse elements. It is one of the oldest inhabited localities in Scotland, having being created a Royal Burgh by King David I. The town became the seat of the hereditary sheriff and has retained the distinction of being the seat of justice for the whole of the Northern Highlands. The oldest remaining building in the town is Abertarff House built about 1592. Recently renovated it is owned by the National Trust for Scotland and is now the headquarters of An Comunn Gaidhealach. The building contains the last example of the old turnpike stair once common in the residences of wealthy burgesses. The Castle overlooking the River Ness was erected in two parts—in 1834 and 1846—and is used as the Sheriff Courthouse and administrative offices. It replaced an older castle enlarged and strengthened by General Wade in 1725 named Fort George, which was destroyed by the Jacobite Army in 1746. Six miles east of Inverness by the A9 and B9006 is Culloden Battlefield where the Jacobite Army was finally defeated by the Duke of Cumberland. The town provides facilities for golf, tennis, putting, squash, bowls, fishing, curling, swimming, sailing and boating and boasts of one of the most sophisticated theatres in the country—Eden Court Theatre—opened in 1976.

TOPOGRAPHY

Kilmarnock is the largest town in the district and one of the most important centres of industry in West Scotland. It has a variety of industries—engineering, carpet-making, whisky-blending and bottling, shoemaking, knitwear. There are several industrial estates with factories and sites available for development.

Kilmarnock is the centre for most of the District Council's recreational and cultural services. The District Council owns 14th-Century Dean Castle and surrounding Dean Castle Country Park. It looks after 12 parks and recreation grounds, a public library, a museum, and an art gallery, a suite of halls, a civic theatre, two golf courses, pitch-and-putt courses, putting and bowling greens, and two leisure centres.

There is also the new Galleon Leisure centre within Kilmarnock which provides indoor bowling, ice skating, curling, indoor swimming pool and many other associated facilities.

Houses for old people are to be found in various parts of the district.

East of Kilmarnock is the village of Hurlford and the towns of Galston, Newmilns and Darvel. Galston's industries include knitwear, blanket-manufacture, meat-canning and light-engineering. Recreational facilities are numerous and include an excellent golf course in the parkland of Loudoun Castle.

Darvel and Newmilns pioneered the lace industry in Scotland but have now largely departed from the use of traditional materials in favour of terylene and other man-made fibres. Darvel shares strong Covenanted connections with Newmilns and is the birthplace of Sir Alexander Fleming, discoverer of penicillin.

North-west of Kilmarnock, the small community of Crosshouse turns out knitwear, agricultural machinery, fireclay and timber goods.

The 16th-Century village of Kilmaurs, a few miles north of Kilmarnock, is dominated by the Joughs, once the local jail. Set in rich farmland, Kilmaurs has knitwear and other light engineering factories.

Further to the north is Stewarton, historically associated with Macbeth and Malcolm and later the Covenanters. Stewarton is well-known for textile products. There is a thriving hosiery industry, producing "Scotch", or Stewarton, Bonnets. Egg-packing and frozen-food processing have recently been established.

At the northern limit of the district is the village of Dunlop, with industries engaged in yarn spinning and the manufacture of timber and cattle-feeding stuffs.

Provost's annual allowance: £5,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Kirkcaldy District is situated on the south coast of Fife, and stretches from Burntisland in the west to Leven in the east. From the coast the District stretches inland to include Leslie, the New Town of Glenrothes and Markinch. The main centres of population are Kirkcaldy, Glenrothes, Buckhaven and Methil, and Leven, and these urban areas form a triangle which takes up the majority of the land area of the District. The remainder of the District is predominantly rural in character. The main Edinburgh to Aberdeen railway line bisects the District with stations at Burntisland, Kinghorn, Kirkcaldy and Markinch (for Glenrothes).

Over the years the industry in the District has been diversifying away from the previously dominant coal and linoleum industries, and Glenrothes is now a major centre of the electronics industry. There is considerable involvement in the North Sea Oil industry within the District, the main example being the RGC Offshore Ltd. platform yard at Methil. Methil, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland all have commercial ports, while there is a small airfield at Glenrothes.

The District has also proved to be a popular tourist area, with main centres at Burntisland, Kinghorn and Leven. Facilities for tourists are mainly located along the coast, and include several caravan sites and 11 golf courses—five local authority and six private.

Kirkcaldy is the main shopping centre, not only for the District, but also for the Region as a whole, and has a wide range of department and specialist stores. Experimental pedestrianization of the main shopping street is seen as enhancing this present popularity.

The new town of Glenrothes also has a large and comprehensive indoor shopping centre.

Kyle and Carrick extends along the eastern side of the lower Firth of Clyde from the Burgh of Troon in the North to beyond Ballantrae in the South. Most of the coast from Troon to Ayr is urban in character, while the remainder of the District, consisting of Kyle in the North and Carrick in the South is largely rural. The rivers Ayr, Doon, Girvan and Stinchar run through the District to the sea offering opportunities for good fishing. Most of the industrial development in the District is situated in and around the major towns of Ayr, Prestwick, Troon, Girvan and Maybole and, in addition, agriculture, forestry and fishing provide substantial employment.

The main road and rail links (the Glasgow/Ayr Line now electrified) through the District give ready access to central Scotland and the rest of the country and Prestwick Airport is Scotland's International Gateway and the site of Scotland's only freport.

The District is a very popular tourist area with many fine beaches and there are swimming pools, fifteen golf courses, the famous Ayr Race Course, an ice rink and indoor bowling centres. The Centrum which opens in October 1988 will have the largest ice surface in Europe and will also offer indoor exhibition facilities and conference facilities for up to 6,000. All kinds of sport are catered for, including football, rugby, cricket, tennis and bowling and many other recreational pursuits are available such as fishing, horse riding and hill walking.

The area includes Burns Cottage, Alloway (famous as the birth place of Robert Burns) and Culzean Castle and Country Park as well as other historical buildings and places, providing an attractive environment for tourists and residents alike.

TOPOGRAPHY

Geographically, the district lies between the Pentland Hills and the Moorfoots on the west and south, Edinburgh to the north, with the agricultural lands of East Lothian stretching out to the east and the River Esk running through the centre.

Midlothian County Council was, heraldically, the Premier County of Scotland, and while historically overshadowed by Edinburgh, the numerous castles—Borthwick, Crichton, Dalhousie and Hawthornden, for example—point to the troublesome times of bygone days. Also within the district's boundaries are Dalkeith Palace, Newbattle Abbey and Rosslyn Chapel.

The principal industries of the area were, at one time, coal mining and paper making but both have in recent years contracted. There remains one colliery presently on a care-and-maintenance basis only. In recent years a diversity of new industry has been attracted to the six industrial estates and other individual locations. These include precision engineering, electronics, crystal glass manufacture, computer programming, etc., printing and stationery manufacture.

There is also a diversity of amenities with four golf courses, two indoor swimming pools, an indoor bowling stadium and fishing, horse riding and hill-walking facilities available.

TOPOGRAPHY

Monklands District covers a compact area of 63-8 square miles and extends from Bargeddie on the Glasgow District boundary to the fringes of Shotts and Cumbernauld to the east and north respectively and the M8 to the south. It takes in the two well established industrial towns of Airdrie and Coatbridge and various other smaller towns and villages such as Chapelhall, Caldercruix and Plains. Monklands is a district of sharp contrast with the densely populated south west areas being part of the Greater Glasgow Conurbation while the remaining area to the north and east is predominantly agricultural in character.

Although Monklands is largely an urban industrial area there are some areas of fine quality landscape. Three areas of note are the woodland/parkland area of Drumpellier, the high grade agricultural land and parkland areas of Cleddans/Rochsoles and the Hillend Reservoir area. As well as these three areas there are numerous zones of medium quality landscape such as Woodend and Lochend lochs and Woodhall estate. Towards the eastern boundary of the district the land rises fairly steeply towards the Slamannan Plateau and here the landscape takes on a totally different character with extensive tracts of upland, grassland, moorland and marginal agricultural land.

Most of this upland area is contained within the Central Scotland Woodlands Area and the aim of this project is to improve the landscape in this area by providing shelter belts, clearing and screening derelict land and reinstating woodland areas in association with agricultural improvements. Most of the rural area is contained within the Green Belt.

TOPOGRAPHY

Moray District comprises an area of twelve former burghs and the greater part of two former counties and is the most westerly of the districts of the Grampian Region. The administrative and business centre of the district is located in Elgin.

The district lies between Aberdeen to the east and Inverness to the west. The main road and rail links between these centres traverse the District, with railway stations at Elgin, Forres and Keith. Freightline services operate nightly linking Elgin with Glasgow and the rest of the freightliner network. Scheduled air services every weekday to London, Manchester, Birmingham, Glasgow and Edinburgh are available at Inverness, thirty miles from Elgin. Aberdeen Airport, sixty-three miles distant, offers a greater frequency and variety of destinations, including direct flights to Amsterdam and Stavanger.

The economy of Moray has traditionally been based on agriculture, fishing and forestry from which sources many thriving industries have developed over the years, such as food and fish processing, textile production, sawmilling and timber manufacture, agricultural and marine engineering and boat building. It is likely, however, that Moray's best known product is that of its fifty distilleries—Highland malt whisky.

On the recreational side, Moray presents magnificent opportunities for outdoor pursuits. Trout and salmon fishing in two of Scotland's finest rivers, the Spey and Findhorn; golf at any one of twelve courses; gliding and sailing. Mountaineering and skiing are also available with the Cairngorm Mountains within easy reach.

Twinning: Schweinfurt (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

Motherwell is one of the most easterly of Strathclyde's nineteen districts, extending from a boundary with the outer edge of Glasgow east across Scotland's waist to a boundary with Lothian only twenty miles from Edinburgh.

Motherwell lays claim to being the industrial heart of Scotland, housing major steel and heavy engineering works, at one time fired by coal produced in Motherwell and Wishaw. While the giant Ravenscraig Works of the British Steel Corporation still dominate the landscape the decline of the steel industry is now showing through and new industries are changing the look of Motherwell District.

The scene is not all of industry, however, as the district area still retains belts of woodlands and the valley of the Clyde especially in the area of the new Strathclyde Park has its own natural beauty. The district is thus very much a contrast of highly developed townscapes and equally undeveloped and often quite lonely moorland landscapes. The pattern of history, too, tended to rest most naturally on the west areas around the Clyde Valley although all of this part of the country was covenanted land with troubled times affecting even the smallest communities. The battle of Bothwell Bridge took place at a location only just over a mile from the western edge of Motherwell. The Romans, too, had their feet on the land here and their occupation is marked by streets in Motherwell with such names as "Roman Road", "Watling Street" etc. Efforts are being made to preserve a Roman bath-house uncovered when Strathclyde Park was being constructed.

The District Council are proud of their Concert Hall, seating 1,200 and Civic Theatre, seating about 400 attached to the Civic Centre in Motherwell. There is also a diversity of amenities with five private golf courses, four Council owned swimming pools, horse riding, football, cricket, angling, sailing and rowing and bowls. Two Sports Barns have already been provided and a new Sports Centre has been opened in Wishaw. March 1990 saw the completion of an £8m leisure programme involving the opening of a new cultural centre in Bellshill, a leisure centre incorporating pool facilities in Shotts and the prestigious Aquatic Leisure Centre in Motherwell incorporating water and ice facilities.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,200.

TOPOGRAPHY

Nairn District is very favourably situated on the southern shore of the Inner Moray Firth. The town of Nairn is situated 16 miles east of Inverness and is the premier seaside resort of the Highland Region and is an expanding residential town which enjoys a wide range of facilities. Tourism is of great importance to the District economy. There are safe sandy beaches, a leisure sailing harbour, angling on the Rivers Nairn and Findhorn, two championship golf courses and a broad range of hotels, guest houses and good caravan parks. Nairn is well served by road, rail and air services. The northern half of Nairnshire is fine agricultural land wherein are set a number of small villages, the largest of which are Cawdor and Auldearn. The rising uplands of the southern part of the District are largely moorland and, apart from small settlements, sparsely inhabited. This countryside is, however, very accessible and full of interest.

Agriculture is varied and prosperous in Nairn. The District is presently also sharing prosperity brought by the oil industry. There is a major oil platform construction yard on the District's western boundary which has provided continuous employment for a considerable work force since the early 1970's and is likely to contribute to the local economy for many years to come. New public and private sector housing continues to be provided to accommodate the increasing population. Nairn is an excellent shopping centre and also supports several smaller industries and service trades. The newly developed Balmakeith Industrial Estate immediately east of the town should ensure continuous expansion of Nairn, which enjoys Highlands and Islands' Development Board Support.

Provost's annual allowance: £900.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district takes its name from the River Nith which runs through much of the area. The name is a historic one for the lands of the Nith Valley. Not only the burghs mentioned below, but also many of the rural communities bear names which have a significant place in the history and development of Scotland throughout the ages.

Nithsdale district is predominantly an agricultural area. The population density is 102 persons per square mile. More than half the population live in the town of Dumfries and its vicinity. There are two very old Royal Burghs in the area, Dumfries and Sanquhar. Dumfries, the largest town in South-west Scotland, is a market, administrative and commercial centre for much of Dumfries and Galloway. Much of the industrial development in the district is in the Dumfries area. The Sanquhar area in the north has diversified modern industries which have largely taken over the role of the mining industry. Throughout the district agriculture and forestry, and industries associated with or serving these, also provide substantial employment. The tourist industry, though still seasonal, is also a growing source of employment.

TOPOGRAPHY

Historical. The area of Perth and Kinross has been the scene of much that is vital in Scotland's history from the distant days of the Roman occupation to the present-day development of hydro-electric power. The area contains the sites of many historic battles and is the home of one of the greatest of Scottish regiments, the Black Watch. There is much evidence of relics of the past—ruined castles, Pictish forts, Roman encampments—as well as castles, abbeys, churches and great houses still in use. The City of Perth was the ancient capital of Scotland.

Geographical and Industrial features. The area extends to 2,022 square miles, the second largest district council area in Scotland. The area contains almost every type of scenery to make it a microcosm of Scotland. It has great mountains, rolling farmlands, beautiful lochs and rivers, wide, high moorlands, hills of heather and pine, woodlands and waterfalls. Through it runs the longest river in Scotland and unquestionably the finest and most varied scenically, namely, the River Tay, which has unrivalled salmon fishing in its lower regions. There are ample facilities for the sportsman, particularly in fishing and golf. Facilities for salmon- and trout-fishing are extensive and there are many fine golf courses, including Gleneagles Hotel course. Shooting facilities are extensive—there are 100,000 acres of deer forest alone and the grouse moors are among the best in Scotland. In the bigger centres there are ample facilities for tennis and bowls and the mountaineer has every type of terrain offering an endless variety ranging from the simple scramble; while in the winter ski-ing and curling are provided for all. There are two theatres, one at Perth and one at Pitlochry.

Industrial. The main industries of the area are agriculture, tourism, glass manufacturing and whisky distilling/bottling.

TOPOGRAPHY

Renfrew District, with a population of 203,963 is one of the largest district authorities in Scotland and one that presents a great contrast in its environment. Its 120 square miles include lowlands, highlands, lochs and glens, industrial towns, villages and growing residential areas.

The District extends west from Raiston on the south-western boundary of Glasgow as far as Queenside Muir at Lochwinnoch and halfway to the coast. In the north the boundary is the River Clyde and in the south the District reaches into the higher land around Uplawmoor. As well as the larger towns of Paisley, Johnstone, Barrhead and Renfrew, the District includes the new community of Erskine and the small towns and villages of Bridge of Weir, Bishopston, Elderslie, Houston, Howwood, Inchinnan, Linwood, Langbank, Kilbarchan, Lochwinnoch and Neilston. The area is well served by both road and rail communications which link it with Glasgow and the rest of Scotland. Glasgow Airport, Scotland's major international airport, is located within Renfrew District, providing the gateway to business and holiday centres—both domestic and international.

The District is of great significance historically, with extensive remains of the Neolithic, Bronze, Iron and Medieval Age Periods. Historic buildings include the remains of several castles and houses as well as such national shrines as Paisley Abbey. Indeed, the area is often described as the "cradle of the Stewarts".

Today, Renfrew District is in the forefront of industry, with plenty of space for new development and a comprehensive range of sites and factory premises available, throughout the District. Nevertheless much of the District is still agricultural in use and there are extensive tracts of unspoiled and beautiful countryside, such as that of the Gleniffer Braes and Clyde Muirshiel Country Parks.

TOPOGRAPHY

Ross and Cromarty District is the fifth largest local authority in Scotland in terms of geographical area and extends from the Moray Firth in the east to the Atlantic Ocean in the west. The administrative centre of the District is Dingwall, the one-time county town of the former Ross and Cromarty County. The District is one of contrasts from the gently rolling countryside of the Black Isle and Easter Ross to the majestic scenery of Wester Ross which attracts thousands of visitors each year. The bulk of the District's population is concentrated in the eastern part with towns like Ainess and Invergordon owing their development largely as a result of the influx of oil related development in the 1960's and 70's. As a result of recent road improvements the District is now easily accessible from both north and south allowing the development of wide product market and travel to work areas and enviable lifestyle opportunities.

TOPOGRAPHY

Roxburgh District, entirely inland and with 75 miles of its eastern and southern boundaries forming the larger part of the border line with England, is an historic and cultural entity—once a bulwark of Scotland's defences against invasion. This one-time defensive attitude towards invaders from the south has subsequently made way for a thriving tourism industry. The evidence of early settlement in the district, from prehistoric times through the Iron Age, Roman, Saxon, Norman and Medieval periods are now prime tourist sites.

Rolling moorlands extending south to the Cheviots ideally provide both sheep and cattle grazing country, and fine woollens and tweeds have made the Borders famous world-wide as a textile centre. The rivers Teviot, Jed, Ale and Bowmont flowing north-east to the Tweed and the Hermitage and Liddel waters meeting the Solway in the south-west flow through areas geologically rich in old red sandstone, Silurian shales and glacial gravels. These rivers once harnessed to power the textile mills at Hawick and Jedburgh now provide some of the finest salmon and trout fishing in the country. While the Forestry Commission, private developers, and Estate owners have laid out vast plantations the district's landscape still remains predominantly agricultural. The 20th century has seen the emergence of new technology with light engineering and electronics broadening the economic base and joining the knitwear trade in the export market. Together with the Borders Regional Council, Roxburgh District Council has a positive approach to combating the problems of rural depopulation and, in recent years, many small craft-based businesses have been established in villages and hamlets and are contributing to the reversal of a dangerous trend.

From the earliest times, Roxburgh District attracted settlers and pre-Roman, Roman, Saxon and Norman sites abound, along with the Abbeys of Jedburgh and Kelso and the many castles and peel towers which still stand, memorials of the district's stormy history. Now they are beauty spots, where in quiet seclusion the problems of the present day may be forgotten.

More active pursuits can be found in plenty, for the district is well catered for in many and award-winning (e.g. Kelso—Britain in Bloom Winner in 1984; Roxburgh—Best District in Scotland in 1987 Britain in Bloom Competition, Hawick best medium town winner) public parks and recreation grounds, with rugby football being particularly popular. Teviotdale Leisure Centre in Hawick with free-form swimming pool, squash courts, sauna/

solarium suite, indoor bowling stadium, supplements the swimming pools at Jedburgh and Kelso. A curling rink at Kelso, five golf courses, tennis courts, many bowling greens, hunting, pony trekking, hill-walking and climbing, trampolines and putting mean that every member of the family can find something to do in Roxburgh District. While societies for the historically-minded, artistically-inclined and photographically-adept, combine with music, drama and operatic societies and commercial entertainment facilities to provide a wealth of relaxation in Roxburgh.

The Royal Navy have established a base in Kyle for the purpose of torpedo-testing in the Inner Sound of Raasay.

The Island of Skye is a very popular rendezvous for visitors and during the particular months of July and August is usually bursting at the seams with all nationalities. Favourite recreations are hill walking, climbing, golfing and fishing. The area is steeped in history and several interesting castles, Pictish brochs, etc., can be visited.

The climate is mild, being influenced by the Gulf Stream, and although rainfall is higher than the national average rarely does snow affect communications.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of the Stewartry district council comprises the area of the present Stewartry of Kirkcudbright with the exception of two parishes in the west and five parishes in the east which are now in other districts.

The title of Stewartry dates from the fourteenth century, when Archibald the Grim received, in perpetual fee, all the Crown Lands in Galloway between the Rivers Nith and Cree and appointed a steward to collect his revenues and administer justice.

The wealth and prosperity of the district is derived mainly from agriculture and its ancillary industries, and from forestry and (to a lesser extent) from tourism and manufacturing industries.

of great diversity, which could provide a complementary source of prosperity if carefully developed.

TOPOGRAPHY

Stirling District lies within the central belt of Scotland, midway between Edinburgh and Glasgow. It extends for over 843 square miles and has a resident population of 80,000 persons. It straddles the highland fault and has to the north of this line the wild, mountainous countryside forming the Southern Highlands and contains peaks such as Ben Lomond, Ben More and the shoulder of Ben Lawers. The fertile valley to the south of the fault line contains the principal town of Stirling to the east, and the village settlements of Strathblane, Drymen, Killearn and Balfron to the west. The extreme western boundary of the district is the centre of Loch Lomond with the area extending northwards as far as Tyndrum. The area contains numerous locations of outstanding scenic beauty, including the Lake of Menteith, the only lake in Scotland.

The largest town in the district is Stirling, with its contrasting ancient castle perched on a rock outcrop, and the modern covered shopping area. It is the administrative centre for both District and Regional Councils as well as an important industrial and distribution centre. The District is well served by motorways and principal roads, giving easy access to all parts of Scotland and south of the Border. There is also easy access to national and international airports. Stirling commands an important place in Scotland's history and plays an important modern role as a prime shopping and distribution centre for a large part of the population of Central Scotland. It has many features of importance to residents, businesses and visitors alike.

Numerous holiday towns lie in the northern part of the district, with the main centre of attraction being Callander. Other holiday settlements include Doune, Dunblane, Strathyre and Killin. One of the most renowned areas of countryside besides Loch Lomondside, is the Trossachs, made famous mainly by the writings of Sir Walter Scott.

TOPOGRAPHY

Extending to some 64.5 square miles, Strathkelvin has grouped around it the Districts of Bearsden and Milngavie, Glasgow, Monklands, Cumbernauld and Kilsyth, which are all parts of the Strathclyde Region and Stirling, which falls within the Central Region.

Kirkintilloch and Bishopbriggs are the main towns with estimated populations of 34,000 (taking in Lenzie) and 24,000 respectively. Other communities include Auchinloch, Balmore, Bardowie, Chryston, Gartcosh, Lennoxton, Lenzie, Milton of Campsie, Mollinsburn, Moodiesburn, Muirhead, Stepps, Torrance, Twechar and Waterside. The District Council's Headquarters is at Kirkintilloch, whilst that of the Regional Council is in Glasgow.

The District is traversed by two major roads from the city, the A803 (Glasgow to Kilsyth) which passes through Bishopbriggs and Kirkintilloch and the A80 (Glasgow-Cumbernauld-Stirling), which links with the M73 near Mollinsburn. By road, Kirkintilloch is eight miles from Glasgow, forty-three miles from Edinburgh and eighteen miles from Stirling. There are passenger stations at Bishopbriggs and Lenzie on the main Glasgow to Edinburgh railway line.

The River Kelvin flows through a broad valley, discharging to the River Clyde and two of its tributaries, the Glazert and Luggie Waters, are in smaller valleys. There are also several small lochs in the District.

On the north are the Campsie Fells, which present an imposing and very pleasant backcloth which is visible all over the District. High ground also occurs to the south-west of the Glazert Valley where is the Lennox Forest. There are mineral resources which have been tapped over a long period and remain significant.

Historical relics exist in Strathkelvin, mainly of the Roman period, so the museum is of special interest. A particular feature is the linear earthwork of the Antonine Wall, first laid circa AD 142. The Forth and Clyde Canal, built in 1790, had a profound effect on the industrial development of the area, with Kirkintilloch becoming an important centre for iron foundry work and cotton weaving. This waterway now has a considerable potential for recreation.

Nowadays, the foremost industries of Strathkelvin are book-publishing, agriculture and construction, with transportation and service industries also being very significant. A fair number of people are employed in the many varied and expanding smaller industrial concerns e.g., soap manufacturing, brass foundry work and art and display materials to name but a few.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Tweeddale is an entirely landlocked area of high rolling hills interspersed with valleys through which flow the River Tweed and a number of its tributaries and along which run the roads connecting the various settlements to Peebles. There is easy access from Glasgow (50 miles), Edinburgh (23 miles), Carlisle (80 miles) and Newcastle-upon-Tyne (90 miles). The River Tweed, one of Scotland's finest game fish rivers, rises in the Parish of Tweedmuir and flows for some 37 miles through the district, the lowest point of which is some 470 ft and the highest 2,700 ft above sea level.

The area is of considerable archaeological interest, having a large number of Iron Age forts and settlements as well as the remains of Roman occupation.

In more recent times there have been close ties with literary figures such as Sir Walter Scott, John Buchan and his sister, Anna (O. Douglas), James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, and the painter Allan Ramsay.

The principal industries include agriculture (mainly hill sheep rearing), forestry, mineral extraction (gravel and water—four large reservoirs providing all-purpose water supplies to Edinburgh and the Lothians) and the manufacture of high quality tweed and cashmere knitwear, but tourism is probably the largest growth industry with Peebles becoming a major conference centre.

The leisure pursuits which may be enjoyed include golf (3-courses), salmon and trout fishing, tennis, football, rugby, horse-riding, hill-walking, swimming, mountain biking etc.

TOPOGRAPHY

Located at the heart of Central Scotland and sitting astride the M8 and M9 Motorways, West Lothian is one of the fastest growing districts in Scotland, with the main population increases taking place in Linlithgow, Livingston and Broxburn.

The District enjoys three excellent commuter rail links to Edinburgh, serving these towns and Bathgate.

Over the centuries West Lothian has played a crucial role in Scotland's history, with Linlithgow Palace being the home of Kings and the birthplace of Mary, Queen of Scots, and in the 19th Century James "Paraffin" Young founded the world's oil industry in West Lothian.

This historic past provides the basis for the district's tourism and responsibility for developing this industry has been vested in the Forth Valley Tourist Board which is based in Linlithgow.

West Lothian has become the centre of Scotland's developing electronics and high technology industries with Digital at Queensferry, Sun at Linlithgow, many companies in Livingston New Town and now Motorola at Bathgate. A development agency, West Lothian Enterprise, encourages business growth throughout the district.

Added to this, the district contains a range of outstanding recreational facilities, including three country parks—at Beecraigs, Almondell & Calderwood, and Polkemmet—which provide a vast range of facilities and activities, including Sailing, Canoeing, Rock Climbing, Archery, Pioneer, Orienteering, Mountain Biking, Skiing, Angling, Golf, Bowling, or just casual walks through a variety of formal gardens and rural environments. Pitch & putt course Almondvale, Livingston, Craigswood Sports Centre, Livingston, Broxburn Sports Centre and Bathgate Sports Centre.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom. As such it is subject to the fundamental constitutional provisions which apply to the rest of the United Kingdom. However, in the Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973 and the Northern Ireland Act 1982, Parliament provides for a measure of devolved government in Northern Ireland. This can only be introduced if both Houses of Parliament agree that the arrangements for devolution are likely to command widespread acceptance throughout the community in Northern Ireland.

Such matters as the Crown, Parliament, international relations, the armed forces and the raising of taxes cannot be devolved in any circumstances and remain the responsibility of the UK Parliament and Government. In the event of agreement on widely-acceptable arrangements for devolution, powers over a range of social and economic matters would be devolved first. The Northern Ireland Assembly would have power to make laws on these subjects and Members of the Assembly would be appointed as heads of the relevant Northern Ireland government departments. Such powers were devolved on 1 January 1974, following an agreement among the Northern Ireland political parties to form a power-sharing Executive. This collapsed on 28 May 1974 and there has been no devolution since then.

In the interim and in the absence of devolved arrangements which command widespread acceptance, Northern Ireland is governed by 'direct rule' under the provisions of the Northern Ireland Act 1974. This provides for Parliament to approve all laws for Northern Ireland and places the Northern Ireland departments under the direction and control of a UK Cabinet Minister, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. Attempts have been made by successive Governments to find a means of restoring devolved government to Northern Ireland. The most recent attempt failed in 1986 when the Northern Ireland assembly, elected in 1982, was dissolved after it ceased to discharge its responsibilities of making proposals for the resumption of devolved government and of monitoring the work of the Northern Ireland departments. The Government expressed the hope that a new assembly would be established which would contribute to the better government and administration of Northern Ireland.

"To this end dialogue has been continuing since late 1989 between Government and the local constitutional political parties as a means of exploring the extent of the common ground which now appears to exist between them. This approach is viewed by Government as a necessary prelude to discussions about arrangements for the transfer of powers and responsibilities to locally elected representatives in Northern Ireland".

REORGANISATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Prior to re-organisation in 1973, local government in Ulster was similar in most respects to the system existing in England and Wales, the number of local authorities then being:—

County Councils	6 (a)
County Boroughs	2 (b)
Boroughs	9
Urban Districts	25
Rural Districts	26

(a) One (Fermanagh) was an all-purposes authority.

(b) Londonderry was a Development Commission.

On 1st October 1973 these authorities were replaced by 26 District Councils and 9 Area Boards. In addition certain functions, previously the responsibility of local authorities, were transferred to government departments. There are now no county councils in Northern Ireland.

District council members are elected for a term of four years and the experiment of using proportional representation by means of a single transferable vote was introduced at the first elections.

The next elections of District Council members will take place in May, 1993 on the third Wednesday in the month.

The following table is a simple guide to absorption and amalgamation of the several types of local authorities in being prior to the 1973 reorganisation described above, and also to the changes in Co. Fermanagh in 1967 and in the Londonderry area in 1969.

The first column contains the names of the local authorities existing prior to 1967—

CB County Borough	U Urban District Council
B Borough Council	R Rural District Council
DC Development Commission

The second column contains the names of the present 26 district councils after reorganisation in 1973. The third column lists the names of the six county areas, although for administrative purposes the county councils in operation prior to 1973 have been dissolved as local government units.

District councils also represent local views and will be consulted by the Department of the Environment on its regional functions.

Area Boards. There are nine area boards spanning the 26 new districts:

(a) 4 for health and personal social services covering Belfast and the south-east (in Belfast), North-east (in Ballymena), West (in Londonderry) and South (in Craigavon), (see Section 14) and

(b) 5 for education and public libraries, covering Belfast and the south-east having separate boards in Belfast, the North-eastern in Ballymena, the Western in Omagh, and the Southern in Armagh (see Section 9).

Membership of the boards varies from 24–36—thirty per cent of (a) and 40 per cent of (b) being district councillors. The other members are appointed by the Minister.

Each area for the health and personal social services is divided into a number of districts for local management of the services with an office in each district.

Transferred functions: from local government to government departments,

Planning, roads and water and sewerage services are the direct responsibility of the Department of the Environment and are administered through a chain of local offices.

Housing was already being carried out by the Housing Executive.

Fire Services: The Belfast Fire Brigade was merged with the Northern Ireland Fire Authority.

Electricity supply is unified by the merging of the Joint Electricity Authority, the Electricity Board for Northern Ireland, the Belfast Corporation Electricity Department and the Londonderry Commission Electricity Department into a single new authority.

Urban arterial drainage is the responsibility of the Ministry of Agriculture and local representation is maintained on the Drainage Council for Northern Ireland through district council representatives who provide the main membership.

TOPOGRAPHY

Antrim Town is situated on the shore of Lough

Neagh which is the largest inland waterway within the United Kingdom. The Lough is famous for its eel fishing and caters for many water-based recreational pursuits.

The Antrim area comprises the town of Antrim and the surrounding villages of Crumlin, Randalstown, Toomebridge, Templepatrick and Parkgate. The land area of the Borough is some 200 square miles and the total population is estimated at around 47,700 of whom 26,000–28,000 reside in the Antrim town area.

There are 19 seats on the local Borough Council, seven seats in Antrim Town and Antrim south east and five seats in Antrim north west. The Council was given Borough Status in May, 1977.

An updated Antrim area plan to cover the period to 2001 has been completed by Department of Environment, Town and Country Planning Service.

An Order designating Antrim for development as a New Town was made on 7th July, 1966 and distinguished an area of some 3,750 acres (about six square miles) centred in the town as a site for the main development.

Development in the area was originally promoted by the Antrim and Ballymena Development Commission but since the re-organisation of local services in 1973 this work is now being carried out by Government Departments—Northern Ireland Housing Executive, Borough Council and other Public Bodies.

The main industry in the area is farming (mostly livestock) and the remainder being mostly service industries. Belfast International Airport is located within the area at Aldergrove which is four miles from Antrim.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area administered by the Ards Borough Council is mainly a rural region, located east of Belfast and separated from the City by the Craigantlet and Castlereagh Hills. Most of the area takes the form of a narrow Peninsula extending over twenty-two miles from Newtownards at its northerly point down to Portaferry at the southern tip.

Separating the Ards Peninsula from the rest of County Down is Strangford Lough, an inlet varying in width from a narrow passage at the southern tip of the Peninsula to over four miles at its widest point. The Lough is approaching twenty miles long and is dominated by Scrabo Hill, a familiar landmark just outside Newtownards. Apart from Scrabo Hill the rest of the landscape is rather undulating and rarely rises more than 300 feet above sea level. The only reasonably flat area is an alluvial plain, known geologically as the Cherryvalley Gravel Terrace, stretching from Comber to Newtownards to the north to Strangford Lough. Part of this plain is occupied by the Newtownards Airfield.

The Strangford/Ards coastal plain is dominated by Drumlins; rounded hillocks composed of boulder clay deposited during the Ice Age. Indeed the many little islands of Strangford Lough are almost without exception partially submerged Drumlins. Throughout the Ards Peninsula 'raised beaches' are a common feature and these were formed as the substantial weight of ice retreated and the land rose slightly, thereby creating a new shoreline at a lower level.

TOPOGRAPHY

Under Local Government Re-Organization in 1973 the District of Armagh was formed out of the Urban Districts of the City of Armagh, Keady, and Tandragee and the rural districts of Armagh and Tandragee thus comprising of a sizeable portion of the former administrative County of Armagh.

Armagh because of its hill-top fortress became an important urban centre, according to local traditions as early as 600 B.C. when it got its name from Mhacha, the legendary princess who established a palace here at that time. With the coming of Christianity Armagh became the chief seat of St. Patrick and from this grew a great centre of religion and learning which was to remain important, despite the raids of the Vikings in the 9th and 10th centuries, until the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII. By the 11th century the area was dominated by the O'Neills and following the subsequent Anglo-Norman invasion Armagh became again an important strategic position and an administration centre. In 1608 the Plantation of Ulster established Armagh as the county town and with the more peaceable times of the 18th and 19th centuries the modern patterns of agriculture and industry developed.

Apart from Armagh urban communities grew up at Keady, which was an important centre of the linen industry, Tandragee—a Plantation settlement of the St. John family which also developed a thriving linen industry and to-day has added milling, light-engineering, concrete fabrication and a potato-crisp factory. Markethill established by the Acheson family (now represented by the Earls of Gosford), is associated with the famous author and satirist Dean Swift and has a flourishing cattle market and and recently established light industries, while Richhill, Loughgall, Tynan, Killylea, Blackwatertown, Mountnorris and Charlemont are pleasant villages and local centres in the District.

TOPOGRAPHY

The present Borough of Ballymena was created in 1973 out of the merging of the former Borough with the surrounding rural hinterland of the former Ballymena Rural District. The Borough, with the town of Ballymena at its centre, covers 200 square miles of one of the loveliest parts of County Antrim. The Borough includes rich farming country and has among many of its industries, those associated with agriculture and textiles.

Over half of the Borough's total population live in the town of Ballymena which stands practically in the heart of the area on the River Braid, served by the M2 motorway and a network of other good roads and with a station on the Belfast to Londonderry railway. Although this locality has been settled for centuries, the town only really developed with the rise of the linen industry in the 19th century and today it is modern in aspect. It is the administrative centre of the Borough; an educational centre with several fine modern schools; and important market and shopping centre and a place with a very wide range of industries. In recent years Ballymena has grown extensively as a place of residence and it has, too, a very good range of recreational amenities. Plans for the further expansion of the town are underway and should see it grow considerably in the future.

The countryside is some of the most beautiful in Northern Ireland and the rivers, with their flanking meadows and belts of sylvan woodland, have a quiet beauty all of their own. Here, too, are Glenravel and Glenwhirry which have all the homely peace associated with glens for which Antrim is famous. Beautiful, too, in and differing way are the remote slopes of the grassy Antrim Hills which cover much of the eastern side of the Borough and rise to such smooth-contoured points as the Slemish Mountain of 1,437 feet and Carncormick of 1,431 feet.

This beautiful country increasingly attracts the tourist who finds the winding roads and miles of footpaths attractive to explore. Sporting opportunities are good and the angler, in particular, will find excellent sport on the Rivers Maine, Kellswater, Cloughwater, Braid and Bann whilst the waters of Lough Neagh near the village of Toome also beckon.

Mayor's annual allowance: £5,700.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough with Ballymoney as its centre covers 161 square miles of North Antrim and includes rich farming country including the Bann and Bush Valleys and has also a number of industries centred mainly around the town.

The Borough is bounded on the West by the River Bann, on the North and East by Coleraine Borough and Moyle Districts and on the South by Ballymena Borough.

Although there is high land to the South East of Ballymoney reaching to over 600 feet near Dunloy and to over 1600 feet in the Antrim hills, the Borough is mainly quite low with gently undulating country watered by the River Bush flowing North to the sea near Bushmills.

Approximately one third of the Borough's population of 23,000 live within the town.

Ballymoney, the administrative centre of the Borough, is an educational centre with seven modern schools and colleges, important markets, shopping centres and industries.

Good roads and numerous bus services make travel within the Borough easy and such seaside resorts as Portrush, Portstewart, Ballycastle and Cushendall are all within easy reach as are the Glens of Antrim and the spectacular Antrim Coast Road.

TOPOGRAPHY

One of the twenty-six areas of local government in Northern Ireland, the District of Banbridge was formed from a merger of the former Banbridge Urban and Rural Districts and the former Dromore Urban District. Banbridge itself stands on the River Bann (which meanders across the District) at the point where the Belfast to Newry and Dublin trunk road cross it.

By far the largest town in the District, Banbridge has been a 'linen town' but today it has other busy industries and grows in stature as a residential, shopping, commercial and administrative centre. It is, too, the main centre of the District for recreational pursuits.

Other main centres of the District include Loughbrickland, a small village noted for its lake, on the Newry road south of Banbridge; the historic village of Scarva (noted for its annual 'sham battle') and the small milling town of Gilford, both to the west of Banbridge; the attractive hamlet of Katesbridge on the higher reaches of the Bann south-east of Banbridge and, away to the north, along the main Belfast road is the Cathedral town of Dromore that stands on the banks of the River Lagan which just cuts across this far northern corner of the District.

In between the towns and larger villages are the smaller villages and hamlets that nestle deep along the winding lanes in a green and lush countryside with ever present views of the Mountains of Mourne. This is a rich agricultural country noted, for the growing of potatoes, root crops and rye grass (exported as grass seed to all parts of the world) and the breeding of pigs, poultry and cattle. Most industries are concentrated in Banbridge itself but Gilford and Dromore both have their own features.

TOPOGRAPHY

Belfast is both the capital City and the chief port of Northern Ireland. Around forty per cent of the total population of the Province live in the City itself or in the peripheral areas.

The City is the natural distribution point for Northern Ireland with Belfast Airport (at Aldergrove—just a few miles from the City) rated as one of the busiest in the United Kingdom. A second airport (Harbour Airport) is situated close to the city centre. Belfast Harbour Commissioners operate one of Europe's most progressive and busiest ports with excellent unit load and deep sea facilities and the world's biggest dry dock. The City is linked to the rest of the Province by a network of roads and motorways.

In the past the prosperity of Belfast was built on the industries of linen, ship-building and engineering—all of which are suffering from the effects of recession in the '80s. Today the Harland & Wolff shipyard is still one of the City's major employers and the yard's giant cranes, Samson and Goliath, dominate the East Belfast skyline. The Short Brothers' aircraft and missile works is another successful and internationally known employer. One of the firm's major successes—the 3-60 commuter airliner—can often be seen flying over the City.

Belfast is also the administrative, banking and commercial capital of Northern Ireland as well as a thriving centre for the Arts. The museum and art gallery originally founded by the Belfast Corporation is now the Ulster Museum; professional drama flourishes in the City's four theatres and there are several fine art galleries in the city centre. The Ulster Hall, owned and operated by the Belfast City Council and the 'home' of the Ulster Orchestra, is one of several centrally located concert halls featuring regular 'live' entertainment. The chain of Council-operated Leisure Centres offer varied sporting and recreational facilities.

TOPOGRAPHY

Carrickfergus Borough covers some 45 square miles of largely unspoilt East Antrim countryside, and includes within its boundaries the ancient and historic town of Carrickfergus, coastal town of Whitehead and the area of Greenisland.

It is an area of contrast rich in history and tradition, yet boasting excellent modern shopping, educational and recreational facilities. Situated on the picturesque shores of Belfast Lough, it is conveniently located between the main centres of travel. On the one side, Greenisland is a mere seven miles from Belfast, while on the other, Whitehead is only eight miles from the port of Larne.

Holidaymakers from Scotland can cross the North Channel in about two hours by luxury steamer from either Stranraer or Cairnryan and be in the Borough of Carrickfergus within fifteen or twenty minutes of landing.

Created by Local Government reorganisation in 1973, Carrickfergus Borough Council provides a wide range of specialised services for the area's 30,000 residents. It replaces the old Borough Council, sections of the Urban District of Larne, and Whitehead Rural District.

Mayor's annual allowance: £5,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Castlereagh is situated to the south east of Belfast. It is composed of post second world war residential development together with large industrial estates at Castlereagh, Dundonald and Newtownbreda. It also contains a substantial area of agricultural land. In its present form the Borough was created in 1973 following the reorganisation of local government in Northern Ireland. Historically and geographically Castlereagh is closely linked to East Belfast where many of its residents are employed in ship-building and aircraft manufacturing and related industries. The Borough has a long tradition of skilled labour.

The first reference to Castlereagh occurs in an ancient history of Ulster in A.D. 1148. In the 14th century a branch of the O'Neill's, an ancient Ulster clan, settled at Castlereagh where their main stronghold was the Grey Castle from which the Borough takes its name.

Dundonald, which lies to the north of the Borough was first mentioned in the Ecclesiastical Taxation of Ireland in the year 1306. This large town which was once a village (the name means the Fort of Donal), boasts an ancient Norman motte which is still in existence.

In the Newtownbreda area, the Belvoir demesne was developed by the Hill family, later the Marquises of Downshire and Viscounts Dungannon. The grandson of Arthur Hill, the first Viscount Dungannon, was the Duke of Wellington who spent his holidays from boarding school in England at Belvoir before joining the army at the age of 17. The beautiful wooded grounds of the Belvoir Estate provide recreation and pleasure to many of the inhabitants of Castlereagh and Belfast.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Coleraine covers some 120 square miles; mostly in the north-east of County Londonderry although it also includes a small part of the north-western corner of County Antrim. It has as its 'capital' the important town of Coleraine and includes also the popular coastal resorts of Portrush and Portstewart.

To the north, the Borough has one of Northern Ireland's most attractive coastlines; to the east it is bordered by County Antrim and to the south and west its boundaries range among the mountains of central Londonderry. A rich agricultural area, the Borough is noted for the dairy herds which graze the Bann Valley; for its milk and butter; for its salmon and eel fisheries; for the products of its stone and lime quarries and for the output of the numerous factories in Coleraine itself.

Scenically this area has a great deal to offer. The Bann river, which flows through Coleraine and enters the sea four miles downstream near Castlerock is one of Ulster's loveliest waterways. It has extensive fisheries, is well known to anglers and beloved by all those who enjoy wandering along its wooded banks. Woods are a feature of the local scene and the Borough has several forest parks in one of which has been created Northern Ireland's first 'trim trail'. To the west the woodlands and pastures give way to moors and mountains that reach up to the thousand foot level. In the south these join the Carrntogher Mountains of central Londonderry whilst on the north they form impressive coastal cliffs above the sands of Castlerock and Downhill.

Good roads and rail and road services make the Borough an easy one to travel in — and there is much of interest to see. Coleraine, home now of the University of Ulster, still has reminders of its long and storied past although redevelopments are changing its image. Portrush and Portstewart combine the many pleasures of popular seaside resorts with the bustling activity of busy harbours whilst Portballintrae with its excellent harbour acts also as a jumping-off point for exploring the famous Giant's Causeway which is just beyond the Borough's eastern boundary. Castlerock and Downhill are small unspoiled resorts with superb sandy beaches and beautiful sea views across to the hills of Donegal. Anglers have excellent rivers to fish as well as the Bann itself, golfers have several good courses to choose from whilst the lover of quiet country places can enjoy such old towns as Kilrea and Garvagh.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district occupies an area around the head of Lough Foyle in the north west corner of the province and comprises the City of Londonderry and the villages of Newbuildings, Prehen, Eglinton, Claudy and Park. It is a region that is noted for its fine scenery and excellent salmon fishing.

The City itself is the province's second city and has a population of around 85,000. It has its origins in a settlement that grew up around a monastery founded by St. Columcille in the 6th century A.D., but the present city dates from the early 17th century. Much of its 17th century character survives including the city walls which remain little altered since they were built in 1617.

The area has undergone considerable modernisation within the last 15 years. In that time around £200 million has been spent on the provision of some 12,000 new private and public sector houses, a new quayside route and a comprehensive range of cultural and recreational facilities which include sports complexes, an art gallery, urban and rural parks and other outdoor facilities catering for a wide range of both field and water sports. A municipal airport has also been established close to the city and provides regular air services to and from Glasgow, Manchester and Dublin with services to and from Blackpool and the Isle of Man during the summer months. Major schemes completed 1984 include the construction of a second bridge across the Foyle and the building of a 100,000 sq. foot shopping and service complex near the city centre.

Industrially, the area has also undergone considerable change by way of diversification. Alongside the shirt manufacturing industry, which for long had been the main industry in the area, new names, new technologies and new processes have been introduced. Most of these new concerns are located in the two main industrial estates at Maydown and Springtown, and two Government Training Centres further assist the diversification process. But by far the most important development on the industrial front in recent times was the decision by the central government in 1983 to locate one of the province's two Enterprise Zones in the City, and the site, which covers 160 acres and is divided between the two banks of the Foyle, is now in use.

Mayor's annual allowance: £9,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District Council area comprises the former Districts of Dungannon Urban, Dungannon Rural, Clogher Rural and a small part of Armagh Rural. It extends from Lough Neagh in the East to the boundary with County Fermanagh in the West, from the foothills of the Sperrin Mountains in the North to Caledon and the River Blackwater in the South. It is essentially a rural area, agriculture being the predominant industry with some of County Tyrone's richest agricultural land situated in the picturesque Clogher Valley.

The two main centres of population are Coalisland and the larger town of Dungannon which is the administrative centre for the District. Coalisland has been the centre of the brick making industry in Northern Ireland and a great deal of the product is exported widely.

The Council has provided a number of recreational areas throughout the District and a small museum has been built in Fivemiletown to display the considerable history of that area.

TOPOGRAPHY

Fermanagh District comprises all of County Fermanagh which is the south westerly of the six counties of Northern Ireland. It is the basin of the Erne River system. Indeed, 10 per cent of the total area of the county is lakes and rivers. The Erne Waterway comprises two main lakes, Upper and Lower Lough Erne, and the River Erne itself. The river flows into the Atlantic Ocean at Donegal Bay.

The population of Fermanagh is now 50,400 which is a small increase on the 1971 figure. This is a change from the position in the first half of this century when the population was in decline.

Agriculture and food processing are the largest industries in Fermanagh. Milk, beef and store cattle, sheep and pigs are the main agricultural products. They are processed at five modern factories within the county. Some of the land in the county which is unsuitable for economic agricultural production is devoted to forestry (some 23,400 hectares).

There are light industries such as thread production, clothing, decorative plastics, light engineering and electronics. Also the fine china produced at Belleek is known throughout the world.

Tourism is Fermanagh's big growth industry. Here is one of the most important tourist areas in Northern Ireland. Special attractions include hire cruisers on the Erne; top quality angling—both game and coarse fishing in the lakes and rivers; forest drives and walks; antiquities such as the 12th Century Round Tower and Churches on Devenish Island; potholing in the numerous limestone caves as well as the Marble Arch Showcaves. The county has excellent tourist accommodation in hotels, guest houses, farm houses and self-catering units. A full programme of entertainment is provided at Ardhowen—the Theatre by the Lakes.

Fermanagh has an adaptable workforce, and excellent labour relations exist within industries located in the county.

Excellent facilities for education exist in Primary, Secondary and Grammar Schools, as well as in the Fermanagh College of Further Education in Enniskillen.

Fermanagh has its own Airport (St. Angelo, Enniskillen), which is owned by the District Council.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Larne, of which the town of Larne is the centre, comprises the villages of Glynn, Magheramorne, Gleno and Ballycarry in the south and Ballygally, Cairncastle, Glenarm and Carnlough in the north. It extends from the townland of Ballynure in the south to the headland of Garron Point in the north and from the peninsula of Islandmagee in the west to Shanes Hill in the east and takes in an area of some 83,983 acres.

The town itself is commonly known as the 'Gateway to Ulster' since, for the majority of people entering Northern Ireland, Larne is the first town through which they will pass either on their way to Belfast and various provincial towns or to the Antrim Coast Road.

This road is one of the Borough's greatest tourist attractions with many miles of bays, headlands and cliffs and it is not surprising that two thirds of the Borough has been designated as an area of outstanding natural beauty.

The harbour, considered as far back as 1846 to be one of the safest on the north east coast of Ireland, today can still boast this reputation.

The harbour has seven quays, four of which are equipped with roll-on/roll-off facilities. Two of these ramps are twin-level and can handle loads of up to 160 tonnes. British Rail Sealink, who operate to Stanraer, and Townsend Thoresen, who operate from Larne to Cairnryan, are the passenger services, and Pandora Limited provides freight services to Fleetwood. Up to twenty arrivals and departures are handled comfortably each day in the summer. The Harbour Highway, a 1½ miles dual carriageway, ensures easy access to and from the port and links directly with the Province's excellent road system.

Recreational facilities are well catered for with many fine parks, golf courses, a caravan and camping park convenient to the harbour, hotels, tennis courts, putting greens and bowling greens, river and sea fishing, forest walks, amusement parks, squash courts and a fine modern heated indoor swimming pool.

There are local choral societies throughout the borough and a Drama Circle in the Town. All tastes can be catered for in the excellent shopping area in the town itself and the free parking facilities are more than adequate.

Mayor's annual allowance £3,500.

LIMAVADY Borough (Co. Londonderry)

Pop., 30,000; RV, £2,785,660; District Rate, 50-5p; Area, 58,698 hectares (239 sq. miles).

Car Parks: 5; Public Cemeteries: 1; Markets: 1; Parks: 3; Recreation Centre (including Swimming Pool): 1; Leisure Centres: 2; Community Halls: 4; Tourist Complex: 1.

Water Supply: Department of the Environment (Western Division).

Electricity Supply: Northern Ireland Electricity.

Parliamentary Constituency: United Kingdom and Northern Ireland: East Londonderry.

TOPOGRAPHY

Limavady, the largest and most important town in the District is an ancient town that followed its own quiet ways for many years, but it is now a fine residential, commercial, shopping, administrative and recreational centre with a population of around 12,000 and still growing. Two other main residential and trading centres in the District are the attractive market town of Dungiven, and the small town of Ballykelly straddling the main road between Limavady and Londonderry.

Most of the Limavady District lies within the fertile valley of the river Roe. The valley is noted for its rich agricultural lands, some of which have been reclaimed from Lough Foyle, while the river itself is one of the best for salmon and sea trout in Ireland. But the District also takes in several spectacular peaks of the lovely Sperrin range of mountains, and, not least, a sea beach regarded as possibly the best in Europe. This is a 7 mile stretch of clean, golden sand bounded by the Atlantic Ocean. Thus nature has given Limavady a rich, beautiful and varied landscape. Indeed, much of the District has been designated as of outstanding natural beauty, while parts have been officially designated as areas of scientific interest and nature reserves.

Astride the river Roe at Limavady is the beautiful Roe Valley Country Park which offers some of the loveliest riverside and woodland walks in the Province and is well worth a visit at any time of the year. The Park includes a modern visitor Centre, housing a historical exhibition, an 18th Century mill and weaving shed and a restored 1896 power house used to make Limavady the first town in the country to be lighted by electricity. Chairman's annual allowance £2,500.

LISBURN Borough (Co. Antrim and Co. Down)

Pop., 97,400; RV, £12,422,095; District Rate, 55-56p; Area, 44,376 hectares (110,372 acres).

Activity Centres: 4; Car Park: 2; Cemeteries: 7; Market: 1; Swimming Bath: 1; Parks: 7; Central Services Depot: 1; Indoor Leisure Centre: 1; Community Centres: 2.

Water Supply: Department of the Environment (Eastern and Southern Divisions).

Parliamentary Constituency: Lagan Valley.

TOPOGRAPHY

With a population of around 91,900 the Borough of Lisburn is one of the fastest growing areas in Northern Ireland. In its present form the Borough dates from the local government reorganisation that took place in 1973. In that year the former Lisburn Borough (which had been an Urban District from 1899 to 1964 and a Borough from then on) was abolished and replaced by the new and larger authority which extends beyond Lisburn itself to include numerous other towns and villages—including Moira, Dromara, Glenavy, Dunmurry and Hillsborough.

This large Borough is an area of contrasts. On the one hand are the hills around Dromara and the undulating drumlin country of Down; on the other are the busy built-up areas of the Lagan Valley and, again in direct contrast, the quiet shores of Lough Neagh which, at beautiful Sandy Bay, offer fishing, boating and bathing.

The views across Lough Neagh to the distant Sperrin Mountains are very lovely and can best be enjoyed from the heights at Bohill above Dundrod or from Glenavy's Crew Hill, a place where, in ancient times, the Kings of Eastern Ulster were crowned.

As a place of residence, Lisburn is ideally sited. It is almost on the outskirts of Belfast yet is in the heart of the Lagan Valley. It is astride the main north-south routes and from it others lead to the centre of the Province. Good rail and road links are provided to Belfast and major provincial towns and Lisburn is also close to Aldergrove Airport, the main air terminal in Northern Ireland.

Lisburn, whose history has been long and varied, is now a thoroughly modern Borough, easily accessible and growing in stature as a residential area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District of Magherafelt comprises most of South Londonderry and is bordered on the east by the River Bann and Lough Neagh (Britain's largest fresh water lake) and on the west by the picturesque Sperrin Mountains. The district itself is a rural community, consisting mainly of gently undulating pastoral countryside in the east rising gradually westwards into the impressive Sperrin range. The towns and villages of the district (the largest of which is Magherafelt) are linked by excellent roadways but the prevailing impressions for the visitors are the scenic beauty and tranquility existing throughout the entire area.

Many small industrial companies operate throughout the area catering for quite a large proportion of the district's workforce, and a 14 acre site is available in Magherafelt for industrial development.

Recreational needs are well catered for throughout the area with playing pitches and play grounds prevalent throughout. Magherafelt itself has a new leisure centre and large outdoor sporting complex. There is also an indoor and outdoor Recreation Centre at Maghera.

MOYLE (Co. Antrim)

Pop., 15,100; RV, £1,260,350; District Rate, 74-22p; Area, 49,543 hectares.

Car Parks: 7; Parks: 10.

Water Supply: Department of the Environment (Northern Division).

Electricity Supply: Northern Ireland Electricity.

Parliamentary Constituency: United Kingdom and Northern Ireland: North Antrim.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Moyle district with its administrative headquarters in Ballycastle (population 4,000) includes Rathlin Island and 42 miles of the breathtakingly beautiful North Antrim coastline. Rathlin Island with its population of approximately 110 people who are mostly dependant on fishing, farming, and the income from the tourist is Northern Ireland's only inhabited island. The area derives its name from "The Straits of Moyle", this being the old Irish name for the North Channel between the Antrim coast and Scotland.

This area is very popular with the tourist and includes the two best known features of Northern Ireland; The Giant's Causeway and The Glens of Antrim.

Five of the nine Glens of Antrim are in the district including the most famous, Glengariff, sometimes known as the "Queen of the Glens", with its many waterfalls 10 metres and more in height and rainbows forming in the spray, is often described as "Switzerland in miniature". This is an apt description except that snow is a rare occurrence here.

The Giant's Causeway with approximately 38,000 mostly hexagonal shaped basalt stone columns is said by some to have been built by the Irish Giant, Finn McCool, to enable him to cross to Scotland, and is really the result of the cooling and shrinking of molten lava from a vast volcanic eruption which formed the Antrim Plateau. Alongside the Causeway Hotel a visitors centre costing £1m was opened in 1986 which includes an audio visual theatre.

The main sources of income in the district are farming, tourism and a little light industry. There is a distinct absence of any major industry due mainly to strict planning policy regulations which are in force because of areas of "outstanding natural beauty". Within the district, however, Bushmills (population 1,500) on the western extremity of the district can boast of the World's oldest surviving distillery which manufactures Irish whiskey.

Chairman's annual allowance £2,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

Newry and Mourne is generally an area of small farms with grass, potatoes and oats being the principal crops, combined with pig, sheep and cattle raising. In all areas mechanisation and farm amalgamation will in time lead to considerable changes in the use and appearance of the landscape. Forestry and mineral workings also provide a significant amount of rural employment. Recreation and Tourism are of increasing importance and the rural countryside will become more important in this context as leisure time becomes more plentiful.

There is a history of continuous settlement in the area from 4,000 B.C. The present pattern of development shows Newry to be dominant, with the new port of Warrenpoint rapidly expanding. These two towns are complemented by Kilkeel, Bessbrook, Crossmaglen, Hilltown, Rostrevor, Rathfriland, Newtownhamilton and Annalong. Between these long established and serviced settlements there is a large number of scattered rural housing estates mostly with water, sewerage and electricity services, but generally too small to support other amenities and transport services.

The Borough of Newtownabbey is an area immediately north of Belfast in Co. Dairy farming is carried on extensively in the area but Newtownabbey today is becoming known for its industrial developments, there being several large industrial centres, notably those at Mallusk and Monkstown.

The Borough also contains the villages of Ballyeaston, Ballynure, Ballyrobert, Doagh, Hyde Park, Kilbride, Mallusk and Straid and is traversed by the M2 Motorway from Belfast to the north and west of the province and by the Belfast to Larne trunk road.

NORTH DOWN Borough (Co. Down)

Pop., 75,400; RV, £8,835,188; District Rate, 69.24p; Area, 7,368 hectares.

Car Parks: 18; Cemeteries: 4; Market: 1; Abattoir: 1; Parks: 16; Swimming Baths: 1 (indoor).

Water Supply: Department of the Environment (Eastern Division).

Electricity Supply: Northern Ireland Electricity.

Parliamentary Constituency: United Kingdom: Belfast East (part) and North Down (part).

N.I. Constituency: North Down.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of North Down is situated on the south shores of Belfast Lough with a 30 mile coastline stretching from Holywood in the west to Orlock Point in the east and in the south to the village of Conlig. The main town in the area is Bangor with a population of around 48,000, the total population of the area being approximately 75,000.

The area possesses no natural resources or minerals of any kind suitable for commercial exploitation. Thus industry within the North Down is light, e.g. light engineering, small shipbuilders, packaging, etc. and is mainly situated around the town of Bangor. Most of the working population, however, works in, and commutes to, the City of Belfast which lies just outside the Borough. This means that the area is mainly residential, with all the facilities normally associated with dormitory towns, i.e. shopping centres and various leisure facilities.

Tourism is the main economic activity of the area, Bangor being one of the most popular seaside resorts in Northern Ireland. At present the fourth phase of a multi-million pound Seafront Development Scheme is under way, which would make the North Down area one of the leading sailing centres in Ireland. As well as seaside activities, the North Down area contains many parks, including the most visited park in Northern Ireland, Crawfordsburn Country Park, and the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum situated at Cultra, outside Holywood. The latter consists of traditional Ulster buildings, transposed from their original sites to new sites within the Museum parkland.

The area also contains some attractive villages such as Crawfordsburn and Groomsport. Geographically, the area is unremarkable, being gently undulating, reaching its highest point in the hills backing onto Holywood. There is some farming in the area, mainly dairy farming, with most of the agricultural land laid over to pasture.

Mayor's annual allowance £8,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Omagh, the county town of Tyrone is a very busy market town and the most important administrative and commercial centre in the West Tyrone region. It has numerous shops, offices, schools, hospitals and commercial businesses. There are many opportunities and facilities to cater for everyone's leisure and sporting tastes. A major leisure complex is located in the town and serves the whole district.

Omagh has a population of 20,000 and this, combined with the population of the numerous small villages that surround it amounts to approximately 47,500 for the entire district.

Although industrial development has taken place and a number of small factories have long been established, agriculture is the most important activity and it is on this that the economy of the district is based. Good opportunities exist for industrial development.

Through an excellent network of roads, Omagh has links with all major towns in the rest of the Province, all ports, airports, Donegal and all important towns and cities in the Republic of Ireland.

Situated to the south-west of the beautiful Sperrin Mountains, Omagh is an area of quiet, natural beauty and charm. It is an area of gently rolling hills, glens, forests, loughs and rivers. The town of Omagh itself is situated where the rivers Camowen and Drumragh, once renowned for their pearl fishing, meet to form the Strule. These rivers and of course the many other rivers and loughs in the district are rich in many varieties of fish. There are many areas of forest scattered throughout the district, the largest and best known being the Gortin Glen Forest. This forest, which comprises a Forest and Wildlife Park, is among the most popular tourist attractions in Northern Ireland.

Two other major tourist and educational attractions are: The Ulster American Folk Park which illustrates the life of Ulster emigrants in Ireland and in the new world of America; and The Ulster History Park which depicts in detailed realism the history of human settlement in Ireland through 9000 years.

You make a lot of new friends on Operation Raleigh!

Over 5,500 young people aged 17–25 from 46 countries have already taken part in 84 expeditions in remote corners of the world. Each expedition lasts three months and combines community and conservation projects with high adventure. Projects can range from building bridges and medical clinics to caring for coral reefs and wildlife. The work is challenging and conditions can be tough. Venturers, as they are called, may find themselves crossing deserts and swamps, exploring glaciers or diving for hidden wrecks.

Operation Raleigh has now introduced a Youth Development Programme which obtains sponsorship from local authorities. This scheme gives young people from inner cities and rural areas, the chance to participate in an Operation Raleigh expedition who otherwise might not have the resources and support to go. Each expedition is designed to widen the Venturers horizons, increase their self-confidence and to learn new skills. An opportunity not to be missed!

For further information contact: Christine Partridge, Youth Development Programme Co-ordinator, Operation Raleigh, The Power House, Alpha Place, Flood Street, London SW3 5SZ. Tel: 071-351 7541.

GOVERNMENT IN THE ISLES

THE ISLE OF MAN

An island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3'–54° 25' N, and long. 4° 18'–4° 47' W, nearly equi-distant from England, Scotland and Ireland. The total land area is 141,263 acres (221 sq. miles), with the 1986 Census recording a resident population of 64,282.

Agriculture 1989: Rough grazing 37,590 acres. Under crops 79,410 acres; of which Oats 1,418; Wheat 421; Barley 8,361; Turnips 682; Potatoes 594; Hay and Grassland 65,914 acres.

Livestock. Horses 929, Cattle 33,106; Sheep 152,288; Pigs 6,059.

Workers (including self-employed) (April 1981). Agriculture and Fishing, 1,412; Manufacturing, 3,467; Building, 2,921; Public Utilities and Transport, 2,796; Wholesaling and Retailing, 3,554; Professional and Financial, 5,252; Tourist Accommodation, 987; Other, 5,475.

The Island's traditional industries are agriculture, fishing and tourism, which attracts about 165,000 holidaymakers each summer. Banking and finance is the largest sector in the Manx economy, contributing around one quarter of income from Manx sources. Manufacturing industry, particularly light engineering is a second principal sector, contributing around 14% of income from Manx sources.

The government provides a wide range of services including a national health service, social security benefits similar to those provided in the United Kingdom, education services, and is responsible for roads, builds houses to rent and advances loans for house purchase. Loans and grants are also available to assist manufacturing industry, the tourist industry and the agriculture and fishing industries. Trading undertakings such as airports, harbours, electric and steam railways, and electricity are controlled by the government.

Parliament. The Isle of Man is governed by a legislature, called Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Legislative Council consists of the Bishop of Sodor and Man, the Attorney General, and eight members appointed by the House of Keys. The Legislative Council appoints one of its members as President of the Legislative Council to chair its meetings. (From 1st October, 1990 the President of Tynwald (elected by Tynwald) will chair meetings of Tynwald (i.e. the branches sitting together) as well as the Legislative Council, being an additional member of the Legislative Council (though only having a casting vote)). The House of Keys consists of 24 members elected by the adult suffrage. Of the 15 constituencies the towns elect the number of members as follows: Douglas (8), Ramsey (2), Peel (1), Castletown (1); the district of Onchan (3); and the other areas based on ancient sheadings (9). Bills having passed both branches are signed in Tynwald by the members, and given Royal Assent by H.M. Queen or by H.E. Lt. Governor on the sovereign's behalf. A bill does not become law unless promulgated within the ensuing eighteen months at the annual open-air meeting of Tynwald on 5th July at Tynwald Hill, St. John's. Promulgation is effected in the English and Manx languages and a certificate is signed for each Act to authenticate that the procedure has been completed. Tynwald is the oldest continuous legislative assembly in the world and celebrated its millennium in 1979.

Government. The executive government of the Isle of Man consists of a Council of Ministers consisting of the Chief Minister, elected by Tynwald, and nine Ministers appointed by the Chief Minister who are in charge of the nine major Departments ((1) Treasury, (2) Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry, (3) Education, (4) Health and Social Security, (5) Highways, Ports and Properties, (6) Home Affairs, (7) Industry, (8) Local Government and the Environment and (9) Tourism and Transport.) The Council conceives and implements policy subject to the approval and scrutiny of Tynwald. Additionally there are seven Statutory Boards which act independently subject to directions from the Council of Ministers ((1) Board of Consumer Affairs, (2) Financial Supervision Commission, (3) Insurance Authority, (4) Post Office Authority, (5) Electricity Authority, (6) Water Authority and (7) The Communications Commission.)

Education. There are 32 primary, 5 secondary schools and a College of Further Education in addition to 1 direct grant school for girls and 1 independent co-educational public school.

Capital. Douglas, Pop., 20,368 (April 1986). The port of Douglas, radar controlled since 1st March, 1948, was the first port in the world to be so equipped. Castletown (3,019) is the ancient capital; the other towns are Peel (3,660) and Ramsey (5,778).

Transport. During the summer the Island has frequent boat and air services to five seaports and a large number of airports in the United Kingdom, Ulster and Eire. Winter sailings are daily to and from Heysham, and air services are maintained throughout the year with London (Luton and Heathrow), Liverpool, Manchester, Blackpool, Glasgow, Belfast and Dublin; and excluding the winter period, to Birmingham, Leeds, Bradford, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Carlisle, Barrow and Jersey via Blackpool.

Currency. The Isle of Man issues its own notes and coins.

Finance. The main sources of taxation are customs and excise duties, social security taxes which are levied at the same rates as in the United Kingdom and income tax. The standard rate of income tax is 15% on the first £8,000 of taxable income of resident individuals and £16,000 for a resident married couple (fully transferable between husband and wife) with a higher rate of 20%. Personal allowances are £5,000 for a single person and £10,000 for a married couple. The rate of income tax is 20% on the whole taxable incomes of non-residents and companies. The Isle of Man Government does not charge death or estate duties, inheritance or gifts taxes, capital gains tax, wealth tax or poll tax.

A property rate is levied to recover a proportion of central government expenditure and expenditure of local authorities.

Constitution—The Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Jersey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign, the Commander of the Armed Forces of the Crown and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown. He is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote. He has a veto on certain forms of legislation. The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and is President of the Assembly of the States (the Insular Legislature) and of the Royal Court of Jersey. He has in the States a right of Dissent and a casting vote. The Government of the Island is conducted by Committees appointed by the States. The States consist of 12 Senators (elected for six years; six retiring every third year) 12 Constables (triennial) and 29 Deputies (triennial), all elected under universal suffrage by the People. (Constables and Deputies have a restricted constituency.) The Dean of Jersey, The Attorney-General and The Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote. Permanent laws passed by the States require the Sanction of Her Majesty in Council, but Triennial Regulations do not require such Sanction.

Justice—Justice is administered in Jersey by the Royal Court which consists of the Bailiff and 12 Jurats. There is an appeal in certain cases to the Jersey Court of Appeal and finally to Her Majesty in Council. The Jurats are elected by an Electoral College. Stipendiary Magistrates deal with minor civil and criminal cases.

Language—The official language is French, but English is the language in daily use.

Currency—Jersey issues its own currency notes and coinage. The denominations and sizes are the same as English notes and coins (which are also legal tender in the Island) but the designs are unique to Jersey.

Education—There are approximately 10,256 children receiving full-time primary and secondary education in the Island; of these 8,166 attend State Schools. The educational system is similar in all essentials to that in England and Wales: the States of Jersey maintain 22 primary and 7 secondary schools throughout the island, including two single sex part fee-paying schools which resemble direct-grant schools. The Headmaster of the boys' school is a member of The Headmasters' Conference.

Grants from the States of Jersey for advanced education in the United Kingdom are available to students from all schools in approved cases, on scales similar to those operating in the United Kingdom.

The College of Further Education (Highlands College) provides full-time courses in Agriculture, Horticulture, Catering, Nursery Nursing and Business Studies and day release courses in technical subjects for young people in employment, as well as a number of vocational and recreational courses in Adult Education.

Rates and Taxes—The standard rate of income tax is 20p in the pound. There is no tax on capital or capital transfers. Parochial rates of moderate amount are payable by owners and occupiers.

Public Utilities—Private Companies operate gas, water and electricity undertakings in the Island.

Ports—The Jersey Airport is situated at St. Peter on high ground. It has one concrete/tarmac runway, 5,300 feet in length. The Port of St Helier is the commercial harbour and has both standard lift on/lift off facilities and two roll on/roll off terminals.

ISLES OF SCILLY

Pop., 1,900; RV, £334,928; Personal C.C., £280; Debt, £3,200,000; Area, 1,635 Ha.

The Council of the Isles of Scilly is administratively unique in the United Kingdom, having all the powers and duties of a County Council, a District Council and a Parish. These are derived from the Local Government Act, 1972, and the Isles of Scilly Order 1978, all legislation being specifically applied to the Islands by Special Order. Education, Planning, Highways, Fire Service and Social Services are all administered by the Council and there are arrangements with Cornwall County Council for other services such as libraries. The Devon and Cornwall Police Authority, of which the Council is a Constituent Member, administers the Police. The Islands appoint one Member to sit on the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority and one Member to sit on the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Family Practitioner Committee; these bodies meet in Cornwall. The Isles of Scilly have their own separate Community Health Council which meets and is administered on St. Mary's. There are at present four Primary Schools in use on the Islands, a Comprehensive School on St. Mary's together with a Boarding Hostel for the children from the Off-Islands who reside during the week. Pupils transfer to mainland establishments for Sixth Form and other Further Education. St. Mary's and Tresco are served by water and sewerage systems and the island of Bryher has a mains water supply. There are 21 Councillors. The Islands form part of the St. Ives Electoral Division.

There are five inhabited islands within the area of the Council (St. Mary's, St. Agnes, Bryher, Tresco and St. Martin's), the whole of which has been designated as a Conservation Area, a Heritage Coast and as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The Islands attract substantial tourist traffic which contributes fundamentally to their economy. The local flora and fauna are considered by the Nature Conservancy Council to be of National Nature Reserve Status. The extreme south-westerly maritime environment supports a unique natural history with a number of species of plants, animals and birds which do not occur on the mainland and others which occur only rarely. The wild life and geographical features of the area are largely protected by the Isles of Scilly Environmental Trust, with help and advice of the NCC, who lease most of the untenanted land from the Duchy of Cornwall. A voluntary Isles of Scilly Marine Park has recently been constituted to protect the marine habitat. All the uninhabited islands and large areas of those which are inhabited are scheduled as sites of Special Scientific Interest and are treated as sanctuaries. There are restrictions on entry to some areas during breeding seasons of mammals and birds. On St. Mary's there is a small but distinguished Museum of Scillonian History and a commercial Interpretive Centre; a Maritime Museum featuring figureheads from locally wrecked vessels and elsewhere is situated on Tresco in the renowned sub-tropical Abbey Gardens.

Local government is facing unprecedented challenges as legislation introduces new demands, new relationships and new organisations.

To meet these challenges, more and more councils are implementing cost-effective and timely solutions based on departmental strategies.

Yet computer-based applications need to be more than hastily-constructed solutions to throw at problems. Above all, they need to understand local government - its concerns, its constraints, its structures. Only then do they address the real issues.

That's why Bluebird's approach is the answer. We combine professionalism, a reputation for quality and expertise with the experience of local councils and local government IT specialists Midsummer Computing, to form a consortium of complementary talents to produce the most appropriate solutions.

Add to that our position as a leading IBM Agent, our nationwide chain of offices, our support and back-up services. All together it spells solutions you can trust.

So talk to us about our AS/400 solutions for local authorities.

ADVISORY, CONCILIATION AND ARBITRATION SERVICE

27 Wilton St., London, SW1X 7AX (071-210 3000). Fax: 071-210 3708.

Chairman of the Council: Douglas B. Smith, CB.

Chief Conciliation Officer: D. G. Boyd, CBE.

The Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS) was set up on January 1, 1976 under the Employment Protection Act 1975 as an independent statutory body.

The service provides facilities for conciliation, mediation and arbitration as a means of avoiding and resolving industrial disputes; provides free advisory services to industry on industrial relations matters; provides advice and gives assistance on ways of improving the quality of working life along with efficiency (Work Research Unit); aims to promote the improvement of collective bargaining; and in certain circumstances offers conciliation between individuals and their employers.

The service is run by a Council consisting of the Chairman and employer, trade union and independent members.

In all its work, ACAS recognises that direct responsibility for the conduct of industrial relations rests with employers and employees and their representatives.

In particular, the Commissioners make Schemes and Orders to modernise the purposes and administrative machinery of charities and to confer additional powers on trustees. Dealings with property forming part of the permanent endowment of a charity or property which has at any time been occupied for the purposes of the charity are subject to the control of the Charity Commissioners and their consent or approval is required for the disposal of property held on charitable trusts by local authorities, unless the charity is an exempt charity within the meaning of the Charities Act 1960, or is otherwise excepted by order or regulations.

The Official Custodian for Charities holds investments for charities and remits the income, free of income tax, to trustees. EDUCATION AND SCIENCE, DEPARTMENT OF Elizabeth Hse., York Rd., London, SE1 7PH (071-934 9000; Fax 071-934 0945 Press Office; 071-934 9082 Committee Section; 071-934 9389 Science Branch; 071-934 0699 Private Office; Telex 23171).

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE DEPARTMENT

Education

The Department of Education and Science is responsible for all aspects of education in England and for Government policy towards universities in England, Scotland and Wales. Its responsibility is a general one. A distinctive feature of the British educational system is the considerable degree of decentralisation: the provision of the individual publicly maintained schools and further education establishments is the responsibility of local education authorities. In higher education the universities, polytechnics and colleges are independent institutions. Generally, the bulk of their public funding flows from the Universities Funding Council or the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council which were established under the Education Reform Act 1988 with responsibility for allocating between individual institutions funds provided for that purpose by Parliament. In addition, they received substantial public funds in the form of tuition fees for students with mandatory awards.

The DES, therefore, is almost wholly concerned with policy. It is responsible for: the broad allocation of educational resources, including grants in support of spending on specific areas of the education service; the rate general and distribution of educational building; the supply and training of all teachers in England, and the teachers' Superannuation Scheme, which covers teachers in England and Wales. The Department is concerned with educational standards and educational objectives, and develops policy on these, but it does not exercise direct control over either the content of education or teaching methods.

In administering resources for education and civil science the Department acts within a framework of estimates approved by Parliament (as do other Government departments). The money the Department spends itself is a small part of total public expenditure on education. The major part of capital and current educational spending is local authority expenditure, which, from 1 April, 1990, is largely financed from Community Charge, non-domestic rates, and revenue support grant received from the national Exchequer. Local education authorities (LEAs) can apply for central government grants in support of spending on specific areas of the education service, and some LEAs also receive grants under the URBAN Programme.

Science

The Department also has responsibilities in the field of civil science. It provides from its 'Science Budget' grants in aid to the five Research Councils, the Royal Society and the Fellowship of Engineering. The Councils undertake research in their own establishments, provide facilities for large scale national and international research, and make grants for research and postgraduate student support in institutions of higher education.

Allocations are also provided for the UK's subscription to international organisations, for science policy studies commissioned by the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and in support of the Centre for Exploration of Science and Technology (CEST).

Her Majesty's Inspectorate (HMI)

The primary function of Her Majesty's Inspectors is to advise the Secretary of State on the effectiveness of the educational system. All publicly maintained, grant-aided schools and independent schools, as well as colleges of further education, polytechnics and institutes of higher education, are open to inspection and may be reported on by HM Inspectors. Also open to inspection are adult education classes, whether provided by local authorities or the universities, and youth groups. HM Inspectors also inspect and report on teacher training provided by universities on invitation.

FORESTRY COMMISSION

231 Corstorphine Rd., Edinburgh, EH12 7AT (031-334 0303).

The Forestry Commissioners are charged with the general duty of promoting in Great Britain the interests of forestry, the development of afforestation, the production and supply of timber and, in discharging their functions, endeavouring to achieve a reasonable balance between the needs of forestry and conservation. The Commission manages some 900,000 hectares of productive forest and has a continuing policy of developing its forest for recreation by the general public. It is also the Forestry Authority for Great Britain with responsibility for research and for a range of regulatory functions, including the administration of grant-aid schemes for planting by private owners, the licensing of tree felling and the control of tree pests and diseases.

The Forestry Commission has for many years provided financial, professional and technical assistance to woodland owners and tenants for the rehabilitation of existing woods and the planting of new ones.

The Woodland Grant Scheme was introduced in April 1988 and is designed to encourage the continued expansion of private forestry in a way which achieves a reasonable balance with the needs of the environment. The aims of the Scheme are to increase timber production and to promote the contribution which new woodlands can make to rural employment, to the provision of alternative uses for agricultural land no longer needed for food production and to the enhancement of landscape, recreation and wildlife conservation. It is also designed to encourage restocking and rehabilitation of existing woodlands either by planting or by natural regeneration.

Area approved for planting or regeneration (ha)	Rate of Grant
	Conifer (£ per ha)	Broadleaved (£ per ha)
0.25-0.9	1,005	1,575
1.0-2.9	880	1,375
3.0-9.9	795	1,175
10 and over	615	975

Where planting has been undertaken the first instalment will be paid on completion of the planting and the second and third instalments at 5 yearly intervals thereafter, subject to satisfactory establishment and maintenance of the trees. In the case of natural regeneration, the first instalment will be paid on completion of approved work designed to encourage regeneration, the second instalment when an adequate stocking has been achieved (there will be no fixed time-limit for this) and the third instalment 5 years after, subject to satisfactory establishment and maintenance.

Applicants for grant aid will be required to undertake to enter into discussions if requested by the Local Authority, with a view, where appropriate, to negotiating an access agreement; this undertaking does not, however, bind the applicant to enter into any such agreement.

Under all grant aid schemes owners do not require a licence to comply with felling prescriptions in a Plan of Operations approved by the Forestry Commission. Likewise woodlands grant-aided under the schemes are not subject to the application of Tree Preservation Orders under the terms of the Town and Country Planning Acts except with the consent of the Forestry Commission.

The Forestry Commission is also responsible for the issue of licences to fell growing trees other than in woodlands covered by a current Plan of Operations as described above. Details of exemptions from felling licensing can be found by reference to Section 9 of the Forestry Act 1967 (as amended by the Forestry Act 1979 and the Forestry (Exceptions from Restriction of Felling) (Amendment) Regulations 1988 (SI 1988/970)), and the free leaflet (Control of Tree Felling').

A free leaflet entitled "Woodland Grant Scheme" and further information may be obtained from the regional Conservators of Forests or the Forestry Commission, 231 Corstorphine Rd., Edinburgh, EH12 7AT.

The Commission consists of a part-time Chairman, Raymond Johnstone and 4 full-time Commissioners. Of these, one is the Director-General, R. Cutler, D. S. Grundy, R. T. Bradley and D. L. Foot are in charge respectively of operations, private forestry and development and administration and finance, private forestry and development, and operations.

Additionally, there are 6 part-time Commissioners—I. D. Coutts, CBE, FCA; R. B. Hancock; T. Mallinson; J. D. Pollock, BSc, FEIS; F. M. Strang Steel and C. Woosnam, BA, FRICS.

LAND REGISTRY, HM

Headquarters Office: Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, WC2A 3PH (071-405 3488).

The registration of title to land was first introduced in England and Wales by the Land Registry Act 1862. Many changes have been made to the original system by subsequent legislation and HM Land Registry operates today under the Land Registration Acts 1925 to 1986. The object of registering title to land is for dealings with it to be made more safe, simple and therefore economical. This is achieved by maintaining a register of land owners whose title is guaranteed by the State and by providing simple forms enabling them to transfer, mortgage and otherwise deal with their registered titles. This simplification should keep the cost of dealing with registered land at a lower level than that for unregistered land. It is more economic to have specified areas of the country where registration of title is compulsory on sale and having first registration take place in those areas alone. Under the Land Registration Act 1966, the voluntary first registration of land in non-compulsory areas was severely curtailed in order to facilitate an accelerated extension of the compulsory system and the intention is that registration of title shall ultimately be universal throughout England and Wales. Over the years, voluntary registration in the non-compulsory areas has been common and it is still possible to register building estates, upon certain conditions, in any part of England or Wales.

HM Land Registry is administered under the Lord Chancellor by the Chief Land Registrar and the work is decentralized to a number of regional offices as specified below. The Chief Land Registrar is also responsible for the Land Charges Register under the Land Charges Act 1925 and for the Agricultural Credits Register under the Agricultural Credits Act 1928.

Polaris Hse., North Star Av., Swindon, Wilts SN2 1EU (0793 411500).

The Natural Environment Research Council was established by Royal Charter on 1st June 1965, under the Science and Technology Act of 1965. The task of the Council is to encourage, plan and execute research in those sciences, physical, geological and biological, that relate to man's natural environment and its resources. Such investigations seek to provide a better understanding not only of the nature and processes of the environment in which we live and on whose resources we depend, but also of their influence on man's activities and welfare and, of growing importance today, of man's influence on them.

The natural environmental sciences supported by the Council include geology, geophysics and geochemistry; physical oceanography, marine biology and fisheries; hydrology, freshwater biology and fisheries; terrestrial ecology; forestry; and atmospheric sciences.

The Council supports the environmental sciences in the universities and other establishments of higher education by awarding post-graduate training awards, research grants and fellowships.

The Council is financed by Grant-in-Aid from Parliament, received through the Department of Education and Science and by commissioned research from Government Departments and other agencies.

POPULATION CENSUSES AND SURVEYS, OFFICE OF

The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys was created by the merger in May 1970 of the General Register Office and the Government Social Survey Department.

The first Registrar General was appointed in 1836, and the General Register Office was established in 1837 when a comprehensive system of civil registration of births, marriages and deaths was instituted.

The Registrar General controls the local registration service in England and Wales in the exercise of its registration and marriage duties in accordance with the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953, the Registration Service Act 1953, the Marriage Acts 1949 to 1986, the Children Act 1975 and other relevant enactments.

Copies of the original registrations of births, still-births, marriages and deaths are kept in London. A register of adopted children is held at Titchfield. Central indexes are compiled annually and certified copies of entries may be obtained on payment of certain fees.

Since 1841 the Registrar General has been responsible for taking the census of population. He also prepares and publishes a wide range of statistics and appropriate commentary relating to population, fertility, births, still-births, marriages, deaths and cause of death, infectious diseases, sickness and injuries.

The Registrar General also maintains at Southport a central register of persons on doctors' lists, for the purposes of the National Health Service.

The Social Survey Division carries out survey research studies on behalf of Government departments concerned with social and economic problems. These are of two kinds: (a) continuing studies designed to provide serial statistical data for those concerns of Government which require them and (b) ad hoc studies designed to meet particular policy needs.

BRITISH POSTAL SERVICE

The Post Office handles more than 13,000 million letters and packets a year and is one of the few postal services in the world to offer delivery six days a week to virtually every address in the country.

Post Office Counters has a network of more than 20,000 post offices providing postal services and transactions on behalf of government departments, local authorities and other agency customers.

The service is a world leader in many fields. It has reinforced this position recently by introducing new technology on a large scale and by developing specialised services for customers.

Modernisation of the letter sorting system means that the work of several hundred former sorting centres has been taken over by 80 offices throughout the country using machines to sort the mail. The key to automatic sorting is the postcode, which allows the address to be converted into machine-readable language. Machines then sort mail at the rate of 16,000 items per hour.

In designing its specialised premium services, Royal Mail has put the emphasis on speed, reliability and security. These services include:

- Datapost—a guaranteed courier service, offering rapid delivery within or between more than 100 cities and towns in Britain (Datapost Sameday); overnight to any UK address (Datapost Overnight); and fast to countries overseas, including most of Europe and North America (Datapost International).

- Intelpost—copies of urgent business and personal documents can be handed in at selected post offices and transmitted electronically to inland and overseas destinations. The service now has an international network of more than 2,000 centres.
- Swiftair—an express service for letters to Europe and for air mail and printed papers to other countries. Available through post offices.

Royal Mail Parcelforce is the U.K.'s leading distribution carrier.

PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE

Ruskin Av., Kew, Richmond, Surrey, TW9 4DU (081-876 3444).

The Public Record Office is the national repository of records deriving from the actions of the central government and of the Law Courts of England and Wales. It contains many millions of documents spanning the period from Domesday Book (1086) to the present day. It was originally set up by an Act of Parliament in 1838 under the control of the Master of the Rolls. An Act of 1958 made the Lord Chancellor the minister responsible for public records with a permanent official, the Keeper of Public Records, as the administrative head of the Office.

The Keeper's prime responsibilities are to co-ordinate and supervise procedures for selecting records and transferring them to the Office, to see to their preservation after transfer and to make arrangements for their availability to the public. Under the Public Records Act 1967 records are normally opened to inspection when they are 30 years old.

The records are mainly divided between the original building in Chancery Lane and the new one at Kew. The Office also administers an intermediate repository at Hayes, Middlesex, where departments store records awaiting selection and transfer procedures.

The Office's reading rooms are open to the public from Monday to Friday between 9.30 am and 5 pm. The Museum, at Chancery Lane has displays of the most important documents illustrating the history of Britain from Domesday Book to the present day and is open 10 am–5 pm, Mondays to Fridays. The Office is closed on public holidays and the first two weeks in October.

Keeper: M. Roper.

Deputy Keeper: C. D. Chalmers.

Records Administration Officer: N. G. Cox.

Establishment Officer: J. A. Keene.

Royex Hse., Aldermanbury Sq., London, EC2V 7LR (071-606 7321).

The Public Works Loan Board was established in 1817. Since 1946 it has consisted of 12 unpaid Commissioners appointed by the Crown to hold office for 4 years; 3 Commissioners retire each year but may be re-appointed.

The main function is to make loans to local authorities and the Board has power to lend for any purpose for which the authorities have power to borrow. Loans are also occasionally made to harbour authorities.

Funds for loans are provided by Act of Parliament and are drawn from the National Loans Fund. Rates of interest on the Board's loans are determined by the Treasury.

During the year ended 31 March 1990 the Board made advances totalling £7,965.0 million to 583 local authorities. The amount of principal outstanding at 31 March 1990, including sums outstanding in respect of loans made in earlier years, was £46,561.3 million.

On 1 April 1980 the Board's office was amalgamated with the National Debt Office to form the National Investment and Loans Office, with the Board's Secretary as its first Director. The functions of the Board were not affected by the merger.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION

11 Cowley St., London, SW1P 3NA (071-276 6969; Fax 071-276 6940).

141 Castle St., Salisbury, SP1 3TP (0722 336255).

The Commission, a grant-in-aid body with executive powers, has two statutory functions: to advise the Government on the social and economic development of English rural areas and to assist such development. First set up in 1909 as the Development Commission, it merged in 1988 with its main agency CoSIRA to form the Rural Development Commission. The Commission is sponsored by the Department of the Environment. Currently its main activities are:

- (i) financing factory and workshop premises. The Commission meets the full cost of a programme managed by English Estates in its priority areas. It is also able to contribute 50% of the cost of local authority projects, both inside and outside its priority areas; and to make grants to the private sector for the conversion to employment use of redundant buildings in its priority areas.
- (ii) providing advice, training and financial services to small firms, to encourage them to start up and expand in the rural areas. This service is provided principally through the Commission's network of offices throughout rural England.
- (iii) promoting community development through the support of the voluntary sector. The Commission provides financial assistance to national and county-based bodies which encourage communities, largely through self-help, to improve the quality of life in rural areas.
- (iv) promoting the provision of low cost housing through support for rural housing associations, influencing the Housing Corporation, Local authorities and private developers to ensure that land is brought forward and schemes developed, and funding of demonstration projects.
- (v) influencing and offering advice on the rural aspects of policies of the Government, local authorities and other providers of services, to ensure proper account is taken of needs of, and impact on, rural areas.

The Commission's assistance is provided throughout rural England but is concentrated in the most needy areas which it designates as "Rural Development Areas".

SOCIAL SECURITY, DEPARTMENT OF

Richmond Hse., 79 Whitehall, London, SW1A 2NS (071-210 3000).

The Department is responsible for the central administration of social security in England, Wales and Scotland. It administers the scheme for Social Security benefits, Industrial Injuries benefits, Child benefits and War pensions.

The Child Benefit Act provides a tax free cash allowance which is payable for virtually all children under age 16 or aged 16, 17 & 18 and in full-time education up to and including A-level or equivalent standard, or in certain circumstances where a young person is awaiting a training course or a job.

War Pensions are payable in respect of disablement or death due to service in the Armed Forces. There are also schemes for members of the Merchant Navy, Naval Auxiliary Personnel, Civil defense volunteers and other civilians.

Generally speaking arrangements for National Insurance contributions cover everyone who is aged 16 or over and under pension age. Contributions are payable by; employed earners, persons who are gainfully employed under a contract of service or apprenticeship, or are office-holders and their employers, self-employed earners, persons who are gainfully employed but are not working under the control of an employer; non-employed persons who may pay voluntary contributions for a limited range of benefits. The right of a married woman and certain widows to make a fresh choice of reduced contribution liability has been abolished; but a woman who already has the right to pay at the reduced rate may continue to do so subject to certain conditions.

Contributory National Insurance Benefits are financed by contributions from individuals and employers. The rate of contributions payable and the benefits obtainable by a contributor depend on his category. The percentage national insurance contribution that is paid depends on whether or not the employee is a member of his employer's contracted-out occupational pension scheme which provides the employee's earnings related pension. Non-employed persons can have insurance cover for basic retirement pension and widow's benefits. Class III contributions do not give title to maternity benefits. Self-employed and employed earners are similarly covered but the self-employed can also qualify for state sickness benefit and maternity allowance. Most employed earners qualify for Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) or state sickness benefit, Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP) or State Maternity allowance, injury benefit and Unemployment benefit.

Employed earners are also insured against disablement caused by an accident or prescribed disease arising out of their employment. An employed earner is a person who is gainfully occupied under a contract of service or an office holder (e.g. a company director) with emoluments chargeable to income under Schedule E.

A severe disablement allowance is payable, subject to certain qualifying conditions, to persons of working age who are incapable of work but who do not have enough contributions to qualify for sickness or invalidity benefit. Persons who became incapable of work on or before their 20th birthday can qualify on that basis alone, everyone else must also be assessed as at least 80% disabled.

The Department administers reciprocal agreements relating to the provision of social security benefits for people going abroad or arriving from abroad and is responsible for liaison on social security matters with international organisations including the European Community, the Council of Europe, the International Labour Office, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development and the International Social Security Association.

A graduated retirement pension may be payable on account of contributions paid to the graduated pension scheme which ran from 1961-1975.

A non-contributory retirement pension may be payable to those over 80 who do not qualify for a basic contributory pension or do so at a low rate and who satisfy a simple residence condition.

Attendance Allowance is payable for adults and children who are so severely disabled that they require a lot of attention or supervision watching over by day or at night. Generally speaking, it is not payable for people in NHS hospitals, or certain other accommodation where a contribution towards the cost is made out of public funds. See leaflet DS2 for details.

Mobility allowance, a non-contributory non-taxable benefit, is available to disabled people between the ages of 5 and 66 who are unable or virtually unable to walk due to physical disablement and likely to remain so for at least twelve months. See leaflet NI 211 for details.

Invalid care allowance is a non-contributory benefit payable to people under pensionable age who spend at least 35 hrs each week caring for a severely disabled person who is receiving Attendance Allowance or Constant Attendance Allowance (at the normal maximum rate) with an industrial, war or service pension. See leaflet NI 212 for details.

In April 1988, Supplementary benefit was replaced by a new benefit called Income Support. Income Support the primary legislation for which is contained in the 1986 Social Security Act is based on broadly similar principals to weekly supplementary benefit. The main difference is that income support does not distinguish financially between householders and non-householders, and the long term rates of supplementary benefit, and the additional requirements awarded for special needs (such as extra heating) are replaced by a system of extra amounts of weekly income support, called premiums, for clearly specified groups. The detailed rules governing income support entitlement are closely aligned with the new rules for the housing benefit and family credit schemes which also come into effect.

The Social Fund may be able to help with exceptional expenses. It includes regulated Maternity, Funeral and Cold Weather Payments. Discretionary Community Care Grants and Budgeting and Crisis Loans are available from a local budget.

Family credit is a tax-free benefit for working families with at least one child under 16 (or under 19 if in full-time education up to and including A level standard or its equivalent) where the claimant or partner (the claim may be made by a couple or a lone parent) is working 24 hours or more per week. The amount payable depends on the income of the claimant and partner, their savings and on the number and ages of the children.

The Department maintains a network of about 500 Local Offices throughout Great Britain where claims to benefit should be made and advice can be obtained. Claims for unemployment benefit should be made at Unemployment Benefit Offices which are administered by the Department of Employment. Copies of leaflets dealing with various aspects of the Department's work can be obtained at local Social Security Offices, free of charge. General advice and information can be obtained free of charge using the Freeline Social Security telephone service which can be contacted on 0800 666555. This service is also available in Urdu on 0800 289188 and Punjabi on 0800 521360. The employer's advice line (SSALE) is on 0800 393539.

The Department, through the Resettlement Agency, provides temporary board and lodging at resettlement units for "persons without a settled way of life", and can make grants to voluntary and statutory organisations which maintain places for similar purposes.

Under the Polish Resettlement Act 1947 the Department provides accommodation for certain Poles and others associated with the wartime Polish Forces.

U.K. CONSTITUENCIES OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

The following list sets out the 51 United Kingdom constituencies in the European Parliament. The number is made up of 66 constituencies in England, 8 in Scotland and 4 in Wales (in all of which one member is elected by simple majority vote), and one constituency for the whole of Northern Ireland with three members elected by single transferable vote.
